KENT, Ohio (UPI) — Residents of "Tent City" near the site of the May 4, 1970, Kent State shootings vowed Monday to remain camped on the site "until the bulldozers come" to take part of the land for a new gymnasium.

spokesman for the May 4 Coalition. "We'll stay until the bulldozers come." The coalition was formed when Kent students learned the university planned to build a gymnasium on a portion of the site where four Kent students were killed and nine were wounded seven years ago in a barrage of Ohio National Guard gunfire.

Legislative review:

State spending money but without tax increase

HARTFORD (UPI) — The 1977 Connecticut legislature, which finished its business Wednesday, reorganized state government, toughened the unemployment compensation law and increased spending without raising taxes. Lawmakers came within one vote of passing the controversial bill before voting on it in legislative session Tuesday. The bill would have increased the state's fiscal year 1978 budget by $1.91 billion...

Washington window: Some footprints on the ceiling

By ARNOLD SAWFLAK WASHINGTON (UPI) — Children, informed that Earth is round, sometimes come to the conclusion that people on the other side of the world must walk around with their heads down and their feet up. Forced to take it on sheer faith that the Chinese do not live like flies on a ceiling, the child forever after is slightly suspicious of incredible new information that others accept as perfectly reasonable.

Willig takes day off The first sign that this was about to happen came recently when George Willig, a young man from Queens who keeps food on the table by designing toys, took a day off from work and climbed the outside wall of the 110-story World Trade Center in New York. City officials got very huffy about the episode, threatening to sue the climber for $50,000, which was what they said cost to send policemen and firemen to direct traffic and clap handcuffs on Willig when he reached the top.

Let's Jimmy steer The second event of note was marine rather than aerial: Adm. Hyman Rickover let Jimmy Carter steer a nuclear submarine around the Atlantic. This was remarkable in itself because Presidents Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, and Ford also were former naval officers, and Rickover never let any of them play with one of his boats.

President makes it official: June 19 is Fathers Day

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter has made it official: June 19 is Father's Day. Carter has signed a proclamation designating the date of the celebration. But the challenges of raising a child in an increasingly complex and uncertain world require more than just a desire to be a good parent."

Several major bills are left to wither away on the vine

HARTFORD (UPI) — The lawmakers have gone home and left several pieces of major legislation to wither on the vine. The Connecticut legislature adjourned Wednesday without taking action on legislation affecting Sunday sales restrictions, mandatory sentences for habitual criminals and a new system of selecting judges. The bill to re-establish Sunday closing laws was allowed to die by lawmakers. The legislators decided to give the courts a chance to rule on an appeal of last year's lower court decision striking down the centuries-old blue laws.

Solons split difference in state school aid funds

HARTFORD (UPI) — Lawmakers essentially split the difference between rural and urban concerns in approving a distribution formula for $20 million in educational funding for the state's cities and towns. Working against a midnight adjournment deadline Wednesday, they adopted a House-Senate conference committee compromise that bridges the gap between the formulas passed by each chamber last month. The Senate had approved a plan weighted heavily in favor of the state's major cities, while the House formula gave more money to smaller communities. The new plan now goes to Gov. Ella T. Grasso who is expected to sign it into law.

Opinion

A taxing task

Never in the course of human taxation have so many people been put to so much trouble for so little purpose. Each year, American businesses spend millions of dollars and devote millions of manhours to assembling tons of documents which, by law, they must submit to the Internal Revenue Service.

Pencil mark

After more than four centuries of being chewed on, scribbled with, sharpened, blunted and snapped, and even used to stir a hot drink on occasion, the lowly pencil is about to make its biggest mark.

Singular question

Now that they have been placed on the White House breakfast menu, everyone should know what grits are. But is there such a thing as one grit?

Thought

I have been in the presence of a few great spirits and beyond all service the greatest was Helen Keller. I visited her once in her home near Westport.

"I understand they've had lots of experience."

A good recommendation

WASHINGTON (NEA) - Anyone brooding about the fate of all those dispossessed Ford administration folk can put away the old crying towel. The vast majority are doing very well, thank you.

Open forum

There is scarcely a member of the Ford cabinet who is not now gracing the board of directors of some major corporation with his or her presence.

Side glances

President Carter, with his new ethics code, hopes to halt the "revolving door" traffic between the government and private industry that it deals with, but the Ford people faced no such obstacle.

Slain escapee once led prison Jaycee chapter

BURLINGTON, Vt. (UPI) - Convicted murderer and bank robber Donald Brant won Chamber of Commerce awards in prison, but he also claimed he held up banks for money as casually as most people go to restaurants for meals.

Brant, 44, of Pawtucket, R.I., described as one of Rhode Island's "most dangerous" criminals, was shot to death by police Tuesday while hiding under a swimming pool deck.

He and two other inmates Saturday had saved their way out of the St. Albans Correctional Center. Another inmate was captured; the third was still at large today.

Most dangerous Providence, R.I. Police Chief Robert Ricci said Brant told him he robbed banks to get money the way other people go to restaurants to get food.

He is one of the most dangerous around here ever," Ricci said after Brant's escape.

But Brant had also been director of a Rhode Island Challenge House, a halfway house for former inmates, and had been president of a chapter of the Junior Chamber of Commerce at the Adult Correctional Center in Rhode Island.

Won awards Under his leadership, the prison chapter won seven awards at the 1967 state convention, more than any chapter.

Brant's troubles began in 1963 when he was sentenced to 10 years in Rhode Island prison for conviction of assault with intent to murder. Three years later, he was convicted of slaying a fellow inmate with a razor.

That same year, Brant was identified as one of six inmates involved in a large-scale drug smuggling operation. Brant also served five years of a 12-year term after his 1968 murder conviction in the Providence slaying of Mario Pandozzi, one of his best friends, Pandozzi had accused Brant of having an affair with his wife.

Three years ago, Brant was acquitted of charges he shot to death two Massachusetts men and dumped their handcuffed bodies on the property of Butler Hospital in Providence.

Convicted in July Last July, Brant and a codefendant were convicted of killing Gustavus Charnick of Boston and a still unidentified woman whose bodies were found in shallow graves in Ledyard, Conn., four years after they were shot to death.

During the 1975 trial in New London, Conn., Brant posed as a lawyer and escaped from the courthouse, stole a car and was captured after a high-speed chase at the University of Rhode Island campus in Kingston.

He was also linked to a half dozen bank robberies in the Northeast and had escaped from custody several times. Escaped in 1975

In 1975, he escaped from a Burlington jail when he thrust a nail at a guard's throat to get a key for a jail cell.

Mitchell to serve term in Alabama

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The Bureau of Prisons said Wednesday that convicted Watergate conspirator John Mitchell will serve his sentence at a prison camp in Alabama because he was a former law enforcement officer - attorney general of the United States - and officials are concerned for his personal safety.

Mitchell, ordered to prison on June 22, has been assigned to the minimum security camp at Maxwell Air Force Base at Montgomery, Ala., instead of a prison at Allenwood, Pa., which is closer to his New York home, a spokesman said.

Mitchell and Richard Nixon's two top aides, H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, were convicted Jan. 1, 1976, of conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury in the Watergate cover-up. They were sentenced to between 2 1/2 and 8 years in prison.

The Supreme Court rejected petitions from Mitchell and Haldeman to review their sentences and on Monday, Judge John Sirica gave them just over two weeks to clean up their personal affairs ordered them to jail.

Ehrlichman's appeal also was rejected, but he had begun serving his sentence voluntarily in October.

A spokesman said of Mitchell: "We are naturally concerned about his safety as a former law enforcement officer and we are placing him in a smaller minimum security camp where it is believed he will be secure."

