House nears vote on Hatch change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders are ready to make a new effort this week to pass a controversial bill allowing government employees to participate in election campaigns.

But the measure, which has been endorsed by President Carter, faces a more hostile climate in the Senate.

The House planned action today on a bill authorizing the worldwide military construction program, and its Ways and Means committee was beginning an expected monthlong effort to deal with the tax portion of Carter's energy proposals, including the standby tax on gasoline and a new levy on gas-guzzling cars.

The Senate, returning today after a Memorial Day recess, takes up the Community Development Block Grant program to rehabilitate inner city slums and give housing assistance to the needy.

Then it turns to the Clean Air Act, already passed by the House, which sets controversial exhaust controls on cars.

The House push to amend the Hatch Act and permit federal employees to run for partisan office and work in political campaigns stalled three weeks ago when the House added an amendment banning use of labor union funds for campaigning.

The bill was pulled off the floor while work began on a new amendment designed to neutralize the anti-union move, sources said.

Leadership sources said enough

votes now have been promised to pass the new amendment, approve the bill and send it to the Senate.

However, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the bill's Senate manager, is said to be unenthusiastic about it. He has said he would bring it up only if the House passed it by a big enough margin to give it momentum and a chance of passage.

Republicans attack the measure as a return to the spoils system, while backers say it justly returns political rights to government workers.

Also this week, the House scheduled floor action Tuesday on a long-standing proposal authorizing $150 million over three years for federal aid to states which compensate innocent victims of crime.

Cooperation is stressed at MCC commencement

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss spoke to the Manchester Community College graduating class about the need to cooperate, and that's what the weather did through most of the Sunday afternoon ceremony.

The 13th commencement exercises by the town manager and the class valedictorian, and a cloud-filled, sometimes threatening sky. But, the rain held off except for a brief drizzle mid-way through the awarding of diplomas to the 740 graduates.

At the beginning of the ceremony, the class members, dressed in black caps and gowns, marched down the hill leading to the bandshell area, where the ceremony was held. The Manchester Pipe Band led the procession.

As the class marched in, many of those in the crowd of 2,500 drifted over to the roped-off area to get a close-up view of the professional.

Some of them shouted congratulations to a friend or family member in the line.

During the ceremony, the audience resembled a crowd at the beach. Most sat in lawn chairs or spread blankets on the hill. Two youngsters even brought along a portable chess set to provide entertainment during part of the afternoon.

Dr. Ronald H. Denison, MCC president, gave the opening remarks and asked for a round of applause for the school's faculty.

"I've never had the pleasure of working with such a fine staff of dedicated people," he said.

Heben Bradshaw, class valedictorian, spoke to her classmates about the importance of seeking to be an individual in a society that often asks us to conform.

"We must not shackle ourselves with worries about what others might think of us. Courage is needed to develop our own ideals," Mrs. Bradshaw, a South Windsor resident and mother of two, said.

She told her classmates that after they take off their identical, black robes, they must "respect, cherish and stand in awe" of their individual personalities.

"Dare to explore your own individuality. Dare to be you," she said.

Weiss urged the students to become involved and provide the type of cooperation that is essential in the running of a government like that of the Town of Manchester.

Collectors' Corner

Plaque honors Danziger

RUSS MacKENDRICK
Maurice Danziger, life member of the Manchester Philatelic Society, was pleasantly flabbergasted by the presentation of this plaque after the MANPEX.

The inscription — "For Continued Devotion To Youth in Philately" — was based on his 13 years of running a stamp collecting class at the Lutz Junior Museum. It is set up as a mini-course of six consecutive Saturdays; there would be three or four of these a year. Registration is limited to eight at a time because Danziger makes a point of individual attention to each budding collector.

Both boys and girls attend — ages are from the third grade and up.

The course begins with instruction in the use of stamp tongs, hinges, glassines, stockbooks and so forth. Each youngster gets a free packet of stamps for a starter. (The museum makes a nominal charge to cover the supplies used.)

There is a brief survey of the worldwide stamp scene and later they concentrate more on the United States issues. The Harris catalog is used as a sort of textbook as it is inexpensive and gives Scott numbers and good pictures of U.S. and Canadian stamps.

The class learns that CTOs (canceled-to-order stamps) and the sheikhdom issues are not desirable, and they are advised as to which of the foreign nations are the best to look for.

Another aspect of Danziger's work — his effective moral suasion results in a steady supply of material from MPS members for the Lutz program. He was formerly an inspector at P&W Aircraft, retiring in 1959.

"Linn's Stamp News" for May 30 is their First Day Cover issue. Here they tell of the very first "cacheted" cover which was contrived by George W. Linn himself and dates from September 1, 1923.

The cachet was simply three lines of type at the lower left of the envelope to memorialize Warren G. Harding. The stamp was the flat plate printing, perf 11, Scott N. 610. (The rotary press issue, No. 613, that is cataloged at $7,000, came later — someone found one of these in a grab lot recently. Measure the design; if it is 22 3/4ths mm high instead of 22 1/4, then you have the good one.)

The real upsurge of FDCs was for the Washington Bicentennial in 1932. There was a total of 1,100,000 covers! Thirty-five different kinds of cachets for this issue have been cataloged. They had come a long way from the three lines of type and were more like the fancy pictorials we have today.

Page 52 of the same paper suggests that we make our own cachets with linoleum block carvings. Now that we can stamp the envelopes ourselves and send them in for an after-the-fact first day cancellation, the idea seems good. Make up your own design and ink it onto a batch of envelopes, apply the new stamps with care, and get some personal dated artwork for posterity.

The "bible" of FDCs is the four-volume "Photo Encyclopedia of Cacheted FDCs" (with current market values) by Prof. Earl Planty. Further info on this from Barry Newton, Box F-67, Akron, Ohio 44308. (Please enclose a self-addressed stamped envelope.)

Mrs. Edward Siskin of Gales Ferry, Conn., has just been elected president of the American FDC Society. She calls our attention to the service of the Society: Awards, cachet notices, chapter club coordination, expertising, research, notices of new issues, literature awards, slide programs and sales and translation departments. Also they publish a monthly magazine — "First Days."

For an application blank, write AFDCS, 14359 Chadbourne St., Houston, Tex. 77079. (Again — send an SASE.)

Coming events
Gerry Gerath's First Sunday Stamp Bourse tomorrow at the usual place — Ramada Inn, East Hartford. The Central Connecticut Coin Club will meet at the K. of C. Hall on Tuesday, June 7, 7:30 p.m. They will then close up shop until September.

CBers face bigger fines

By INK DIPPER
Uncle Charlie, the name CBers have given the Federal Communications Commission) has stiffened the penalties for breaking CB regulations.

Specifically, the FCC has increased the fines for three practices: operating on non-CB frequencies, running more than the legal amount of power and talking over distances greater than 150 miles.

A few CBers go over the legal four watts of output power, using illegal linear amplifiers or amateur (ham) radio equipment. The extra power drowns out other CBers who are operating within the legal limit, and the boosted signals also "bleed over" to nearby CB frequencies and even interfere with television reception and other communication services.

Many of these CBers operating with extra power use an atmospheric condition known as skip to talk over the maximum distance. CBers normally have a range of about 20 miles in open country, but with skip a CBER — even with legal power — can communicate with people thousands of miles away.

Skip is caused by radio waves bouncing off the earth's ionosphere, a layer in the atmosphere that sometimes becomes reflective when there's extra electrical energy. The condition can be caused by weather changes, seasonal shifting of the earth or sunspots.

CBers who are caught by the FCC for violations can expect to pay up to $100 for each over-power or off-frequency violation and up to $75 for each skip violation. The fines were $50 maximum for each violation.

The shift to remote CB units continues, and it's sure to head off many thefts of mobile units. The remote unit is a two-piece CB, with the controls and microphone mounted in or under the dash board and the actual electronic parts in another unit in the trunk or under a seat. The two pieces are connected by wires.

At least three manufacturers,

Midland, Texas Instruments and Hy-Gain, have announced new remote lines. A new trend in the remote units is to use computer technology to add pushbutton controls, digital readout and digital clocks.

The remote CBs are virtually theft proof because the main part of the radio is locked in the trunk. In addition, some of the units have combined the microphone, speaker and controls into one hand-held package that can be unplugged and locked in the glove compartment.

The comparison to a computer doesn't end with the buttons and digital displays. Manufacturers are using an increasing amount of computer-related innovations which shrink the size of the radio and at the same time make it more rugged and efficient. The integrated circuits (IC), an electronic circuit manufactured as a single, tiny component, has moved into the CB and will be the biggest thing to happen to the citizens band since the transistor.

Workers win pay raise

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

A state-appointed arbitration panel has granted a pay hike requested by the union representing employees of the Town of Manchester's Public Works Department but has decided against a union request to continue having two workers in each town snow plow.

The panel's decision, received this morning by town officials, grants the union — the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 991 — a five per cent pay hike retroactive to July 1, 1976 and a six per cent raise beginning July 1, 1977.

This approved salary scale had been presented by the union in its final contract proposal. The town had sought a four per cent hike in each year of the two-year contract.

But, the salary issue was the only one of six items that the three-member panel decided in favor of the union.

The panel agreed with the town's proposal that the second worker in the snow plow — known as the "shotgun rider" — be eliminated. The town, however, will pay the single worker in each snow plow a 20-cent per hour pay hike. "Lack-on" allowance because of the elimination of the second worker.

If two workers are assigned to a truck, there will be no "lack-on" allowance.

The three arbitrators for the case were Joseph Bogdan, who was selected by the town; Dominic J.

Woman is killed in a collision

EAST HARTFORD — Barbara Capano, 23, of 140 Fenney Dr., East Hartford died Sunday after a motorcycle-auto collision near the Marco Polo Restaurant on Burnside Ave.

She was a passenger on the motorcycle driven by Dennis Chokas, 29, of 140 Silver Lane, East Hartford police said. The driver of another motorcycle in the accident was Gary Chokas, 20, of Diane Dr., Manchester. Both drivers suffered serious injuries, police said.

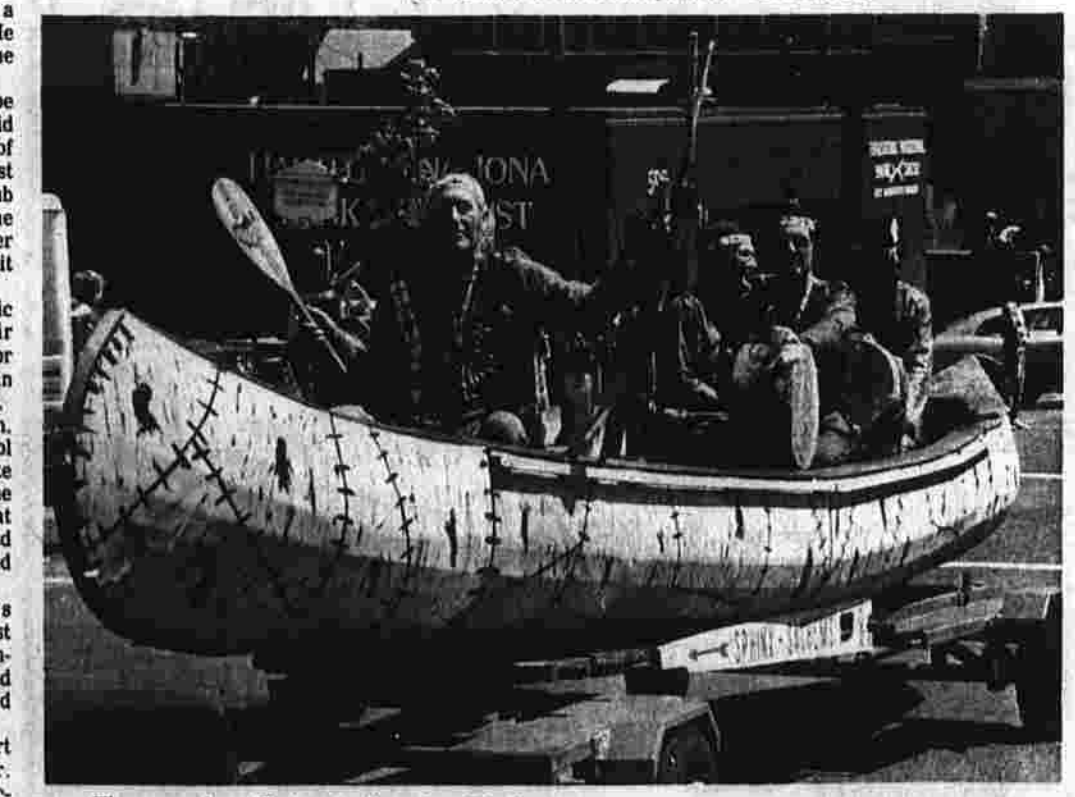

The Chokas brothers both received emergency aid at the scene from East Hartford paramedics Daniel Florida and John Marshall. They were taken to Hartford Hospital for extensive surgery.

A hospital spokesman said late this morning both brothers were still in "guarded" condition.

Police are still investigating the accident and released few details of it. However, police said the accident apparently began when the car driven east on Burnside Ave. in front of a Chevron service station by Michael S. Hawley, 20, of 98 Janet Dr., East Hartford crossed the center line.

The Hawley car then collided with the two motorcycles driven by the Chokas brothers, police said.

No arrests had been made as of late morning.

Opinion

Wage raise raises problem

The federal government, it is often urged, should be the nation's "employer of last resort" - charged with the responsibility of providing jobs and income for those Americans unable to find employment on their own.

If anybody can be called the "employer of first resort," it has to be the foodservice (restaurant) industry, whose 550,000 independent operators employ more than 8 million people in full-time and part-time capacities, many of them younger or unskilled workers in entry-level positions - busboys, waitresses, etc.

For example, while teenagers make up only 10 per cent of the nation's workforce, they constitute a third of the foodservice workforce. Unfortunately, a piece of legislation being considered by the employer of last resort could seriously and adversely affect the role of the employer of first resort.

First, the bill calls for an increase in the federal minimum wage from $2.30 to $2.85 an hour - a 24 per cent advance - within 30 days of enactment. This would peg the minimum wage at 55 per cent of the $5.19 average wage (including over-time) in manufacturing.

Second, beginning in January 1978 and each January after that, the minimum wage would be "indexed" to 60 per cent of the manufacturing wage average, meaning another increase of 16 to 19 per cent next January.

With the indexing provision, wages in the labor-intensive foodservice industry, with its low productivity per worker, would be permanently tied to wages in highly productive industries.

At a time when the United States is combating both high inflation and unemployment rates - the latter an unacceptable 19 per cent - for teenagers overall and 37 per cent for minority youths - H.R. 3744, says its critics, would add to both.

little hope of raising productivity. Third, H.R. 3744 would eliminate the tip credit, which enables restaurant management to pay less than the minimum wage to employees who receive tips. Currently, if an employee earns tips equal to at least half the minimum wage, these tips are considered part of his or her income and the employer pays the remaining 50 per cent in actual wages.

This system ensures total income to every worker at least equal to the minimum wage. In practice, the 31 per cent of foodservice workers who are tipped earn about 61 per cent more than their nontipped coworkers.

If the tip credit is repealed, employers would immediately face more than a doubling in labor costs for tipped employees - that is, loss of the present $1.15 credit plus the 24 per cent increase over the current minimum wage.

The university maintenance crews were convinced that the improvement was designed to expedite their movement of heavy equipment, while legislators thought it was to facilitate their travel with baby carriages.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimates that passage of H.R. 3744 would cause nationwide employment opportunities in all industries to be reduced by 2.7 million jobs.

At a time when the United States is combating both high inflation and unemployment rates - the latter an unacceptable 19 per cent - for teenagers overall and 37 per cent for minority youths - H.R. 3744, says its critics, would add to both.

Cancer volunteer solicits help

To the editor: May I please use the Open Forum to remind any folk who have inadvertently forgotten to pass along to their neighbor the Cancer Society donation "kit," to please see that it is returned to the volunteer whose name is on the outside of the envelope?

I have been a volunteer in the past, with success, but this year someone between my address, 98 W. Middle Tpke., and 140 W. Middle Tpke., has apparently held up the envelope. There must be others in town with the same problem. I have had two notices from the campaign folks as it was to have been ended the end of April.

I hope the right person reads this and that I soon find the envelope in my mailbox. Thank you for myself and for the American Cancer Society.

'Reformers' try to sell us a gold brick

Andrew Tully

WASHINGTON - Talk about malarkey. All that wringing of hands by Congressional "reformers" pining for repeal of the Hatch Act is just another attempt to sell the plain citizen the gold brick.

These self-styled freedom fighters would open the gates to more corruption by making it possible for the party in power - Democratic or Republican - and Big Labor to organize 2.8 million federal workers for political profit. They want a return to the good old crooked days when a federal worker could be fired, denied promotion and otherwise browbeaten by his superior into tooting the partisan line.

Stench of 1938 The Hatch Act was passed in 1938.

Everyone gains

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

(Last of two related columns) WASHINGTON (UPI) - Something very unexpected occurred at the University of Illinois after the installation of "curb cuts," those sidewalk "ramps" in the form of indentations at corners which make the walkway level with the street.

The curb cuts were constructed specifically to allow disabled students in wheelchairs to cross the street without difficulty or assistance, but the non-handicapped had some very different ideas of their own about the utility of the innovation.

Timothy J. Nugent, Director of Rehabilitation Education at the university, made an informal survey and found that bicyclists thought the curb cuts were designed to allow them to cross streets without dismounting, while parents of infants were equally sure the indentations were to facilitate their travel with baby carriages.

The university maintenance crews were convinced that the improvement was designed to expedite their movement of heavy equipment, while legislators thought it was to facilitate their travel with baby carriages.

It is a totally new design called Transbus, approved only recently by Brock Adams, secretary of the Department of Transportation (DOT). Adams has the power to make his choice stick because the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, a component of DOT, provides 80 per cent of the purchase price of the thousands of new buses purchased annually in cities across the country.

Key features For the disabled, the key features of the Transbus are its low floor, wide door and a retractable ramp, all sublime music and art are architecture, poetry and song - the haunting, lofty, spine-tingling creations of a legion of artists must be included here - all illustrations of the great impact of the stories religion brings to us.

These artistic expressions reach into and touch the mystery and paradox at the core of being. And that there can be unbelievably beautiful responses to the incredible mysteries is perhaps the most important thing of all to say about religion.

Arnold F. Westwood Unitarian Universalist Society: East

worker's job is protected against political pressure. He needn't risk telling a superior or a union boss that he disagrees with a certain political position. He can say, simply, "Sorry, but I'm Hatched."

Rights claimed Labor unions, some civil rights groups and the American Civil Liberties Union support repeal of Hatch. They claim the law prevents federal employees from exercising a "fundamental democratic right."

Meanwhile, there is reason to question the parity of Big Labor's motives. During House debate a bipartisan majority added to the repeal bill an amendment which would prohibit unions from coercing the political activity of their members and from using members' dues for political purposes.

Fortwith, Big Labor's lobbyists got the bill temporarily withdrawn until its supporters could regroup. Any more questions?

But there are numerous other beneficiaries as well, beginning with the more than 22.6 million people who are 65 years of age or older. Almost 7 million of the elderly have infirmities which either preclude them from riding the current high-floor bus or make it dangerous for them to negotiate the steep steps.

More riders In addition, a study conducted last year for DOT predicted that the technical and aesthetic improvements should increase ridership 10 per cent, not counting the handicapped or elderly.

The wide door is designed for wheelchairs, but it also will allow boarding time to be halved, thus reducing total trip time by 10 per cent, according to the study.