Maxwell, he said, has 300 inmates compared to more than 540 at the Federal Prison Camp at Allenwood.

Town reports first violations of new state water standards

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

The Town of Manchester has reported its first violations of new water standards that went into effect at the beginning of this month.

The town is planning improvements in its water system and has received an exemption from meeting the standards at this time. But, it still must report all violations to the state and also to the water customers who are affected.

Bob Young, of the Water Department, said that the violations have been recorded at the Lydall St. reservoir, where tests from the past week have shown that the water exceeds or is at the turbidity level allowed by the new standards. Turbidity measures the amount of particles suspended in the water.

The new standards, which are part of the safe drinking water act, permit a maximum turbidity measure of 1.0. Since last Thursday, water from the reservoir has had daily readings of 1.0, 1.0, 1.3, 1.2, 1.2, 1.1, and 1.0.

Young described a reading of 1.0 as being "on the borderline" of violating the new standard, which went into effect June 1. The old standard permitted a reading of up to 3.0 for turbidity, he said.

The turbidity reading is for water directly from the reservoir. Frequently, the turbidity level increases as it is shipped through pipes to homes, Young said. But, the standards apply to measurements taken directly from the water source, he said.

Manchester is planning to make improvements to its water treatment and distribution systems. The Water Department recently received an exemption that will permit it to exceed some of the standards established in the act. The state, within the next year, will present the town with a timetable for meeting the new standards.

Until that timetable is implemented, the town must notify the state of any violations of the new standards. Those customers who are affected will also be notified of the violations on their next bills.

Young said that the water from the reservoir is safe to drink. The turbidity problem develops because the water body is only about 15 million gallons, which is small.

"It gets very easily stirred up," he said.

Although the Lydall St. reservoir is the only violation reported so far, extending from Long Island Sound and Block Island Sound into the Atlantic Ocean was ended Monday night.

The families of the four missing men returned a plane to continue the search Tuesday, and Mrs. Grasso asked the Connecticut National Guard to assign available pilots Wednesday to survey the waters off southeastern Connecticut.

No trace - other than the gasoline can of the men or their boat has been found.

Guard to decide today on further search

HARTFORD (UPI) - The Connecticut National Guard today was to decide whether to continue its search for the bodies of four New Britain boaters missing since Friday.

The Coast Guard said Wednesday it had determined a gasoline can found last Sunday belonged to the 15-foot boat which left Waterford on a fishing trip Saturday and never returned.

Wildlife making comeback

By United Press International

Connecticut wildlife experts say black bears, moose, coyotes, ospreys, bald eagles, beavers and herons are making a comeback in the Nutmeg state.

Dr. Robert McDowell, professor of wildlife ecology at the University of Connecticut, said Wednesday black bears have been seen in the northwestern corner of the state which has the largest undeveloped tracts of woodlands.

McDowell said he is sure the bears will stay in the state if people leave them alone.

"People pretty much panic when they sight one," he said. "It seems a shame. Black bears are generally inoffensive."

McDowell said the giant moose has also been sighted in Connecticut, but probably won't return in large numbers because the animal needs a lot of open land.

One animal that has moved to Connecticut as a "permanent resident" is the coyote. "They're very adaptable, much more so than the wolf" which doesn't exist in the state, McDowell said.

Connecticut's reforestation is credited with enticing the animals back. Only 100 years ago, two-thirds of the land area consisted of open fields. Now stone walls once built in pastures are hidden in woodlands that cover two-thirds of the state's land area.

Thomas Hoehn, a wildlife biologist for the state Department of Environmental Protection, said ospreys and herons are recovering from near-extinction because of federal bans on pesticides.

The ospreys produced up to 14 young last year, he said. Donald Hopkins of Windsor, considered the state's expert on eagles, said at least a dozen eagles spent last winter in the state but so far they are only migrants and actually live farther north.

McDowell said the beaver was wiped out in Connecticut by about 1800 because of trapping and draining of ponds. About 30 years ago the beaver began returning from Massachusetts and New York.

Closing session reveals the best and the worst

HARTFORD (UPI) - The closing of the legislature brings out the best - or the worst - in everybody depending on how you look at it.

The traditional ceremony Wednesday night marking the end of this year's session was no exception.

Here, in no particular order (because there was very little), are some of the events that occurred before Secretary of State Gloria Schaffer greeted the session to an end and proclaimed, "God save the State of Connecticut."

Gov. Ella T. Grasso topped her list of legislative achievements by lauding lawmakers for making the praying mantis the official state insect.

Sen. Robert Houley, D-Somers, the man most responsible for keeping tabs on the state's pursestrings, crawled across the House floor on his knees.

The Joint House and Senate session belted out a rendition of "Happy Birthday" in honor of House Speaker James J. Kennedy, D-Hartford, who celebrated his birthday Wednesday.

Rep. Eugene Migliaro, R-Wolcott, an amiable legislator who is never afraid to speak his piece, sent a paper airplane swirling through the air that hit Kennedy's podium.

Mrs. Grasso, in the midst of her farewell message, slipped and thanked the legislature for passing "a graduated income tax," something she violently opposes. She meant to say "a reduction in the dividends tax."

Rep. Robert Carragher, D-Hartford, was appointed to find Senate members and bring them to the House chamber for the joint meeting. Since all senators were already present when the appointment was made, Carragher stood and informed Kennedy his mission was completed.

When the frivolity had ended, the lawmakers, many with bloodshot eyes from the numerous parties held this week, paraded out of the House, their duty done.

Mrs. Grasso cast a note of seriousness before she left. Turning to one of the House leaders, she said, "See you at the trailer session."

The so-called trailer session, to be held next month, is called so the legislature can override the governor's vetoes if it chooses.

DEAR READER - Librium is one of the most popular tranquilizers...

It is very few side effects as medicines go. It can cause problems in a few cases but reducing the dosage usually relieves these.

There are two other precautions that people using Librium should take. Never use alcohol and Librium together...

My question is will taking cod liver oil make my blood pressure rise? I took it last winter and my skin seemed to have improved...

DEAR READER - No, cod liver oil will not raise your blood pressure, unless you take so much in combination with the vitamin D you get in your milk and food...

I don't really approve of cod liver oil for your skin. If your skin is dry you may take some cod liver oil to spread over your face and lock in the natural skin moisture without running the risk of vitamin D overdose.

Russia and China duel in world of spirits

By GERALD NADLER NEW YORK (UPI) - China and Russia, who have clashed with guns on a frozen Siberian river and with barbed words in diplomatic forums, are dueling in a new spirited arena - vodka.

Peking, which boasts a purer communism than Moscow's, is making similar claims for Great Wall vodka.

Great Wall costs more than 'Stolichnaya' despite 'pirated' advertising claims that the Russian vodka is the world's most expensive.

New China Liqueur, which imports Great Wall, seeks $5 million in damages from Pepsico, Inc. and Monsieur Henri Wines Ltd. for "false and deceptive advertising."

Great Wall costs $2.99 a fifth and Stolichnaya $7.99 for a fifth of 50 proof, contrary to Monsieur Henri's advertising that Stolichnaya is the "most expensive vodka in America," the suit says.

The suit says New China advertised Great Wall as the "world's most expensive vodka," and Monsieur Henri sought to "usurp, pirate and take advantage" of the slogan.

New China Liqueur announced it was importing Great Wall in 1973, adding a new dimension to the rivalry between the Communist giants, which battled with artillery on Damansky Island in the Ussuri River in December 1969.

Charles Abrams, chairman of the China Trade Corp., which initiated the import of the Chinese vodka, said he discovered it under a "Sunflower" label at a trade fair in China.

He and his Chinese traders renamed it Great Wall to make it sound more Chinese and less like a vinegar oil. "We are into 37 states now," Abrams said.