Better ride Ride quality should approach that of passenger cars, with noise and vibration reduced 70 per cent from the current levels. Accidents should be cut by about 25 per cent.

Because the country's three manufacturers of buses need time to develop and tool up for the new vehicle, Adams' decision will be applicable only to those buses ordered after September 1979 and the first vehicles probably won't be delivered until early 1981.

But Adams says that "if one manufacturer substantially beats the effective date of the mandate," he will consider authorizing all purchases only from that company "to get the Transbus onto the streets as soon as it is available."

My souvenir? A printed copy of the celebration. There were only 100 copies printed, and I have one of them. It was a gift, presented to me in London ten days ago.

George and I had presented it to us when we dined in London. George is now retired from the Grenadier Guards Band where he was his sergeant-major. He is employed at Whitehall.

That souvenir will be placed in a frame, glass on both sides, so the six-page program can be seen. It will become a collector's item, you can be sure.

I have my souvenir of the Queen's Jubilee in England already, and there aren't many of them around.

Our master of ceremonies that evening was Bryn Williams, considered one of the finest in London. In fact, he is pretty much on a first-name basis with the Royal Family.

It was strictly British pomp and circumstance when he introduced, "Her Majesty's Royal Artillery Marching Band!"

We had a 15-minute visit with someone who remembers Manchester very well - Len Hall, whose brother, Bill, lives at 216 Fern St.

CofC reaffirms support for new industrial park

At a recent meeting of its Board of Directors, the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce reaffirmed its support for the proposed town developed industrial park which is slated to have a major J.C. Penney Company distribution warehouse as a primary tenant.

The Chamber, by taking this latest move, wishes to demonstrate its continuing faith in the Manchester Economic Development Commission's efforts, particularly in light of the careful, orderly planning that has accompanied this project from its inception, said James Breitfield, executive vice-president of the Chamber.

The Chamber shares with all Manchester residents a concern about random, unplanned growth in our area, Breitfield said. However, the intense planning and the overriding concern for environmental and safety issues have led the Chamber to recognize the industrial park as an ideal planned growth program.

Breitfield noted that the proposed benefits of the industrial park remain unchanged with over 3,000 jobs, increased taxable grand list, preservation of property values, improvement of public utilities, and enhancement of controlled industrial development.

In addition as part of an ongoing information program, anyone with unresolved questions concerning the park is invited to contact the Chamber at 257 E. Center St.

River race films Tuesday

Films and slides of the recent Hockanum River Race will be shown Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Woodruff Hall of Center Congregational Church.

Cooperation stressed

Continued from Page One — do this. You can make the difference between a good society and a mediocre society," he said.

He said that local government is what affects people the most and where, in turn, they can also have the most effect. He said that Manchester Community College was first started because of the ideas and efforts of a few people.

"The fact that a few people believed in something innovative and worked at it meant that you now have the community college. The very existence of the college symbolizes cooperation," Weiss said.

MCC offering PR workshop

The Division of Community Services at Manchester Community College is offering a public relations workshop during the 1977 summer session. It is intended for individuals who are responsible for publicity and public relations in clubs, civil organizations, associations and small businesses.

The course will emphasize how to gain a working knowledge of communications media. It is geared for amateurs and not for those who are intended to be professionals in the field. The instructor will be Carroll Madson, director of the Office of College and Community Relations at Manchester Community College.

The course starts June 16 and meets on Thursday evenings, 8-10 p.m. For information on how to register, please contact the Community Services Division, 646-2127.

MAA art-crafts show slated for Sunday

The Manchester Art Association will present its fourth annual outdoor arts and crafts show, sale and exhibit Sunday, June 12, at Center Park from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Rain date is Sunday, June 19.

Artists and craftsmen from Connecticut and surrounding states are expected to display their works. On display will be jewelry, batik, pottery, dolls, hand-made ties, wall hangings, woodworking, green gliding, stained glass, leather goods, enamels, lapidary, quilting, rugs, pillows, lawn ornaments, candles, Christmas ornaments, sculpture, and paintings.

Judges for the exhibit are Adele Briotman of Bloomfield, a teacher at Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, and Robert Deale of Hartford, professor at the University of Hartford.

The Manchester Art Association will present a cash award for Best of Show and first prize for crafts.

Special awards for Manchester Art Association members will be the Stuart Cheney Award and the Walter Van Arsdale Award.

Other awards will be given by Manchester area merchants.

Manchester police report

George L. Dziato, 42, of 9 Earl St., received minor facial and scalp injuries Saturday after his car ran off the road on Olcott St. and struck a utility pole. He was charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor. He was processed after treatment at Manchester Memorial Hospital and released on a non-surety bond for court June 21.

William J. Orbach, 20, of no certain address, was charged with third-degree criminal trespass and released for court June 27.

Walter L. Little, 28, of Hartford, was charged on a warrant with conspiracy to commit third-degree larceny. He was presented in court Friday on the charge.

Police charged 16 persons with motor vehicle violations Saturday and 23 persons on Sunday.

Paul S. Yale, 20, of 446 W. Middle Tpk., and Thomas J. Shaha, 21, of 147 Spruce St., were each charged with breach of peace in connection with a disturbance at East Eaton Donuts 150 Center St. early Sunday. Police said the two men fell against and broke a plate glass window while fighting in the parking lot of the shop. Yale was treated for a cut on the neck at Manchester Memorial Hospital. Both were released on $150 non-surety bonds for court appearances June 20.

Barbara J. Bodo, 41, and George A. Clough, 35, both of 5 Ford St., were charged with breach of peace Saturday in connection with a disturbance at the same address. They were processed and released for court June 20.

Comment session slated

The Manchester Board of Directors will conduct a public comment session Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the directors office in the Municipal Building.

The session permits comments and suggestions from the public about matters affecting the town.

Bottle bill killed

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Connecticut legislature has finally put the bottle bill to rest for the year, and now the Senate must decide if the proposal touted all session as an alternative to it is worth enacting.

The House of Representatives in an unusual Saturday session killed the controversial plan to ban throwaway bottles and then passed a measure to tax business for the cost of anti-litter campaigns.

That proposal was backed by many of the bottle bill's bitterest enemies, who quietly pushed it through the legislative process as an alternative to the bottle bill.

It now goes to the Senate, where it faces an uncertain reception and a fast-approaching Wednesday adjournment deadline.

"I'm optimistic that they (the Senate) would like to have something rather than nothing at all and this (the anti-litter bill) is all we have," said Rep. Andrew Grande, D-Bristol, who led the anti-litter bill forces.

It would tax businesses who contribute to the litter problem — such as bottlers, food stores and makers of paper goods — .015 per cent of the value of gross sales of products related to litter.

Estimates are it will raise about $1 million, part of it going to pay for cleanup squads.

But opponents of the bill said the tax would mean higher consumer prices. Rep. William Collins, D-Norwalk, called it an "administrative disaster."

The Department of Environmental Protection would be required to create an anti-litter office to encourage cleanup programs.

Petitioners seek improvements for Nathan Hale playground

A group of concerned parents and residents of the Nathan Hale School district will present a petition to the Board of Directors Tuesday night, noting the unsafe conditions and the need for repair of the school playground.

A request by the Manchester Conservation Commission and the Advisory Park and Recreation Commission for improvements on the playground will also be submitted to the directors Tuesday.

Mrs. Joan Sevino of 68 Birch St. and Mrs. Pat Lopacchio of 64 Birch St. have collected over 125 signatures of residents in the immediate neighborhood of the school on Birch, Bissell, Cottage, Oak and Maple Sts.

There are over 100 children among those who have signed the petition. Mrs. Sevino said the playground has been in poor condition for a long time, despite the fact the inside of the school building underwent extensive renovations and new addition completed in 1972.

Many parents of toddlers would use the playground, but have found it unsafe, Mrs. Sevino said.

Some of the unsafe conditions cited by the petitioners are broken up asphalt, holes near playground swings and equipment, piles of dirt which have been left by workers and extensive dust and dirt, due to lack of grass, which affects all the homes in the neighborhood.

Nathan Hale School, which is located on Spruce St., has one of the largest school populations of 521 students but one of the smallest playgrounds with little more than an acre. It does not meet state requirements, according to school principal, Leo Diana.

Diana told the conservation commission last month of the problems on the playground and his proposals for improvements. He said the playground improvements may be eligible for federal funding because it is also used extensively by the community in off-school hours and during the summer.

Mrs. Teresa Paris, chairman of the Conservation Commission, said the two commissioners will ask the board to consider the use of Community development funds to pay for the improvements to the playground.

The funds would not be available until next year, she said.

The Board of Education allocated $6,000 for the playground in next year's budget, School Supt. James P. Kennedy said that amount would cover some of the initial work, however, the estimated cost of the entire project is $20,000 and $25,000.

The playground does not have a basketball court or softball field, which are two of the proposed improvements. Other proposals include providing an area for large group games, installing an underground sprinkler system, covering the existing blacktop, grading the court to existing catch basins and installing curbing to direct the water flow.

He said he understood at that time that the parking restriction would be up to the town's parking authority, who is also the police chief.

Foley said he never have signed his right-of-way waiver to allow the work if he had been aware of the parking restriction.

Town officials to seek easing of parking ban

Town officials decided this morning to request a meeting with state highway department officials to ask if they will agree to a partial parking ban on W. Middle Tpke. rather than the complete ban which residents of the township have requested.

Town Manager Robert E. Weiss met with Police Chief Robert D. Lannan to review the situation on the newly reconstructed street.

A petition signed by about 70 residents was presented to the two officials stating their opposition to the new four lanes and the "no parking" signs posted last week.

The residents claim that they were not aware the parking would be restricted when they were told of the highway plans at a hearing on Oct. 3, 1974. They claim they do not have enough parking for relatives and visitors.

Lannan and Weiss said today they will request the original plans for the road improvements show the four lanes and the parking restrictions on both sides of the street.

Lannan said the purpose of the new construction was to improve the traffic flow.

Foley questioned the manner in which the residents were informed at the original hearing. He said the town officials were evasive with their answers regarding the parking and four-lane questions.

He said he understood at that time that the parking restriction would be up to the town's parking authority, who is also the police chief.

Foley said he never have signed his right-of-way waiver to allow the work if he had been aware of the parking restriction.

Area police report

Vernon
Alfred E. Gardner, 20, of 33 Ward St., Rockville, was charged Saturday with disorderly conduct, interfering with a police officer, reckless driving and carrying a dangerous weapon.

Police Officer Gary Pfeifer, while on patrol, was assigned to check an accident involving a man at the scene who was carrying a gun.

Pfeifer said he was confronted by a man who had a knife pointed at him (Pfeifer). Police said Gardner was taken into custody and it was found the rifle was loaded. He was held at the police station in lieu of a $20,000 bond. He was to be presented in court today.

Rodney Gray, 4, of Patridge Lane, Tolland, was struck by a Union St. Saturday afternoon when he ran from in front of a parked car. The child was treated and released at Rockville General Hospital.

The accident is still under investigation. The driver of the car was Dong Doh Dang, 29, of 4 Gaynor Pl., Rockville.

A water Study Committee, appointed by the Board of Directors, is reviewing a report on improving water treatment in Manchester. The town has also authorized a similar study on improving water distribution.

Town given exemption

The State Department of Health has granted the Town of Manchester an exemption for meeting new water drinking standards that go into effect this month.

Douglas S. Lloyd, state health commissioner, sent a letter to Frank T. Jodanis, Manchester's water and sewer administrator, that said the town has been granted the exemption for three categories - turbidity (cloudiness), color, and odor.

The federal safe drinking water act, which sets upgraded standards for water supplies, goes into effect this month. The town will not be able to meet the new standards and had to apply for the exemption.

Lloyd said that, within a year, the state will prepare a timetable for when it should take Manchester to begin meeting "interim control measures."

A water Study Committee, appointed by the Board of Directors, is reviewing a report on improving water treatment in Manchester. The town has also authorized a similar study on improving water distribution.

STOP

LISTEN
Attend a public hearing June 7, at 7:30 P.M., at Coventry High School.

SPEAK OUT
Give the Sewer Authority and council your thoughts and opinions.

The following conclusions were reached as the result of the investigation of the existing conditions in the Town of Coventry and by the evaluation of the numerous alternatives available to satisfy the Town's public health needs. The Coventry Sewer Authority recommended that a sewer system be constructed after concluding that there is no one item, taken alone, that justifies sewers; but that there are a multitude of considerations that when taken together justifies this action.

1. There is a long history of septic system failures around Coventry Lake.
2. The combination of a high groundwater table, poor soil percolation and small lots in the Coventry Lake Area makes a permanent solution using septic tanks and leaching fields unlikely.
3. There currently exists more than 800 homes around Coventry Lake on lots smaller than 15,000 square feet. This is the minimum practical lot size for on-site disposal using a conventional septic tank and leaching field.
4. It is anticipated that eventually most of these homes will have septic system problems that cannot be reliably solved with conventional septic tank leaching systems.
5. Several non-discharge toilet concepts were studied and found acceptable from a public health point of view. These are not currently approved by the Connecticut Department of Health. It is also believed that the general public would have aesthetic objections to these systems at this time and that their widespread use would lead to a reduction in property values.
6. The widespread use of holding tanks was considered and discarded because the Connecticut Department of Health will not approve their community-wide use because of a conviction that they use results in drastically reduced water consumption, and therefore, poor sanitary conditions. Holding tanks are expensive to install and maintain.
7. Town acquisition of houses, with systems that cannot be fixed with a conventional leaching field, was considered and rejected because the Town does not have the statutory authority to condemn owner-occupied housing and a belief that the Town has neither the financial resources nor desire to implement this kind of plan. A voluntary acquisition program was not considered workable.
8. Other neighborhood solutions including an underdrain system and a neighborhood sewer system were considered and found unfeasible.
9. The Coventry Sewer Authority decided to recommend construction of a sewer system after concluding that there is not a viable on-site or neighborhood waste disposal approach that can be reliably applied to the many small lots in the Lake Area.

Budget referendum today

Voter turnout was light this morning in Bolton's referendum on the 1977-78 budget.

As of 10:30 a.m., just 110 persons had voted at the Community Hall. Voters may either accept or reject the $2.2 million spending plan today.

The 110 persons represented about five per cent of the town's 2,194 registered voters.

The $2,205,276 budget plan would require $1,414,776 for education and $790,502 for general government.

The budget was rejected at a May 16 Town Meeting and the same budget was resubmitted to a May 23 Town Meeting, but it wasn't acted on then. A group of petitioners forced the budget decision to referendum.

There is no clear indication of what the outcome of today's vote will be. Town officials are split in their opinions on the budget.

For the most part, finance board members and town political chairmen are urging approval of the budget. School officials are urging rejection.

The polls are open until 8 p.m. at the Community Hall. The finance board will meet after the referendum to set a tax rate if the budget is approved or to submit a new proposal if it is rejected.

Budget referendum today

Voter turnout was light this morning in Bolton's referendum on the 1977-78 budget.

As of 10:30 a.m., just 110 persons had voted at the Community Hall. Voters may either accept or reject the $2.2 million spending plan today.

The 110 persons represented about five per cent of the town's 2,194 registered voters.

The $2,205,276 budget plan would require $1,414,776 for education and $790,502 for general government.

The budget was rejected at a May 16 Town Meeting and the same budget was resubmitted to a May 23 Town Meeting, but it wasn't acted on then. A group of petitioners forced the budget decision to referendum.

There is no clear indication of what the outcome of today's vote will be. Town officials are split in their opinions on the budget.

For the most part, finance board members and town political chairmen are urging approval of the budget. School officials are urging rejection.

The polls are open until 8 p.m. at the Community Hall. The finance board will meet after the referendum to set a tax rate if the budget is approved or to submit a new proposal if it is rejected.

South Windsor stays with council-manager

South Windsor remains under the council-manager form of government this week following an overwhelming defeat of the proposal to change to strong mayor government.

Saturday's referendum brought out only about 17 per cent of the eligible voters, who defeated the proposed change by a vote of 1,204 to 515.

The charter revision proposal would have eliminated the position of town manager and put the town under the jurisdiction of a paid, elected mayor.

The proposed change caused a great deal of controversy since it changed the form of government to be "a terrible step backwards for the town."

The district vote was as follows: District 1, 208 to 87; District 2, 187 to 88; District 3, 445 to 100; District 4, 374 to 44.

Between the resignation of Sprekel and the hiring of Town Manager Paul Tabot.

Both the Republican and Democratic Town Committees, as well as the League of Women Voters, came out against a change to strong mayor.

Most town officials felt to change the form of government would be "a terrible step backwards for the town."

Bulletin board

A Monte Carlo Night will be held Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Wapping School. The evening will be sponsored by the South Windsor Democratic Women's Club. It will include prizes and refreshments. All are invited and welcome.

The South Windsor Friends for Music will hold its annual meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the high school library. Officers will be elected for the coming year. All parents of music students are invited to attend.

Town directory is ready

South Windsor The 1977 edition of the South Windsor telephone directory has been published by the Chamber of Commerce and will be distributed to every home and business Wednesday.

"This is our best telephone directory of the three we have published," said chamber President Paul Loughearts, "and are pleased to place one with every resident and business as a community service."

The book, published every other year by the chamber, contains 64 pages of local telephone numbers and has considerable advertising by local businesses.

Often-called numbers of town services are highlighted in the book, which sports a bright yellow cover. Much of the information was provided by the South Windsor Community Service Council.

The centerfold contains a map of the town, including a coded street key system.

School officers set

Bolton Alison Boushous has been elected president of the Children's Cooperative Nursery School for 1977-78. Other officers named are Sharon Raymond, administrative vice-president; Patricia Westline, membership vice-president; Roberta Klink, treasurer, and Elsy Petzold, secretary.

The school is located at the St. Maurice Church Parish Center. Teachers are Betsy Roberts, Jennifer Daly and Patricia Putnam.

The school has a two-day session for three-year-olds and a three-day session for four-year-olds. There are some openings. To learn more, call Beverly Owen, 742-8065.

Chamber offering booklet on fairs

The Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce has available several hundred copies of the 1977 Handbook of Connecticut Fairs.
The 20-page booklet, produced by the Connecticut Department of Agriculture, offers listings of over 50 agricultural fairs scheduled in the state in 1977, covering a three-month season from early July to mid-October. The fairs include Grange fairs, town and county fairs and 4-H fairs.
The information includes dates, admission costs, schedule of events and exhibits and locations of the fairs.
The Chamber is offering the booklet to area residents in recognition of the valuable contribution of farmers in the state.

Copies may be picked up at the Chamber office, 257 E. Center St., or will be mailed upon receipt of a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Firm handling oil investment

Main Street Management, financial planning firm in Rocky Hill, recently held a luncheon meeting at Willie's Restaurant in Manchester to recommend a new energy investment program for potential investors.
The program is not a tax shelter since it does not drilling, but tax deductions.
Frank N. Carpene, regional vice-president for PetroLewis Oil Income Program, explained the program. Vic Della Fera served as local representative for the PetroLewis Oil Income Program. His offices are in Windsor Locks at 500 Halfway House Rd.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I never miss your column and believe that more people read Dear Abby than any other part of the paper.

Here is a thorny question I have never known you to comment on. Love: Are the millions of unmarried, widowed and divorced people supposed to do without it?

DEAR M. R.: Sex for sex's sake means anyone will do. Love is selective. Only a certain somebody can fill a need for love.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago I was depressed for a period of time, and since I considered myself an enlightened person, I went to a private psychiatrist.

DEAR ABBY: There are still in existence a number of laws, regulations, traditions and precedents that are unjust, archaic, senseless and plain idiotic.

DEAR ABBY: I never miss your column and believe that more people read Dear Abby than any other part of the paper.