Stolichnaya was brought to the United States in a barter arrangement by Pepsico, Inc., in which Pepsi Cola was exchanged for Russia's premier vodka. Monsieur Henri became its distributor.

According to an advertising booklet at liquor stores, Stolichnaya is made from "the finest wheat and pure glacial waters from the River Neva," which flows through Leningrad.

Stolichnaya is "produced in Russia's oldest distillery, and its distillation process has been a closely kept secret for more than a century," the book says.

"Great Wall," according to its advertising booklet, "is a synergy of ancient secrets," brought to China by Russian emigrants fleeing the Bolsheviks who seized power from the czars 60 years ago.

"Today the Chinese workers of Tsingtau are the true heirs to appreciation of the finest vodka," the booklet says.

Hippocrates' foods are a far cry from hamburger

By MARCIA PARKER
 BOSTON (UPI) — The meals of alfalfa, bean sprouts and wheat grass at the Hippocrates Health Institute are a far cry from the Great American Hamburger.
 But founder Dr. Ann Wigmore is convinced food prices and a growing nutritional awareness will steer many more to organic home-grown foods.
 "Rest assured that people who work at fast-food places will say 'I can't eat this; why should I serve it to other people,'" she says. "It will become a necessity, indeed a responsibility to take care of our bodies."
 "America is eating itself to death," she says.

Elegant greenhouse

The 14-year-old institute, known as The Mansion, looks like an elegant greenhouse among the aging buildings on Exeter Street in Boston's historic Back Bay area. The decor of the seven-story structure is mostly wheat grass and alfalfa sprouts in various stages of growth.

Students who come from around the country live, work, study and eat at the institute. There they learn an alternative to processed foods — how to grow their own organic plants, without chemical additives, and food preservation.

"I had a real need to improve my own health... to help humanity," explains Mrs. Wigmore. "When you see something valuable, you want to share it." As a child, she suffered numerous health problems which her grandmother treated with herbs.

For father of medicine

She named her institute after Hippocrates, the father of medicine, whose motto was "Your Medicine Shall Be Your Food."
 "Organically grown living food nourishes the body and enables it to be self-cleansing, self-regulating, and self-healing," said Mrs. Wigmore, author of "Be Your Own Doctor."

"It isn't treatment or curing we do here," she said. "There is nothing the body can't heal itself of."
 Some guests stay several weeks. Students can receive academic credits; others come just to cleanse their bodies. The daily schedule is rigorous, beginning at 7 a.m. and ending well into the evening, and includes exercise and classes.

Great for friendships

"It is a great place to meet people, to develop long-term friendships," says an Antioch (Ohio) College student on an extended work-study program at the institute.
 The students sprout mung beans, lentils and chick peas on long trays of unfertilized soil. Every morning, they help unload the fresh produce delivered daily from the institute's farm in Stoughton.

The fledgling plants then are soaked and made ready to eat.
 "Uncooked food is the principal of health," says Mrs. Wigmore.

Cooking destroys

She maintains the cooking process destroys the nutritional values of food. And, as staff members are quick to point out, no cooking means less energy and no meat means lower grocery bills.
 On Sunday afternoons, the institute is open to visitors, who are served a taste of just about everything it has to offer — fruits, nuts, lentils, wheat grass juice, salads with alfalfa and home-grown lettuce. There are no cooked foods, dairy products or meat.

Judge dismisses one murder charge

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal judge Wednesday dismissed murder charges against one of two Filipino nurses accused of poisoning patients at a veterans hospital but kept poisoning and conspiracy charges stand.
 The action by U.S. District Judge Philip Pratt came in the 10th week of the trial of Leonora Perez, 32, and Filipina Narciso, 31.

Pratt cleared Mrs. Perez of the one remaining murder count against her, but left standing three poisoning counts and conspiracy charges. Miss Narciso still faces one murder count, five poisoning and five conspiracy charges.

The two nurses were charged with injecting Pavulon, a powerful muscle relaxant drug, into nine patients at the VA Hospital in Ann Arbor in the summer of 1975. Two of the patients died of resulting breathing failures.
 The judge dropped two of the seven poisoning charges against both nurses.

Defense attorneys had asked for dismissal of all charges.
 The defendants said they were pleased with the decision and confident they would be acquitted.
 "We think the American justice system is fair," said Mrs. Perez.

The defense begins presenting its case today with Miss Narciso as its first witness.
 Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Yanko said the prosecution felt the "essential case" remains the same despite Pratt's ruling.

Before Pratt handed down his decision, he emphasized that his ruling was based in part on past criminal cases prosecuted on the basis of "circumstantial evidence."

Moyers looks into CIA's Cuban army

JOAN HANAUER
 UPI Television Writer
 NEW YORK (UPI) — Bill Moyers began with two basic questions and wound up with a two-hour documentary history of Miami-based Cuban terrorists who learned their trade from the CIA.
 Moyers said in an interview that "CBS Reports: The CIA's Secret Army," which goes on the air June 10, 9-11 p.m., Eastern time, began with an attempt to learn "Who are these terrorists and where did they come from?" The answers led along a trail of blood, assassination and betrayal that runs from the Cuban exile community in Miami to the Bay of Pigs, through attempts to assassinate Cuban President Fidel Castro, through the Watergate break-in.

 Even some humor There's even a little humor — as in the plot to sprinkle Castro's shoes with a substance that would defile his beard.
 The extraordinary film records honorable men on both sides — among the Cubans who felt betrayed and the Americans who believe they acted in the best interests of their country during the late 1950s and early 1960s.

 Among the CIA men interviewed by Moyers was Richard Bissell, CIA deputy director from 1959 to 1962 and subsequently the CIA official responsible for the Bay of Pigs operation and the Mafia plots against Castro.
 He has no serious second doubts about his work "in the context of the times when these decisions were made," except for the need for eternal secrecy, some qualms about the Mafia, and a twinge that the CIA took assassination too lightly.
 Felt betrayed As for the Cubans, Moyers said in an interview, "These were honorable men who felt betrayed by officials and politicians, felt they were loyal to people who did not return that loyalty."
 Now a few hundred of them use their CIA-taught skills to operate as terrorists out of Miami. Moyers was asked what he would do about them.
 "You have to arrest them," he said, expressing sympathy for the Cubans, but adding, "You have to stop it. We cannot tolerate an American city being used as a base for terrorists. They learned from the CIA and we must stop what we let loose."
 Moyers said that as the war in Vietnam began to dominate American thinking, the Cubans felt by the officials weary. When he was an aide to former President Lyndon B. Johnson, he had no inkling of the "CIA's secret army."

Red Buttons spreads 'Sunshine'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Now that Tony Randall has been elevated to the bench and Jack Rubyman hangs out at the Los Angeles County morgue, there's room on television for another odd couple.
 A geriatric odd couple is what audiences will get tonight, 8-9 p.m., when NBC broadcasts "The Sunshine Boys," a television version of the Neil Simon hit comedy.
 Red Buttons plays a grouchy septuagenarian, a former vaudevillian living in a cheap New York hotel — and in the past.
 Given the formal greeting, "How do you do?" he replies, "In some cities, terrific."

The difference between the two men — a universal difference — is reflected in a conversation about dying.
 Buttons says, "When I die, I want you to put on my tombstone, 'Wait, I'm not through yet.'"
 Stander answers, "Dying isn't the worst thing that can happen to you — just the last."
 With all their philosophy, both men are feeling their age, both are forgetful and unsteady. Their relatives want them to team up, as they did as Lewis and Clark in show business for 46 years.
 Buttons is irascible, fighting age and the indignities it brings with his best weapons, an unpleasant wit and a refusal to

But Buttons and Stander did not part friends — Stander decided to retire a decade earlier, breaking up the act and putting his partner in unwilling retirement. Buttons is just the man to carry a grudge for 10 years.
 The two make a tentative start toward reunion in this hour-long show, which still could turn up as a series on NBC late in the year.
 "The Sunshine Boys" concentrates on Buttons, with a strong assist from Stander, in a delightful hour of humor that owes a great deal to the professionals who deliver the lines.