Langford grads pass on jobs

By MAL BARLOW

East Hartford Reporter
Grade 5 students at the Langford School off Alps Dr. in East Hartford, are making sure they leave the school in responsible hands for next year.

They complete their work at Langford this month. Next fall they will be in Grade 6 at the O'Brien Middle School.

Many of the student jobs at Langford are held by Grade 5 students. In the past, all their training and knowledge graduated with them.

But not this year.

Grade 5 teachers Ray Johnson and Denise Moynihan have been working with a careers program for their Langford students for the past two years. They got a boost in the unique program with $85 mini-grants from the Board of Education.

They brought in mounds of pamphlets and materials on jobs. They ran talks with the students about what each might do when an adult.

"We hoped they would begin to look at themselves, at their entire person," said Miss Moynihan.

"We hoped they would see their career as an outgrowth of their total person."

The teachers invited men and women to come and speak to the students about their jobs.

"We hoped they would see these people in their jobs and relate the jobs to school subjects," she said. East Hartford's dog warden, Al Frandini, was one of the best speakers. He gave a straightforward talk and answered the students' bold questions "shooting from the hip," said Johnson.

The architect of Langford, Donald Vigneau of East Hartford, had a tough time with the students. Most of them have spent all their elementary school days in his design and they had a few things to say about it.

They wanted to know why Vigneau didn't put a window in a certain wall. Why didn't he put the boys' room closer?

Vigneau defended most of his decisions on the school's unique design, Johnson said. But he did admit the students' had made a few good points he would remember.

Trips to area businesses helped enlarge the students' views on jobs. They made tours of Hoffman Oldsmobile and Dworin Chevrolet on Connecticut Blvd. Here they saw the wide variety of job skills required, even computer skills, said Miss Moynihan.

The new McDonald's restaurant off Tolland Pike, in Manchester opened its doors to the 50 Grade 5 students also.

School job center

The biggest project in the careers program so far is the Grade 5 job center. The students tallied all the jobs done in the school by students of all ages and broke them down by types. They found there are 13 types of jobs and at least 60 total job posts. The teachers proposed the Grade 5 job holders and other students fill the job posts for next year. They would run a personnel office for the school.

"We were surprised at how serious they took it," said Miss Moynihan. "They have been so concerned about how the jobs will be done."

"Students in the science center were so demanding in their job requirements. The phone workers were so concerned the new students be polite."

Other jobs include gym helpers, flag raisers, safety patrol and morning announcements on the PA system. About 250 applications poured into the job center, most from Grade 4 students who will be Grade 5 students next year. Some of the students applied for two or more jobs.

The job center workers screened the application forms and then set up preliminary interviews. Then they held final interviews before making final choices.

The job center will make its decisions known to the adults running the school. Where there are four posts, they will make about five recommendations. The teachers have final say.

"About 85 per cent of those picked for a job, the job center students contact the references for their opinions."

It was a lesson in decision making," she said. When all the students have been chosen for the jobs, the job center will send them notices. All those not picked will also get notices, which will include reasons and encouragement. There will be job openings next year and possibly new jobs when school gets under way.

The final job for the Grade 5 students is to train those picked to replace them. That should begin this week and run till school closes June 21.

Career education is being expanded to all elementary grades in town as of next fall, Johnson said. Robert McNulty, coordinator of the town program for all grades, is working on this now.

"But I doubt they'll go as far as we have," Johnson said. "The whole thing just mushroomed here."

The two Langford teachers said that of all those who helped them in the program, Martha Harper of the Capital Region Education Council (CREC) was tops.

Mary Bussiere, Grade 4 student, answers interview questions.

Retiring educators feted

The East Hartford Board of Education will hold a reception tonight at 7 at Penney High School for staff members who are retiring this month.

Principals retiring are Helen K. Jeffrey, 25 years in teaching, and Anthony Barcewicz, 33 years (30 in town).

Supervisor of Speech Marie L. Johnson has taught here 27 years. Anne Olesen is the retiring teacher with the most experience, 37 years with 24 in town.

Other retiring teachers are Mary I. Duprey, 10 years; Margaret Jubenville, 22 years; Elizabeth Pokay, 17 years; Stella Barcewicz, 32 years (28 here); Elizabeth Michaud, 21 years and Lucy Karabots, 20 years (14 here). Secretary Olive VanOstrand, with 18 years, and school nurse Phyllis H. DeGutis, with 17 years, are retiring.

Custodian Arvid Bowen, with 16 years, and maintenance man Edward L. Costello Sr., with 8 years, are also retiring.

Area police report

East Hartford
A police stakeout at the Ramada Inn Saturday night resulted in more arrests of Hartford men charged with car theft.

The men are Mario Alverto Retamal, 27, Luciano Torres, 20, and Juan Gonzalez, 22. Police charged each with conspiracy to commit second-degree larceny and possession of burglary tools. Gonzalez was also charged with third-degree larceny.

Also arrested was a 15-year-old who has been referred to juvenile authorities.

The three men were held on $15,000 surety bonds for appearance today in Common Pleas Court 12.

After reports of a disturbance and a series of false fire alarms in the Cherry and Jencks Sts. area, police arrested Steven Leonard, 16, and Ronald R. Leonard, 25, both of 4 Lincoln St., Saturday at about 11:30 p.m.

Police charged them with breach of peace. Steven was also charged with threatening and Ronald was also charged with interfering with a police officer and criminal attempt to commit third-degree assault.

Harold Alm, 19, of the same address, was also arrested and charged with breach of peace, interfering with an officer and escape from custody.

They were released on $500 non-surety bonds for court appearance June 12.

Robia W. Pettigrew, 25, of Marlborough, was arrested Saturday afternoon at the Zayre's store, 15 Main St., and charged with fourth-degree larceny (shoplifting). Court date is June 20.

Vernon
Alfred E. Gardiner, 20, of 33 Ward St., Rockville, was charged Saturday with disorderly conduct, interfering with a police officer, reckless endangerment, threatening and carrying a dangerous weapon.

Police said Officer Gary Pfeifer, while on patrol, was assigned to check an accident and was advised that a man at the accident was carrying a gun.

Pfeifer said he was confronted by a man who had a rifle pointed at him (Pfeifer). Police said Gardiner was taken into custody and it was found the rifle was loaded. He was held at the police station in lieu of a $20,000 bond. He was to be presented in court today.

Rodney Gray, 4, of Partridge Lane, Tolland, was struck by a car on Union St. Saturday afternoon when he ran from in front of a parked car. The child was treated and released at Rockville General Hospital.

The accident is still under investigation. The driver of the car was Dong Denh Dang, 29, of 4 Gaynor Pl., Rockville.

COVENTRY RESIDENTS

STOP Take the time to become informed on your Sewer Authority's proposals.

LOOK Obtain information from Town Hall and Town Libraries.

LISTEN Attend a public hearing June 7, at 7:30 P.M., at Coventry High School.

SPEAK OUT Give the Sewer Authority and council your thoughts and opinions.

The following conclusions were reached as the result of the investigation of the existing conditions in the Town of Coventry and by the evaluation of the numerous alternatives available to satisfy the Town's public health needs. The Coventry Sewer Authority recommended that a sewer system be constructed after concluding that there is no one item, taken alone, that justifies sewers; but that there are a multitude of considerations that when taken together justifies this action.

1. There is a long history of septic system failures around Coventry Lake.
2. The combination of a high groundwater table, poor soil percolation and small lots in the Coventry Lake Area makes a permanent solution using septic tanks and leaching fields unlikely.
3. There currently exists more than 800 homes around Coventry Lake on lots smaller than 15,000 square feet. This is the minimum practical lot size for on-site disposal using a conventional septic tank and leaching field.
4. It is anticipated that eventually most of these homes will have septic system problems that cannot be reliably solved with conventional septic tank leaching systems.
5. Several non-discharge toilet concepts were studied and found acceptable from a public health point of view. These are not currently approved by the Connecticut Department of Health. It is also believed that the general public would have aesthetic objections to these systems at this time and that their widespread use would lead to a reduction in property values.
6. The widespread use of holding tanks was considered and discarded because the Connecticut Department of Health will not approve their community-wide use because of a conviction that they use results in drastically reduced water consumption, and therefore, poor sanitary conditions. Holding tanks are expensive to install and maintain.
7. Town acquisition of houses, with systems that cannot be fixed with a conventional leaching field, was considered and rejected because the Town does not have the statutory authority to condemn owner-occupied housing and a belief that the town has neither the financial resources nor desire to implement this kind of plan. A voluntary acquisition program was not considered workable.
8. Other neighborhood solutions including an underdrain system and a neighborhood sewer system were considered and found unfeasible.
9. The Coventry Sewer Authority decided to recommend construction of a sewer system after concluding that there is not a viable on-site or neighborhood waste disposal approach that can be reliably applied to the many small lots in the Lake Area.

Wage raise raises problem

The federal government, it is often urged, should be the nation's "employer of last resort" — charged with the responsibility of providing jobs and income for those Americans unable to find employment on their own. Much social legislation in recent years has been directed toward increasing that responsibility.

If anybody can be called the "employer of first resort," it has to be the foodservice (restaurant) industry, whose 550,000 independent operators employ more than 8 million people in full-time and part-time capacities, many of them younger or unskilled workers in entry-level positions — busboys, waitresses, etc.

For example, while teenagers make up only 10 per cent of the nation's workforce, they constitute a third of the foodservice workforce. Unfortunately, a piece of legislation being considered by the employer of last resort could seriously and adversely affect the role of the employer of first resort. This is H.R. 3744, a three-pronged bill, each point of which, says the foodservice industry, stabs where it hurts.

First, the bill calls for an increase in the federal minimum wage from $2.30 to $2.85 an hour — a 24 per cent advance — within 30 days of enactment. This would peg the minimum wage at 55 per cent of the $5.19 average wage (including over-time) in manufacturing.