Ofota Mayor Antonio C. Atalig said Wednesday the never found any other bird that flew as far, according to new Labor Department figures.
Atalig said the record was established Tuesday at about 10:30 a.m. when a chicken named Flying on Rota, another island in the northern Marianas.

New bill hits snag
WETHERSFIELD (UPI) — A state law requiring public financial disclosure in legal gambling ventures was only two days' old when it hit its first snag Wednesday.
Racetrack developer Ronald Mooney had appeared before the state gaming commission to answer questions about its failure to meet deadlines in raising money for the state's first horse track.
John Peters, a securities attorney representing Mooney's Sawmill Brook Racing Association Inc., told the commission he could not disclose stock information because of federal Securities and Exchange Commission regulations.
Peters said an SEC exemption that allows Mooney's firm to offer stock privately instead of on the open market could be endangered by revealing the stock information.
Peters' claim was backed by an SEC official, William E. Toomey, assistant chief counsel of the SEC's Division of Corporation Finance. He said it is critical the stock offering be kept nonpublic.
"If the terms make the press,

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fidel Castro doesn't foresee an early resumption of full U.S.-Cuban diplomatic relations, but he said he has the White House — discouraged belief that full diplomatic links are near.
"I believe that depends on the good will of both parties," Castro said. "I believe that it also depends on time. I don't think they could be re-established during Carter's (current) term. Maybe in Carter's second term, between 1980 and 1984."
Human rights, an important aspect of Carter's policy toward Cuba, came up only once briefly during the interview when Castro told Walters, "Don't forget about human rights." Then he laughed.
The Soviet Union, the most outspoken critic of Carter's human rights policy, "is the freest of all countries," Castro said.
He acknowledged there is no freedom in Cuba as it is understood in the United States. "We do not have your same conceptions, our concept of freedom is not yours," he said.

Legislature moves to tag lobbyists
HARTFORD (UPI) — Lobbyists will be easier to pick out at the Connecticut state Capitol next year. They'll be wearing badges.
The legislature Wednesday approved a bill requiring lobbyists to wear identification and barring them from giving any lawmaker or state official more than $25 in gifts, except food and drink, in one year.
Lobbyists would have to submit financial statements detailing their spending.
At the same time, the bill waters down the powers of the state ethics commission set up earlier in the week to oversee the activities of lobbyists and state officials.
The measure, which now goes to Gov. Ella T. Grasso, was approved, 143-1, by the House and adopted, 32-4, by the Senate.
The House approved the bill Tuesday night after more than three hours of debate. The Senate Wednesday rejected two House amendments and sent it back to the lower chamber.
After relatively little debate, the House rubber-stamped the Senate version and sent it to Mr. Grasso.
Several senators were critical of the bill.
"We feel we must make a big impression on the editorial pages and we vote for this bill, but we know right well it's a bad bill," said Sen. Louis Cella, D-Waterbury.
Under the measure, lobbyists who earn or spend more than $200 a year to influence legislation or state agency action would be required to register with the new, seven-member ethics commission.
The legislature approved several amendments to the bill, including a provision that would require lobbyists to report each time they spent $25 on dinner or drinks for any group of legislators or state officials.
Furthermore, lobbyists would be prevented from spending more than $25 a year on gifts, other food or drink, for any lawmaker, state official or member of their family.
Another amendment would take away the new ethics commission's subpoena power for preliminary investigations which the legislature had given the panel Monday.
The ethics commission's lobbyist regulations will be reviewed by a state Regulations Review Committee.
The legislature tossed out a provision in the original House bill that would require state and municipal employees who actively push for legislation to be considered lobbyists.

Annual report issued on unemployment
WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than 20 million Americans endured unemployment at one time or another in 1976, including nearly 3 million who never found any job all year, according to new Labor Department figures.
Some 20.4 million persons were unemployed a week or longer during 1976. About 8.6 million of them were jobless for 15 weeks or more, and 2.9 million were jobless for a year or more. By comparison, fewer than 8 million persons were listed as jobless last November when unemployment reached a one-month peak of 8 percent for 1974.
The total number of persons who experienced joblessness last year was about 600,000 less than in 1975, and 2 million higher than the pre-recession days of 1974.
About 42 percent of all last year's jobless Americans suffered long-term unemployment of 15 weeks or more, compared to an average of 33 percent during the early 1970's.
The increase in jobholders last year was exceeded only by a record rise during 1973. The proportion of working age Americans who held a job last year rose to 67 percent.

Town to get $1.9 million in public works funding

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
The Town of Manchester will receive $1.9 million in the second phase of the Public Works Employment Act, according to figures released Wednesday by the Economic Development Administration (EDA).
The Board of Directors now must decide how to distribute the money, and it appears that there may be a battle brewing for the appropriation of the $1,907,000.
The $4-billion federal program provides full funding for construction projects that have been planned and can be started within a short period of time.
The State of Connecticut received over $78 million in the second phase of the program and divided it among the state government and 71 cities and towns.
The first phase of the program drew criticism because some of the state money went to Greenwich, West Hartford, and Westport, three of the state's wealthiest communities. Revisions to the program formula were made to improve the distribution for the second phase.
For Manchester, at least, the changes proved effective. The town had been one of those shut out of funding in the first phase awards, which were announced last December.
Now, the Board of Directors must decide how to distribute the town's grant among the seven projects that were sent in for funding through the program. Towns that received funding in the second phase are being given the opportunity to set their own priorities for the funding of projects.
Charles McCarthy, assistant town manager, said that the board will probably discuss the matter at its Tuesday meeting.
A proposal to expand and renovate the Police Department headquarters was the highest-ranking Manchester project in the first phase of the program, while all submitted projects were rated.
"We feel it's still the number one priority," Police Chief Robert D. Lannan said this morning.
Lannan said that he feels the $2.1 million proposal has been unfairly described in the past as a police "lock-up."
The project would include a police detention area, but it would also include several other improvements to the entire headquarters area, he said.
Other areas which received the following amounts through the program: Vernon, $1.2 million (See page 2B); Bolton, $151,000; Wington, $148,000; Glastonbury, $416,000; South Windsor, $438,000; and Tolland, $128,000.
The prudenial board of Center Congregational Church will meet tonight at 7:30 in the church parlor.
The first of three classes for persons interested in joining Emanuel Lutheran Church will be conducted tonight at 7:30 in the Rev. Ronald Fournier's study.
Jehovah's Witnesses will have a theatrical school and service meeting tonight at 7:30 at 726 N. Main St.

Gunman wounds Turkish envoy

ROME (UPI) — A gunman shot the Turkish ambassador to the Vatican on the left cheek but also smashed a tooth. The second shot hit him in the left shoulder.
Carim is the third Turkish envoy to be shot since Oct. 22, 1975, when the Turkish envoy to Vienna, Danis Tunali, was cut down by sub-machine gun fire.

Market robbed by armed bandit
An undetermined amount of cash was taken Wednesday night in an armed robbery at the Finast Supermarket, 214 Spencer St.
Manchester Police said that a woman went to one of the checkout lines with some grocery items. She handed the cashier a typewritten note that said she had a gun and wanted the money from the register, police said.
The cashier handed the woman the money and the note was also taken by the woman, police said. The woman did not actually point the gun at the cashier, but the weapon was seen by another employee of the store as the woman left, police reports said.
A clerk from the store followed the woman out, and she squinted something at him, police said. The clerk was able to describe the auto she drove off in — a 1978 or 1977 Camaro with a New Jersey license marker.
The incident occurred at 7:41 p.m., according to police. The woman was described as about 20-years-old with black curly hair. She is about five feet, five inches tall and weighs about 120 pounds, police said.

Better July 4 show costing more

East Hartford people take their Fourth of July fireworks serious. The Town Council Tuesday night approved a bid, not the lowest bid, from the Ideal Display Co. of Moosic, Pa. This is the firm which provided the well-received 1975 fireworks. That year East Hartford teamed with Manchester and ran the display from the top of Wickham Park at the town line.
In 1976 the fireworks were a fizzle, many townspeople said.
That display was put on by North American Fireworks of New York which billed the town $5,000. Both Council Chairman George Dagon and Minority Leader Esther B. Clarke said it was disappointing.

Tax revenue shortage could create deficit

JAMES TUREK, Manchester's collector of revenue, has projected a $330,000 tax revenue deficit for the 1977-78 fiscal year. Such a shortage may result in a budget deficit for the entire fiscal year.
"At this point, it's very close. It's too close to call," Controller Thomas S. Moore said.
"There are other revenues that are in excess of estimates," Moore said. He estimated that there are about $200,000 in such additional revenues, which will offset some of the tax deficit.
Much of that figure, about $120,000, is from unexpected revenues for special education programs.
Moore also said that there are some unexpended appropriations in the 1976-77 budget, but he did say this total "won't amount to a great deal."

Region's leaders voice pessimism

HARTFORD (UPI) — Public and private leaders in the Northeast believe the region may be doomed economically, but their pessimism may cause half the problem, according to the head of a study group which interviewed them.
"The fires of entrepreneurship have sort of gone out here," said Ralph Widner, whose group recently completed a study for the Boston-based Council for Northeast Economic Action.
The Academy for Contemporary Problems of Washington D.C., interviewed 850 public and private leaders in the Northeast.
Widner said Wednesday most regional leaders believe the Northeast may be doomed because it's an expensive place to do business, its plants are old and its population is declining.
But Widner said he thinks a poor attitude is half the region's trouble.
"There's too much gloom and doom," he told the Greater Hartford Chamber of Commerce.
Widner said the council should systematically identify places where industry costs can be lowered.
A regional labor management committee should also be set up to monitor supply and demand in the labor market, linking job-seekers with jobs and training, he said.
And Widner said some way must be found to interest investors in new small business enterprises. He said the rate at which new firms are founded in the Northeast has dropped because investors have become conservative.

Manchester police report

Police are investigating a break reported early this morning into a home on Spruce St. A total of $100 missing, police said.
The four women were arrested in East Hartford at 10 p.m. Wednesday. When the arrest was made, items from two Manchester stores — K-Mart and Marshall's — were found, police said.
The women, all residents of Willimantic, are: Luz Machavel, 28; Isabel Lopez, 31; Iris M. Lago, 25; and Ida Santos, 38. All were charged with missing merchandise from the store.

RHS girls' athletics have come a long way

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

One of today's expressions — "You've come a long way baby" — could be applied to the Girls Athletic Activities Club (GAAC) of Rockville High School.

The club Wednesday night celebrated its 25th anniversary, as did Clare Albom, its founder. Mrs. Albom is supervisor of physical education. When she came to Rockville, she said she took Mrs. Alice Hammar and the late Mrs. Sarah Brooks, members of the Board of Education, that she would develop a physical education program and a GAAC that would be second to none.

She said she didn't realize what a battle and a challenge it would be. When she started teaching she discovered the inventory for the girls' physical education program amounted to $50.

She said there were badminton racquets but no birds or nets; a pingpong table but no balls or paddles, some old baseball bats and some rotting wall mats. The inventory for the girls' athletic equipment now runs about $15,000, she said.

The club had 25 girls in it the first year. Now it has more than 500. She said one of the first things she did the first year was to make the girls wear uniforms because they had been used to wearing anything for gym.

For activities the first year, the girls chose basketball, softball, gymnastics, folk dancing and tennis. At that time, girls were only allowed to use the gym one day a week because the boys had to use it. They did have it two days a week when boys went outside for football.

With the move to the new high school, the girls acquired their own gym, even though it's smaller than the one for the boys.

The first girls' varsity basketball team won 15 games and lost only one. They had a banquet for which Mrs. Albom had to buy all of the awards because there wasn't any budget money.

Mrs. Albom didn't receive any salary for after-school activities and many times she had to drive the girls home. They came from other areas towns as tuition students, so it meant trips to Somers, Ellington and Tolland.

She recalled that some nights when the weather was too bad to drive, she put all the girls up in her own home.

Because of the lack of budget money for many years, the girls had to earn money to buy equipment they needed. They sold hodgepods to the students. They also turned in soda bottles for two cents a bottle.

When the high school moved in 1959 to Loveland Hill, the program expanded to include golf, soccer, archery, badminton and bowling.

She said people who have criticized the program the most are those who know the least about it.

"The best constructive criticism came from the students and because of their input the club grew," Mrs. Albom said.

Referring to her statement made when she started, Mrs. Albom said that by 1963 the physical education program was considered one of the best in the state. By 1967, when Mrs. Albom was selected to be a Master Clinician for the Lifetime Sports Editors' Project in Washington, D.C., headed by Charles (Bud) Wilkinson, the program had reached national recognition.

In 1967, Mrs. Albom was selected by the state to be its representative to the National Intramural Council because of the local program.

In 1974, the program was selected as one of the 10 best in the United States and written up in the National Physical Education Journal.

"I can now look back and tell Mrs. Hammar, the goal has been met... an era has ended," she said.

The program has come full cycle. Next year the name will have to be changed. Boys will be included and the program will be co-ed wherever feasible.

In many cases Mrs. Albom has had mothers and then their daughters in her classes. A long list of her former students have gone on to become physical education teachers.

Others have become famous in other ways. Judi Genovese won fame as a skater, competed in the U.S. Championships and won, and also competed in the Olympics.

Mrs. Albom also had her own daughter, Susan, as a student. She teaches physical education to the handicapped.

"Wherever I travel, I'm almost certain to bump into one of my former students," Mrs. Albom said.

When she came to Rockville it was only to be for three years. Now, 25 years later, she still isn't ready to leave. After all, it will take at least three years to get the co-ed program in full swing.

It was a sentimental evening for Clare Albom as she received many gifts at the 25th anniversary banquet of the Girls Athletic Activities Club, which she started at Rockville High School. Her daughter, Susan, one of her former students, puts a necklace around her neck as Val Curtis, president of the club this year, looks on. (Herald photo by Richmond)

GAAC gives many awards

Eileen O'Brien, a senior at Rockville High School, was awarded the "72" Club scholarship at the 25th annual banquet of the Girls Athletic Activities Club Wednesday night.

And for the first time, a blazer was given a junior. Robin Tierney was awarded the jacket for accumulating a total of 425 points in three years.

Valerie Curtis, a senior, was awarded the president's plaque and Lisa Warner was named the school champion in badminton. She also received charms for being on the var-city basketball team, for being on the softball team, a charm bracelet for accumulating 225 points plus a charm for accumulating 325 points.

Maureen Moriarty was the final winner in tennis and Diane Briery was runner-up.

Tina Boutot, Laura Glidden, Barbara Hesse and Diane Pavano made up the winning freshman-sophomore bowling team. Carol Clark had the high average of 141; Carol Clark, high triple, 210-173-127; Nancy

Vernon gets grant for police station

The Town of Vernon has been designated to receive $1,283,000 from the Federal Economic Development Administration (EDA), which will allow the building of a new police station.