Second, beginning in January 1978 and each January after that, the minimum wage would be "indexed" to 60 per cent of the manufacturing wage average, meaning another increase of 16 to 19 per cent next January.

With the indexing provision, wages in the labor-intensive foodservice industry, with its low productivity per worker, would be permanently tied to wages in highly productive industries. Foodservice operators complain that they would be forced to raise wages each year because of collective bargaining gains won by workers in more technological, automated industries, but with little hope of raising productivity. Third, H.R. 3744 would eliminate the tip credit, which enables restaurant management to pay less than the minimum wage to employees who receive tips. Currently, if an employee earns tips equal to at least half the minimum wage, these tips are considered part of his or her income and the employer pays the remaining 50 per cent in actual wages.

This system ensures total income to every worker at least equal to the minimum wage. In practice, the 31 per cent of foodservice workers who are tipped earn about 61 per cent more than their nontipped coworkers.

If the tip credit is repealed, employers would immediately face more than a doubling in labor costs for tipped employees — that is, loss of the present $1.15 credit plus the 24 per cent increase over the current minimum wage.

What would happen? According to the National Restaurant Association, some 700,000 foodservice jobs would be lost if restaurant operators cut employment to keep their labor costs constant. It says the additional wages would cost the industry $3.9 billion, which could only be met by cutting personnel or raising menu prices, or both.

It cites the experience of California, which last year raised its minimum wages by 25 per cent and repealed a 25-cent tip credit. Two-thirds of the restaurants sampled in a study had reduced their staff requirements by an average of 50 hours per week, or equivalent of 36,000 restaurant jobs.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce estimates that passage of H.R. 3744 would cause nationwide employment opportunities in all industries to be reduced by 2.7 million jobs.

At a time when the United States is combatting both high inflation and unemployment rates — the latter an unacceptable 19 per cent — for teenagers overall and 37 per cent for minority youths — H.R. 3744, says its critics, would add to both.

Cancer volunteer solicits help

To the editor: I may please use the Open Forum to remind any folks who have inadvertently forgotten to pass along to their neighbor the Cancer Society donation "kit," to please see that it is returned to the volunteers whose name is on the outside of the envelope?

I have been a volunteer in the past, with success, but this year someone between my address, 30 W. Middle Tpk., and 140 W. Middle Tpk., has apparently held up the envelope. There must be others in town with the same problem. I have had two notices from the campaign folks as to when it had been ended the end of April.

I hope the right person reads this and that I soon find the envelope in my mailbox. Thank you for myself and for the American Cancer Society.

'Reformers' try to sell us a gold brick

Andrew Tully

WASHINGTON — Talk about malarky. All that wringing of hands by Congressional "reformers" pining for repeal of the Hatch Act is just another attempt to sell the plain citizen the gold brick.

These self-styled freedom fighters would open the gates to more corruption by making it possible for the party in power — Democratic or Republican — and Big Labor to organize 2.8 million federal workers for political profit.

They want a return to the good old crooked days when a federal worker could be fired, denied promotion and otherwise browbeaten by his superior into toeing the partisan line.

Stench of 1938
The Hatch Act was passed in 1939, in the wake of public disgust over the stench of the 1938 election campaign.

During that campaign, government officials openly forced their employees to support candidates, deducted political contributions from workers' paychecks, and handed out jobs to the "right" people.

The law prohibits all federal employees except top executives from running for public or party office and from participating in political campaigns. It also prohibits executives from using their "official authority or influence" to interfere with or affect the results of an election.

Thus, under Hatch, the government

worker's job is protected against political pressure. He needn't risk telling a superior or a union boss that he disagrees with a certain political position. He can say, simply, "Sorry, but I'm Hatched."

Rights claimed
Labor unions, some civil rights groups and the American Civil Liberties Union support repeal of Hatch. They claim the law prevents federal employees from exercising a "fundamental democratic right."

Baloney. They have not been disenfranchised, merely regulated for their own protection against coercion. Such regulation would seem required under the first amendment; the Supreme Court on three occasions has upheld Hatch's constitutionality.

At any rate, repeal, federalism by definition imposes restriction on political activity. I do not wish to answer the door some night and find an agent from the Internal Revenue Service or the FBI complaining that something I wrote was unfavorable to a certain candidate.

Besides, if federal workers want to get involved in politics, they can do so. All they have to do is resign. Nobody is forced to keep a government job with all those neat fringe benefits. The guy at his desk at the Agriculture Department made his choice; he knew what the rules were.

Common Cause opposed
That guy also might note that Hatch repeal is opposed by both the Civil Service League and Common Cause, neither of which has ever come out in favor of oppressing the working man. Common Cause warns that the repeal bill increases "the potential for building a powerful political operation based on the use of government workers."

Meanwhile, there is reason to question the purity of Big Labor's motives. During House debate a bipartisan majority added to the repeal bill an amendment which would prohibit unions from coercing the political activity of their members and from using members' dues for political purposes.

Fortwith, Big Labor's lobbyists got the bill temporarily withdrawn until its supporters could regroup. Any more questions?

Everyone gains

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters
(Last of two related columns)

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Something very unexpected occurred at the University of Illinois after the installation of "curb cuts" — those sidewalk "ramps" in the form of indentations at corners which make the walkway level with the street.

The curb cuts were constructed specifically to allow disabled students in wheelchairs to cross the street without difficulty or assistance, but the non-handicapped had some very different ideas of their own about the utility of the indentations at corners which make the walkway level with the street.

Other uses
Timothy J. Nugent, Director of Rehabilitation Education at the university, made an informal survey and found that bicyclists thought the curb cuts were designed to allow them to cross streets without dismounting, while parents of infants were equally sure the indentations were to facilitate their travel with baby carriages.

The university maintenance crews were convinced that the improvement was designed to expedite the movement of heavy equipment, while joggers thought it was to make it easy for them to traverse the campus without breaking stride.

Help all
The story is frequently told by handicapped people who point to its obvious message: Whatever makes the world more functional for the disabled invariably improves it for everyone else too.

The Illinois success story is being applied specifically these days to a dramatic innovation which will allow handicapped people to gain access for the first time to intra-city commuter buses.

It is a totally new design called Transbus, approved only recently by Brock Adams, secretary of the Department of Transportation (DOT). Adams has the power to make his choice stick because the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, a component of DOT, provides 80 per cent of the purchase price of the thousands of new buses purchased annually in cities across the country.

For the disabled, the key features of the Transbus are its low floor, wide door and a retractable ramp, all designed specifically to allow wheelchair-bound people to use the bus to travel to jobs, stores, doctors and elsewhere.

But there are numerous other beneficiaries as well, beginning with the more than 22.6 million people who are 65 years of age or older. Almost 7 million of the elderly have infirmities which either preclude them from riding the current high-floor bus or make it dangerous for them to negotiate the steep steps.

More riders
In addition, a study conducted last year for DOT predicted that the technical and aesthetic improvements should increase ridership 10 per cent, not counting the handicapped or elderly.

The wide door is designed for wheelchairs, but it also will allow boarding time to be halved, thus reducing total trip time by 10 per cent, according to the study.

Better ride
Ride quality should approach that of passenger cars, with noise and vibration reduced 70 per cent from the current levels. Accidents should be cut by about 25 per cent.

Despite the universal applicability of these projects, improvements of the campaign to bring the Transbus from an experimental program to the pre-production stage was waged almost exclusively by a coalition of organizations representing the handicapped and disabled.

Providing them with invaluable technical and legal assistance were groups such as the Center for Concerned Engineering, founded by Ralph Nader and headed by Paul Hotchkiss; and the Public Interest Law Center of Philadelphia, funded by the state of Pennsylvania and the Max and Anna Levinson Foundation.

Will take time
Because the country's three manufacturers of buses need time to develop and tool up for the new vehicle, Adams' decision will be applicable only to those buses ordered after September 1979 and the first vehicles probably won't be delivered until early 1981.

But Adams says that "if one manufacturer substantially beats the effective date of the mandate," he will consider authorizing all purchases under that company "to get the Transbus onto the streets as soon as it is available."

My souvenir of the Queen's Jubilee in England already, and there aren't many of them around. There have been rehearsals the past two Saturdays for Trooping the Colour on Horse Guards Parade Saturday, June 11. That's the "biggy."

George and Ivy White presented it to us when we dined in London. George is now retired from the Grenadier Guards Band where he was its sergeant-major. He is employed at Whitehall.

That souvenir will be placed in a frame, glass on both sides, so the six-page program can be seen. It will become a collector's item, you can be sure.

On our final night in London, we had a Farewell Banquet at Cafe Royal, one of the exquisite banquet halls in all of London and also on the Continent.

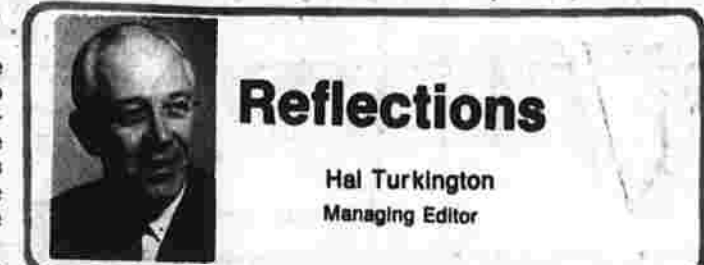

For entertainment, we had a cabaret by the Royal Artillery Marching Band. By cabaret, we mean the band paraded into our dining area and then presented a concert. It was a fascinating experience, and one our tour group will remember.

George White told us he had been checking daily for two weeks to see just which band we would get. Arrangements must be made more than a year in advance, and you don't know which band will be available to you until two or three days beforehand.

Tears flowed that night. A special arrangement of "Lassa Trombone," a hunting piece with two trumpeters using the long hunting trumpets, traditional English marches, unusual bits of Broadway show tunes. Then the band's six-piece dance band played for dancing the remainder of the evening.

Our master of ceremonies that evening was Bryn Williams, considered one of the finest in London. In fact, he is pretty much on a first-name basis with the Royal Family. He will introduce the Queen during the giant fireworks show celebrating the Silver Jubilee on the Thames River this week.