The town had applied for a federal grant of $1.21 million last year for expansion of the police facility. Just before Christmas town officials were notified that the application had been turned down.

The town was informed of the new grant Wednesday afternoon by the office of Connecticut Congressman Christopher Dodd.

The proposed new station would be built next to the existing building on West Rd. Plans were designed last year with the help of the National Clearinghouse on Criminal Justice Planning and Architecture.

The proposed building will consist of 18,000 square feet and is designed to meet the police needs of the town until the year 2000.

Budget transfers okay
The Vernon Town Council approved several budget transfers Tuesday night but agreed some procedures for budget transfers should be set to cover all town departments.

One of the items questioned was a transfer of $2,298 in the registrars of voters budget to buy a new voting machine.

Some council members said this was turned down when the budget was being considered. Councilwoman Marie Herbst said such a move is setting a dangerous precedent.

Other transfers approved: $448 in the Vernon Ambulance Corps' budget to meet the payroll; $450 in the public

Hebron health issue fades

Only about 10 residents attended the last Hebron Board of Selectmen meeting, urging the board to continue a health services contract with the Town of Glastonbury. Hebron residents might lose out if the contract was dropped, residents said.

Selectmen have been considering eliminating the contract and hiring someone to perform the tasks. A number of residents had petitioned the selectmen for a Town Meeting on the matter.

Selectmen declined to call a Town Meeting but opened their regular meeting for discussion of the issue.

Attendance at the meeting was about a third of the number of persons who had signed the petition. In general, the group praised the quality of service provided by Glastonbury and questioned whether the proposed change would provide equal service.

First Selectman Aaron Reid said he hoped to obtain more service for the same money, or less than is being paid to Glastonbury. He said if selectmen found they could not provide equal or better service through a local system, they would continue the Glastonbury arrangement.

David Marnecki questioned whether the funds budgeted, $7,200 for the Glastonbury contract and $275 for office expenses, could provide more than the present 10 hours per week for the sanitarian and the office of director of health.

Reid said the Glastonbury contract was only a temporary arrangement until the town's members, to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Everett Graham.

board plans to hire a registered sanitarian to do septic work and food service inspections.

Reid said the anticipated advent of a practicing physician in town makes a local system possible. He said Dr. William Elizey of Columbia has agreed to accept the appointment of health director until a doctor is established in town.

In connection with the proposed medical service, Reid said a family practice is anticipated with Dr. John Hayes and Dr. Peter Jones and pediatric service with Dr. Charles Okatan and Dr. Richard Moriarty.

In other business, the selectmen will call a Town Meeting June 13 to elect three Regional District I Board of Health members, to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Everett Graham.

Chamber move sought

William Yetz, community relations officer for the Vernon Police Department and a member of the board of directors of the Rockville Area Chamber of Commerce, asked the board Wednesday to consider moving the chamber office to a more accessible spot.

The office is on the second floor of a two-story building at Lafayette Square in the northeast section of town. Yetz said he had talked with many members and prospective members and they feel the office is out of the way.

Yetz made a motion which called for the move to take place by Oct. 1, or before, but the motion was withdrawn to allow Steve Lamont, chamber president, to appoint a committee to study the matter.

Lamont said several things were not considered in the proposal and he cited finances as one of them.

Board member Robert Tedoldi said the matter of moving to a storefront operation by the executive committee. He also rejected the financial issue to be considered as well as the fact that the chamber's primary purpose is to serve the business community.

Discipline, drugs, respect are concerns at school

South Windsor

The school houses about 1,000 students in Grades 7 and 8 — an age group, according to School Supt. Robert Goldman, which is often a challenge to motivate and handle.

Goldman said although a number of the questionnaires expressed concern over reported problems at the school, basically the results were positive.

The survey, asking for comments on the quality of student life at the school, were sent to Timothy Edwards students, parents, Ellsworth students and parents, and to parents of elementary students who will be attending the school next year.

The middle school has been criticized because of reported lack of control and discipline.

Areas which received the most favorable comments were the activities available to the students, interscholastic athletics, music, the clubs and curriculum choices.

Concerns of the teachers at the school include vandalism, student disrespect, and discipline.

The Committee on Student Life and Discipline, organized to study the situation at Timothy Edwards, has recommended student involvement be increased at the school. They have proposed the following to accomplish this:

- Organize the Student Council before the year begins. Hold elections so incoming children, now in sixth grade, can be involved in student government.
- Use student monitors to encourage the student responsibility.
- Establish a Big Brother, Big Sister program in which each incoming student would be assigned to someone who could show him around the answer questions.

- Provide more orientation time to give students more opportunity to get to know the administration and become familiar with the school.
- Institute a campaign to build school pride through various projects such as mural painting, cleanup week and poster contests.
- Organize a student newspaper.

The committee found that parental involvement is minimal at the school. Two recommendations were made to involve the parents to a greater degree:

- Actively recruit parents to help in various capacities at the school.

Send more newsletters home to inform parents of what is going on at the school, to stimulate their interest in becoming more involved or visiting the school.

The committee felt there were sufficient rules at the school, but problems stem from enforcement of the present rules.

The following recommendations were made to help enforce the rules:

- Assign specific, appropriate penalties for common infractions of school rules.
- Give parents of each incoming student a copy of the student handbook, to acquaint them with school rules before the school year begins.

Increase supervision in halls, laboratories and other areas where problems are likely to occur.

- Provide an in-house suspension family to deal with students who cannot be supervised during at-home suspension.
- Provide counseling services.
- Notify parents if their children are involved in serious or continued infractions of the rules.

A large part of the committee's discussion centered around the size of the school itself. They felt the school needed either more administrators or fewer students.

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

Most of the peonies we grow in home gardens are of the double herbaceous type, dying down to ground level in late fall and sending up new shoots in the spring. They bloom reliably and have been unusually beautiful this year.

Far less common are tree peonies, such as those that have also just finished blooming at the home of the Carl A. Carlsons in Bolton. They are not really trees. Four feet as tall as they will grow. The stem is definitely woody, however, and does not die down in the fall. It is ready in the spring to send out new leaves and huge flowers.

Tree peonies at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. Carlson, on Brandy Rd., Bolton. These grow on woody stems that are winter-hardy in the Bolton climate. The largest of these blooms measures 10 inches in diameter. (Herald photo by Dunn)

Mrs. Carlson (Myrtle) has two tree peonies, one of which failed to bloom this year and is evidently waiting for another season. The peony that bloomed can be described as a rosy pink. The petals have a distinctive crepe-like texture. The centers have a cushion of bright yellow anthers.

The leaves will stay attractive all summer, but will drop in the fall. Mrs. Carlson will put some mulch around the stems for winter but isn't sure this is necessary except when plants are young. She has had these tree peonies nearly 20 years.

Sunshine and shade

Partly by accident, Mrs. Carlson chose a location for her tree peonies that closely matches the recommendations in my encyclopedia. The sun shines on them in the morning and again in late afternoon, while in the hottest part of the day they are shaded by the branches of tall trees.

The blossoms fade in hot, bright sun. It happens, also, unfortunately, that we are talking about a plant ahead of its best planting season. Tree peonies are best started in September or October, when they may become established firmly enough to blossom next summer. There is no promise with that statement, however, because these plants are notoriously slow growers.

It is recommended that the peonies be lightly pruned each year, after blooming, to keep the plants in an attractive shape and as bushy as possible. They should be given a balanced plant food in early spring or late fall when the leaves have dropped.

Likes day lilies

As a gardener, Mrs. Carlson does not think of herself as a specialist, unless it is in day lilies. She has varieties that bloom in the lightest yellow and pink to the deepest of the dark colors. One bright yellow day lily, already in bloom, was a gift to her from the late Miss Olive Toomey, for many years the acknowledged Bolton authority on flowers.

Mrs. Carlson's wild flowers, mostly along a stone wall at the back of the house lot, were brought in from the woods nearby. The first of her Oriental poppies bloomed May 23. Oriental rooted begonias, which are not expected to bloom until mid-summer, are allowed to stay in the ground all winter, a practice that is new to me.

I take up my begonia tubers, the flattened bulbs from which the plants grow, when the tops have frozen in the fall and keep them in the basement covered with peat moss. In the spring they start to grow without prompting and I plant them outdoors in partial shade.

My directions came from the nursery where I bought the tubers and they have lived to grow and blossom for several years. They have thick, pulpy stems and large, heavy flowers, so I find they need the support of small bamboo stakes if they are not to be tipped over in a heavy rain. I probably will not change my ways, but it is a surprise to learn that

Senior Week starts Friday

It's the time of year when Manchester High School seniors head into the main stream of end-of-year activities. The senior week activities kick off Friday at 8 p.m. with the senior prom at the Howard Johnson Convention Center in Windsor.

When the dance is over at midnight, the seniors go on to the dance at Manchester High School cafeteria, an event sponsored annually by the Manchester Rotary Club.

On Monday, the students will attend the annual senior picnic at Frank Davis Resort in Moodus beginning at 9 a.m. and lasting until return to Manchester at 7:30 p.m. All seniors participating in this event travel by bus to and from the resort.

No senior is permitted to drive to this event by private car. Seniors who are not attending this event will need a signed parental excuse which will be provided by the office.

The senior party will be held Wednesday from 6 to 9 p.m. at the high school. Weather permitting, it will be in the quadrange; otherwise, it will be in the cafeteria. Food will be provided at no charge to the seniors. If the budget permits; otherwise, a nominal fee may be charged.

The senior activities wind up when about 607 seniors wearing their traditional white robes for girls and red robes for boys march onto Memorial Field at 6:45 p.m., Tuesday, June 21 for graduation. In case of rain, the ceremony will be held in Clarke Arena inside the high school. No tickets are necessary for the outdoor event. If indoors, seniors will be limited to two tickets each.

Guest speaker at the commencement will be Miss Tani Esposto, Spanish teacher at MHS.

George J. Emmerling, principal, has alerted parents to the senior graduation party held the past several years in different areas of Manchester after the graduation ceremony.

"This event is in no way sponsored or chartered by the high school," Emmerling said. "I hope that seniors will enjoy the events sponsored by the school."

Foreign news commentary

Burma Road to ruin?

By THAIL VOGLÉ
BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Burma, Asia's forgotten nation, which swallowed up tens of thousands of allied and Japanese lives during World War II, once again is threatened with economic, political and military strangulation.

Buying writing paper is next to impossible. The country's lone paper mill, a gift from Czechoslovakia, no longer produces because workers have stolen its metal rollers and small machines to sell on the black market.

Brazen blessing

A foreigner walking down the streets of Rangoon is brazenly begged for the halipint pen sticking out of his pocket.

Tears well up in the eyes of Burmese men friends from abroad offer them a bottle of vitamin, a tin of malted milk or ready-made underwear.

Legal imports are virtually zero and President Ne Win's Burma Socialist Program party strongly discourages foreign investment as a push along the "Burma road to socialism."

Smuggling thrives

Burma's principal export — precious stones — mostly reach foreign markets via smugglers. And strong antiques of armed rebels are proving an unequal match for the country's major hope, the well-equipped, well-disciplined army of 250,000.

Nearly half the 43 million people who live within the frontiers of the Union of Burma are non-Burmeses — ranging from the several hundred pygmies who live in the northern mountains to the seven million Shans living northeast of Rangoon along the Chinese and Thai borders.

All of these several dozen groups want independence.

Temporary league

The majority of the Shans have joined in a temporary league with Burmese communists and during the past six months have forged a 200-mile line on the eastern border with China halfway to Rangoon itself.

Spreading generous portions of rice and guns among dissidents along the way, the joint force has effectively put one-third of Burma under communist control, without the burdens of occupation.

The Chinese-supplied guerrillas have simply cut off traditional smuggling routes from the minorities to Thailand to the south. Ne Win's elite army, efficient though it may be, needs to be an occupying force to cope with the vast insurgency.

Minor victories only point up the lack of over-all success.

By wiping out a major base of the Karen insurgents, it has driven that national minority reluctantly into league with the communists.

When it struck and subdued a dissident Arakanese-Chin post in the northeast, it drew badly needed troops and supplies from the northeastern front.

Having been independent since recorded history, the separate nationalities consider the Rangoon army foreigners. And Rangoon still has proved inept in dealing with the poppy fields in the Shan states, part of the infamous Golden Triangle which supplies an estimated one-third of the world's opium.

Staunchly isolationist, the Rangoon government of Ne Win survives only because his opponents — except for the communists — also have been cut off from outside help.

IRS auditing Carter tax returns

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Carter's 1975 income tax return, in which he claimed a $41,707 tax credit for peanut shelling equipment, is being audited by the Internal Revenue Service, the White House said Wednesday.

Deputy Press Secretary Roy Powell said the audit was notified "the early part of this year" that the return for 1975 — when he paid taxes of $17,484 on income of $136,139 — was being checked.

"He's made his income tax returns public since 1965," Graman said. "It's in keeping with his desire to keep his financial affairs as a public official open."

As for reports the audit may have been politically motivated by the Ford administration, Graman said "there's no feeling on our part" that such reports were true.

Billy Carter told UPI the peanut sheller cost $800,000. Jimmy Carter, who owns about 90 percent of the warehouse, stated in the tax return that his share of the new sheller was $410,646.

Billy Carter said in a May interview in Nation's business the IRS was "checking" his records. "Mother's, the warehouse", the service station, Jimmy's and the farm's."

"All six of us at one time — and at random," Billy Carter said.

Pending a check with Robert Perry, Carter's accountant in America, Graman said he could not state for what reasons the return was being audited or whether the IRS has demanded any checks or other financial records from Carter.

Firmen attend training session

Several members of the Eighth District Fire Department attended courses and received certificates last weekend at the Lakes Region Mutual Fire Aid Association annual training session in Laccasia, N.H.

Those who participated in the 16-hours of training and the courses included Capt. Paul Gowrek and Ken Roback, rappelling (use of ropes); Gary Zito, vehicle rescue; David Hiers, pumps and primers; John Macce, breathing apparatus and flammable liquids and hazardous materials.

The classes are in addition to the weekly training sessions at the department 50 weeks a year.

FUN classes continue to thrive off regular academic programs

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK
UPI Education Editor

FUN classes continue to thrive off the regular academic trail across the nation.

The Free University Network — known as FUN — includes about 200 "schools," 50,000 courses and around 250,000 students.

These are not your usual courses, usual students, usual universities.

The open

The "schools" are for working and non-working people who want to learn something anything, of value in the world or work, play or enrichment.

The classes are held in backyards, homes, churches, community centers, parks, zoos, observatories, any place suitable, even schools willing to open a vacant classroom.

The educational philosophy of the FUN movement is that "anyone can teach and anyone can learn," according to William A. Draves, National Coordinator of the Free U Network in Manhattan, Kans.

FUN is free

"Free universities are an idea for a new one," says a blurb of the Free University of Phillips County in Phillipsburg and Stockton, Kans. In typical, friendly wording of all the free universities, the invitation continues:

Do their best

"We will do our best to create an actual happening from whatever your dream may be."

Courses at the Phillipsburg and Stockton Free University range from "Collecting and Decorating with Driftwood" to "Cake Decorating."