He has a thunderous voice and could be heard everywhere in the room, without use of microphone. It was strictly British pomp and circumstance when he introduced, "Her Majesty's Royal Artillery Marching Band!"

We had a 15-minute visit with someone who remembers Manchester very well — Len Hall, whose brother, Bill, lives at 218 Fern St.

Len knew we were coming, because Bob Dougan wrote to him. Bob and Mildred Dougan were celebrating their 50th anniversary on this trip.

I knew it was Len when he walked into the hotel lobby. I hadn't seen him in 30 years or more, but the face was a distinct Hall, no question.

CofC reaffirms support for new industrial park

At a recent meeting of its Board of Directors, the Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce reaffirmed its support for the proposed town developed industrial park which is slated to have a major J.C. Penney Company distribution warehouse as a primary tenant.

The Chamber, by taking this latest move, wishes to demonstrate its continuing faith in the Manchester Economic Development Commission's efforts, particularly in light of the careful, orderly planning that has accompanied this project from its inception, said James Breitenfeld, executive vice-president of the Chamber.

The Chamber shares with all Manchester residents a concern about random, unplanned growth in our area, Breitenfeld said. However, the intense planning and the overriding concern for environmental and safety issues have led the Chamber to recognize the industrial park as an ideal planned growth program.

Breitenfeld noted that the proposed benefits of the industrial park remain unchanged with over 2,000 jobs, increased tax base, preservation of property values, improvement of public utilities, and enhancement of controlled industrial development.

In addition as part of an ongoing information program, anyone with unresolved questions concerning the park is invited to contact the Chamber at 257 E. Center St.

River race films Tuesday

Films and slides of the recent Hockanum River Race will be shown Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Woodruff Hall of Center Congregational Church.

The program, which is open to the public free of charge, is being sponsored by the Hockanum River Linear Park Committee.

Winners in the seven categories of the race will be presented plaques during the program.

The next walk along the river is scheduled for Sunday starting at 1 p.m. from the corner of Hilliard St. and New State Rd. The walk will be from New Lake area. The public is invited to the Laurel vited.

The budget was tentatively set at $283,435 last month. All interested persons are invited to attend.

Manchester police report

George L. Dzialo, 43, of 9 Earl St., received minor facial and scalp injuries Saturday after his car ran off the road on Olcott St. and struck a utility pole. He was charged with operating a motor vehicle under the influence of liquor. He was processed after treatment at Manchester Memorial Hospital and released on a non-surety bond for court June 21.

Paul S. Yale, 20, of 446 W. Middle Tpk., and Thomas J. Shaia, 21, of 147 Spruce St., were each charged with breach of peace in connection with a disturbance at Best Eaton Donuts 150 Center St. early Sunday. Police said the two men fell against and broke a plate glass window while fighting in the parking lot of the shop. Yale was treated for a cut on the neck at Manchester Memorial Hospital. Both were released on $150 non-surety bonds for court appearances June 20.

Barbara J. Bodo, 41, and George A. Clough, 38, both of 8 Ford St., were charged with breach of peace Saturday in connection with a disturbance at the same address. They were processed and released for court June 20.

Edward P. Taylor, 29, of New Britain, was charged with operating a vehicle with a suspended license.

Also, Beatrice McDonnell Moore, Shirley Breen Rogina, Bernice Brewer Krewalk, Edwin Ducey, Dennis Gibson, Robert Hillman, Howard LaPier, Arthur Ludwig, Lucille Murphy, Mary Nielsen, Edna Samulson Schuff, Theodore Stroker, Eleanor Thomas and Franklin White.

Those having information about the above classmates may contact Irma Ponticelli DellaFera, 649-3054, or Marjory Fairweather Salmon, 676-1921.

William J. Orbach, 20, of no certain address, was charged with third-degree criminal trespass and released for court June 27.

Walter L. Little, 28, of Hartford, was charged on a warrant with conspiracy to commit third-degree larceny. He was presented in court Friday on the conspiracy bond for court June 21.

Police charged 16 persons with motor vehicle violations Saturday and 23 persons on Sunday.

Reports of stolen tools from two addresses, one on Winter St. and one on E. Center St., were made over the weekend. The tools were valued at $1,000 from the Winter St. apartment and $500 from the E. Center St. house.

Vandalism was reported to several motor vehicles, carports and storage sheds on Ambassador Dr. over the weekend. Nothing was reported missing, but locks were broken, on the sheds, police said. A motorcycle had been stolen last week from one of the homes.

Comment session slated

The Manchester Board of Directors will conduct a public comment session Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. at the directors office in the Municipal Building. The session permits comments and suggestions from the public about matters affecting the town.

MCC offering PR workshop

The Division of Community Services at Manchester Community College is offering a public relations workshop during the 1977 summer session. It is intended for individuals who are responsible for public relations in clubs, civil organizations, associations and small businesses.

The course will emphasize how to gain a working knowledge of communications media. It is geared for amateurs and not for those who are intended to be professionals in the field.

The instructor will be Carroll Madson, director of the Office of College and Community Relations at Manchester Community College.

The course starts June 16 and meets on Thursday evenings, 8-10 p.m. For information on how to register, please contact the Community Services Division, 646-2137.

Scholarship awards set for Wednesday

The 12th annual awards ceremony of the Manchester Scholarship Foundation will be Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Manchester High School Cafeteria.

The program, presided over by William Sleith, Foundation president, will include selections by the Manchester High School Round Table Singers directed by Martha White.

Rabbi Leon Wind will give the invocation.

After the ceremony, refreshments will be served.

Hostesses will be Lois Ann Diana, Gloria Diana, Diane Genovesi, Joan Gerry, Kathy Gerry, Kathy Kodes, Jane Sulick and Leslie Weinberg.

Bottle bill killed

HARTFORD (UPI) — The Connecticut legislature has finally put the bottle bill to rest for the year, and now the Senate must decide if the proposal tumbled last session as an alternative to it is worth enacting.

The House of Representatives in an unusual Saturday session killed the controversial plan to ban throwaway bottles and then passed a measure to tax business for the cost of anti-litter campaigns.

That proposal was backed by many of the bottle bill's bitterest enemies, who quietly pushed it through the legislative process as an alternative to the bottle bill.

It now goes to the Senate, where it faces an uncertain reception and a fast-approaching Wednesday adjournment deadline.

"I'm optimistic that they (the Senate) would like to have something rather than nothing at all and this (the anti-litter bill) is all we have," said Rep. Andrew Grande, D-Bristol, who led the anti-litter bill forces.

It would tax businesses who contribute to the litter problem — such as bottlers, food stores and makers of paper goods — 0.15 per cent of the value of gross sales of products related to litter.

Estimates are it will raise about $1 million, part of it going to pay for cleanup squads.

But opponents of the bill said the tax would just mean higher consumer prices. Rep. William Collins, D-Norwalk, called it an "administrative disaster."

The Department of Environmental Protection would be required to create an anti-litter office to encourage cleanup programs.

Open air graduation rites at MCC

Lawn chairs lined the bandshell hill Sunday afternoon as a crowd of about 2,500 attended the 13th commencement of Manchester Community College. A total of 740 graduates received diplomas at the ceremony. (Herald photo by Dunn)

Cooperation is stressed at MCC commencement

By GREG PEARSON Herald Reporter

Town Manager Robert B. Weiss spoke to the Manchester Community College graduating class about the need to cooperate, and that's what the weather did through most of the Sunday afternoon ceremony.

The 13th commencement exercises of the local college featured speeches by the town manager and the class valedictorian, and a cloud-filled, sometimes threatening sky. But, the rain held off except for a brief drizzle mid-way through the awarding of diplomas to the 740 graduates.

At the beginning of the ceremony, the class members, dressed in black caps and gowns, marched down the hill leading to the bandshell area, where the ceremony was held. The Manchester Pipe Band led the procession.

As the class marched in, many of those in the crowd of 2,500 drifted over to the roped-off area to get a close-up view of the procession. Some of them shouted congratulations to a friend or family member in the line.

During the ceremony, the audience resembled a crowd at the beach. Most sat in lawn chairs or spread blankets on the hill. Two youngsters even brought along a portable chess set to provide entertainment during part of the afternoon.

Dr. Ronald H. Denison, MCC president, gave the opening remarks and asked for a round of applause for the school's faculty.

"I've never had the pleasure of working with such a fine staff of dedicated people," he said.

Helen Bradshaw, class valedictorian, spoke to her classmates about the importance of seeking to be an individual in a society that often asks us to conform.

"We must not shackle ourselves with worries about what others might think of us. Courage is needed to develop our own ideals," Mrs. Bradshaw, a South Windsor resident and mother of two, said.

She told her classmates that after they take off their identical, black robes, they must "respect, cherish and stand in awe" of their individual personalities.

"Dare to explore your own individuality. Dare to be you," she said.

Weiss urged the students to become involved and provide the type of cooperation that is essential in the running of a government like that of the Town of Manchester.

"Don't be the kind of person who sits back and says, 'Why don't they...'"

House nears vote on Hatch change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democratic leaders are ready to make a new effort this week to pass a controversial bill allowing government employees to participate in election campaigns.

But the measure, which has been endorsed by President Carter, faces a more hostile climate in the Senate. The House planned action today on a bill authorizing the worldwide military construction program, and its Ways and Means committee was beginning an expected month-long effort to deal with the tax portion of Carter's energy proposals, including the standby tax on gasoline and a new levy on gas-guzzling cars.

Community Development Block Grant program to rehabilitate inner city slums and give housing assistance to the needy.

Then it turns to the Clean Air Act, already passed by the House, which sets controversial exhaust controls on cars. The House pushed to amend the Hatch Act and permit federal employees to run for partisan office and work in political campaigns stalled three weeks ago when the House added an amendment banning use of labor union funds for campaigns.

The bill was pulled off the floor while work began on a new amendment designed to neutralize the anti-union move, sources said.

Leadership sources said enough

votes now have been promised to pass the new amendment, approve the bill and send it to the Senate.

However, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., the bill's Senate manager, is said to be unenthusiastic about it. He has said he would bring it up only if the House passed it by a big enough margin to give it momentum and a chance of passage.

Republicans attack the measure as a return to the spoils system, while backers say it justly returns political rights to government workers.

Also this week, the House scheduled floor action Tuesday on a long-standing proposal authorizing $150 million over three years for federal aid to states which compensate innocent victims of crime.

Workers win pay raise

By GREG PEARSON Herald Reporter

A state-appointed arbitration panel has granted a pay hike requested by the union representing employees of the Town of Manchester's Public Works Department but has decided against a union request to continue having two workers in each town snow plow.

The panel's decision, received this morning by town officials, grants the union — the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO, Local 991 — a five per cent pay hike retroactive to July 1, 1976 and a six per cent increase beginning July 1, 1977.

This approved salary scale had been presented by the union in its final contract proposal. The town had sought a four per cent hike in each year of the two-year contract.

But, the salary issue was the only one of six items that the three-member panel decided in favor of the union.

The panel agreed with the town's proposal that the second worker in the snow plow — known as the "shotgun rider" — be eliminated. The town, however, will pay the single worker in each snow plow a 20-cent per hour "tack-on" allowance because of the elimination of the second worker.

If two workers are assigned to a truck, there will be no "tack-on" allowance.

The arbitration panel denied a request by the union that Martin Luther King Day be considered a paid holiday.

The town's liability for supplemental workmen's compensation payments will cease after one year, the panel ruled. The union had sought to put no time limit on the supplemental payment.

Also, the salary for mechanics will be increased by ten cents an hour, which both the town and the union had agreed to. But, the payment will not be retroactive to July 1, 1976, as the union had requested. The increase will begin July 1, 1977, which is what the town had proposed.

The panel also decided that digestion and filter operators and assistant water pollution control plant operators will receive a 10-cent per hour pay hike. The union had sought a 25-cent per hour increase.

The panel also ruled in favor of the town's request that the hourly pay hike not be continued beyond June 30, 1978 if the employee has not obtained a Class III operating license from the state.

The three arbitrators for the case were Joseph Bogdan, who was selected by the town; Dominic J.

Badolati, who was chosen by the union; and William E. Post, who was the neutral member.

Bogdan voted in favor of the town on all six issues. Badolati voted in favor of the union on all six, and Post sided with the town on all the issues except the wage proposal.

The union has been working without a contract since July 1, 1976. The town and the union had failed to reach agreement through the first three steps of municipal labor negotiations. Thus, both sides went to the fourth, and final, step — binding arbitration.

Several other items included in negotiation had been agreed to by both parties. These included a dispute over accumulated sick days. The town decided to drop its request and continue under the present system, which permits an employee to take advantage of all sick days accumulated over the years, with a 105-day maximum.

The town has now settled contract matters with three out of four unions. The only remaining unsettled contract is with the Manchester Police Union, which has also gone to binding arbitration. The arbitration panel's decision on the police contract is expected this week.

Shrine initiates 89 at ceremonial

Former Mayor Harold A. Turkington, the oldest member of the Shrine, was honored at the ceremony.

More than 1,000 Shriners were here, including those representing temples from Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts. In addition, Bermuda Masons participated; they were here on a fraternal visit to Friendship Lodge of Masons.

"It was a fantastic weekend," said Harold E. Turkington, the illustrious potentate of Sphinx Temple and a past master of Friendship Lodge. He was instrumental in bringing the Bermudians to Manchester.

"Masonry and Shrinedom can be proud of what it did here," said Turkington. "The combination of committees from the lodge, the past masters, and the Omar Shrine Club are to be complimented for the smooth organization. I could never be more sincere when I say the credit goes to them."

Bermuda Masons from Atlantic Phoenix Lodge portrayed their Master Mason degree at Filip Junior High School Friday night to an audience of more than 400 Masons.

Saturday's parade at 1:30 p.m. began at Bannet Junior High School and was reviewed by the potentate and his officers on E. Center St. The ritual ceremonies were conducted at Clarke Arena of the high school and all attended a Ceremonial Feast and Afterglow at the Colony.

General chairman was Manchester's Al Perry, the first ceremonial master of Sphinx Temple. James Desmond, deputy grand master, represented the Grand Lodge of Connecticut.

Receiving 30-year pins were Albert Knofia, Phillip Ranner, and Dr. George A. F. Lundberg Sr. The potentate was reminded by the doctor that he had brought the potentate into this world 54 years ago.

Woman is killed in a collision

EAST HARTFORD — Barbara Capano, 23, of 143 Penny Dr., East Hartford, died Sunday after a motorcycle-automobile collision near the Marco Polo Restaurant on Burnside Ave.

She was a passenger on the motorcycle driven by Dennis Chokas, 29, of 140 Silver Lane, East Hartford police said. The driver of another motorcycle in the accident was Gary Chokas, 20, of El Diana Dr., Manchester. Both drivers suffered serious injuries, police said.

The Chokas brothers both received emergency aid at the scene from East Hartford paramedics Daniel Florida and John Marshall. They were taken to Hartford Hospital for extensive surgery.

A hospital spokesman said late this morning both brothers were still in "guarded" condition.

Police are still investigating the accident and released few details of it. However, police said the accident apparently began when the car driven east on Burnside Ave. in front of a Chevron service station by Michael S. Hawley, 20, of 98 Janet Dr., East Hartford crossed the center line.

The Hawley car then collided with the two motorcycles driven by the Chokas brothers, police said. No arrests had been made as of late morning.

Repairing a winner

Robert E. Triggs Jr. of 3 Riverside Dr., Vernon, and his daughter, Barbara Ann, 7, fix their remote control model racing boat after the last race Sunday afternoon at the Connecticut River. The four-year-old boat took a fifth place trophy in the Greater Hartford Model Boat Club open over the weekend. Competitors came from as far as Ohio. Paul Stank of Ellington Rd., South Windsor, brought his boat, Slap Shot, into second place in its class. On June 18 and 19, the East Hartford Jaycees host much bigger boats in the third annual Marine Classic. (Herald photo by Barlow) voter turnout was light this morning in Bolton's referendum on the 1977-78 budget. As of 10:30 a.m., just 110 persons had voted at the Community Hall. Voters may either accept or reject the $2.3 million spending plan today. The 110 persons represented about five per cent of the town's 2,194 registered voters. The $2,265,278 budget plan would provide $1,414,778 for education and $790,502 for general government. The budget was rejected at a May 18 Town Meeting and the same budget was resubmitted to a May 25 Town Meeting, but it wasn't acted on then. A group of petitioners forced the budget decision to referendum. Bolton has 2,194 registered voters. There is no clear indication of what the outcome of today's vote will be. Town officials are split in their opinions on the budget.

Budget referendum today Voting light in Bolton

Budget referendum today Voting light in Bolton

For the most part, finance board members and town political chairmen are urging approval of the budget. School officials are urging rejection. The polls are open until 8 p.m. at the Community Hall. The finance board will meet after the referendum to set a tax rate if the budget is approved or to submit a new proposal if it is rejected.

Spending items on agenda

Public hearings and a Special Town Meeting in Vernon Tuesday night will deal with appropriations for the sewage treatment plant, extension of sewer lines and an addition to Firehouse No. 1. The hearings will precede the Town Council meeting at 7:30 p.m. The amount of $2.5 million for the sewage plant is updating an amount already approved. The total estimated cost of the plant is $18.1 million, 90 per cent of which will be reimbursed with federal and state funds.

Spending items on agenda

An amount of $300,000 is being asked for the sewer installation project on Overbrook Dr. and Richard and Berkeley Rds., and $98,645 is sought for the firehouse addition. At its regular meeting, the council will: Be asked to authorize the mayor to enter into an agreement for the elderly/handicapped bus transportation program.

South Windsor stays with council-manager

South Windsor remains under the council-manager form of government and the hiring of Town Manager Paul Talbot. Both the Republican and Democratic Town Committees, as well as the League of Women Voters, came out against a change to strong mayor. Saturday's referendum brought out only about 17 per cent of the eligible voters, who defeated the proposed change by a vote of 1,304 to 319. The charter revision proposal would have eliminated the position of town manager and put the town under the jurisdiction of a paid, elected mayor. The proposed change caused a great deal of controversy since it emerged in the form of a petition designed to force a referendum, to allow voters to decide the form of government. Shortly after the petition began circulation, Terry V. Sprekel, then town manager, resigned. Sprekel denied that the petition on a change to strong mayor was a reason for his resignation. The Town Council, however, voted a resolution endorsing the present council-manager government, in hopes of encouraging prospective town managers to apply for the vacant position. Town Clerk Charles Enes served as acting town manager.

Town directory is ready

The 1977 edition of the South Windsor telephone directory has been published by the Chamber of Commerce and will be distributed to every home and business Wednesday. It is our best telephone directory of the three we have published, said chamber President Paul Longchamps, "and we are pleased to place one with every resident and business as a community service. The book, published every other year by the chamber, contains 94 pages of local telephone numbers and has considerable advertising by local businesses. Often-called numbers of town services are highlighted in the book, which sports a bright yellow cover. Much of the information was provided by the South Windsor Community Service Council. The centerfold contains a map of the town, including a coded street key system.

School officers set

Alison Boissonneau has been elected president of the Children's Cooperative Nursery School for 1977-78. Other officers named are Sharon Raymond, administrative vice-president; Patricia Westline, membership vice-president; Roberta Klunk, treasurer, and Elyse Petzold, secretary. The school is located at the St. Maurice Church Parish Center. Teachers are Betsy Roberts, Jennifer Daly and Patricia Putnam. The school has a two-day session for three-year-olds and a three-day session for four-year-olds. There are some openings. To learn more, call Beverly Onnen, 742-8066.