In between the offerings include: Cardio-pulmonary Resuscitation, Know Your Radio Stations, Beginning Tennis, Be Good To Yourself (body and health care for females), Mint Your Own (a course in making mints, class in a church kitchen).

The most puzzling course description goes like this: "The Tich That Started All The Scratching."

This is not about allergies.

Rather, according to the write up — "This will be a nondenominational, non-sectarian, non-theological, non-political course through 2,000 years of Christianity."

The "schools" are for just about anyone and almost anyone can teach. This student is learning about mopeds — the little motorized bikes in a course taught by an auto mechanic at APPLE U. — the nation's newest free university in New York and named for "The Big Apple." Summer enrichment program ready

About 80 sections of enrichment program for students in from Grade 4 through adults, according to the new summer school through adults, according to Lee Hay, director of the program.

Hay said he was surprised at the large number and variety of courses which were suggested by teachers in the system and residents. Most of the courses will be taught by teachers already working in the public schools, but about a half dozen will be taught by persons with specialized skills, Hay said.

The new program was established by a vote of the Board of Education in late March. A washout account, not to exceed $7,500, was established. The program will be entirely self-supporting, Hay said.

The courses will be held at Iling Junior High School in two sessions, from July 11-22 and July 25-Aug. 5. Two classes will be offered daily, from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m. and 10 a.m. to noon.

The charge per course will be $15 with additional charge for materials in some courses.

The stress for the program will be activity-oriented with persons encouraged to try new activities, Hay said. Adults will also be allowed to take the courses to encourage family participation, Hay said.

Class offerings will include home economics, arts and crafts, industrial arts, physical fitness, dance, chess and many others.

Program announcements will be made in the schools and brochures will be available in the schools and other public buildings late next week, Hay said.

EPA zeros in on road dust

ROCKVILLE, Md. (UPI) — The Environmental Protection Agency, alarmed that high levels of asbestos dust from gravel are causing a "potentially serious health problem," has urged the Washington suburb of Montgomery County to immediately close most of its parks, national health standards for asbestos fibers from crushed stone. Several weeks ago the agency said it would take one year to set the standards.

The agency said the county should commence immediately remedial and permanent action to abate the potentially serious health problem from the use of asbestos in crushed stone.

Tuesday's notice from the EPA was the first time the agency asserted that within a few days to set high levels of asbestos

Exchange student enjoys the area

By MAL BARLOW, East Hartford Reporter

"It's been the best year of my life," said Joachim Widen, 17, of Hyllebruk, Sweden.

Widen is a Youth For Understanding exchange student who has been a junior at East Hartford High School this year.

A main reason for his "best year" has been the friendliness of the people in East Hartford.

"When you stand in a line at a supermarket," he explained, "You don't expect to talk to any strangers. Not in Sweden."

Widen said he does not believe the old New England adage about cold Yankees.

"I wouldn't agree at all," Widen's home town of 6,000 people is a mill town in southwest Sweden about 25 miles from the nearest city of Halmstad which has 160,000 people.

He has one brother, age 26, who is studying business management in Stockholm. His brother spent some time at Lake Placid, N.Y., recently as a camp counselor.

Widen has traveled before with his family. He has been to Norway, Denmark, Germany, France, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Luxembourg, The Netherlands and Belgium.

The council also accepted the resignation of Bessie C. Jaggins of 48 Cheslee Rd. from the Human Rights Commission. She cited "other commitments" for resigning but said in a letter to Mayor Richard Blackstone.

The council will meet again June 21. Summer council meetings will be held once a month in the summer, Tuesday, July 19 and Tuesday, Aug. 16.

Mickey's Drive-in softball team for girls age 14 to 16 will hold tryouts Saturday at 10 a.m. at the East Hartford High School field.

Another bidder this year was Zambelli Fireworks of Newcastle, Pa., for 309 shells for 30 minutes at $3,500.

The Ideal display of 1975 sticks in East Hartford's memories. Although the firm bid $3,500, the council picked them.

Henry Genga, majority leader, urged the council to accept the administration's choice of Ideal to avoid any problems this year.

The Ideal display will be 328 shells bursting in the air somewhere over East Hartford for 40 minutes. The site has yet to be selected.

RHS girls' athletics have come a long way

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

One of today's expressions — "You've come a long way baby" — could be applied to the Girls Athletic Activities Club (GAAC) of Rockville High School.

The club Wednesday night celebrated its 25th anniversary, as did Clare Alborn, its founder. Mrs. Alborn is supervisor of physical education. When she came to Rockville, she said she told Mrs. Alice Hammar and the late Mrs. Sarah Brooks, members of the Board of Education, that she would develop a physical education program and a GAAC that would be second to none.

She said she didn't realize what a battle and a challenge it would be. When she started teaching she discovered the inventory for the girls' physical education program amounted to $50.

She said there were badminton racquets but no birds or nets; a pingpong table but no balls or paddles; some old baseball bats and some rotting wall mats. The inventory for the girls' athletic equipment now runs about $15,000, she said.

The club had 25 girls in its first year. Now it has more than 500. She said one of the first things she did the first year was to make the girls wear uniforms because they had been used to wearing anything for gym.

Up until 1963, when the program was evaluated, Mrs. Alborn taught all of the girls' physical education classes and had part-time help for the extra activities. In 1963, she began teaching part time and supervising. A second full-time teacher was added in 1967 and now Mrs. Alborn has four full-time and three part-time teachers on her staff.

Mrs. Alborn said that over the 25 years she has had to argue and battle for everything for intramurals because there is a tendency to put all of the money into competitive sports "for the few."

"I never wanted any child who couldn't make a varsity team to feel like a second-class citizen. I wanted the best trained teachers in all areas of the program," she said.

She said she has received the support of the three principals — Allen Dore, Joseph McCauley and Martin Fagan — and Supt. Raymond Ramsdell. She added she has always had someone on the school board who cared.

"When all is said and done, to have an active program that can attract so many kids, we have to be doing something right. Any program that can keep kids happy, healthy and involved, has to have merit," she said.

Mrs. Alborn said the one thing that all her struggles worthwhile had to be the attitude and enthusiasm of the students.

It was a sentimental evening for Clare Alborn as she received many gifts at the 25th anniversary banquet of the Girls Athletic Activities Club, which she started at Rockville High School. GAAC gives many awards

Eileen O'Brien, a senior at Rockville High School, was awarded the "Z" Club scholarship at the 25th annual banquet of the Girls Athletic Activities Club Wednesday night.

And for the first time, a blazer was given a junior. Robin Tierney was awarded the jacket for accumulating a total of 425 points in three years.

Valerie Curtis, a senior, was awarded the president's plaque and Lisa Warner was named the school champion in badminton. She also received charms for being on the var-city basketball team, for being on the softball team, a charm bracelet for accumulating 225 points plus a charm for accumulating 325 points.

Maureen Moriarty was the final winner in tennis and Diane Briery was runner-up.

Tina Boutot, Laura Glenn, Barbara Hesse and Diane Pavanno made up the winning freshman-sophomore bowling team. Carol Clark had the high average of 141. Carol Clark, high triple, 210-173-127; Nancy

Vernon gets grant for police station

The Town of Vernon has been designated to receive $1,283,000 from the Federal Economic Development Administration (EDA), which will allow the building of a new police station.

The town had applied for a federal grant of $1.21 million last year for expansion of the police facility. Just before Christmas town officials were notified that the application had been turned down.

The town was informed of the new grant Wednesday afternoon by the office of Connecticut Congressman Christopher Dodd.

The proposed new station would be built next to the existing building on West Rd. Plans were designed last year with the help of the National Clearinghouse on Criminal Justice Planning and Architecture.

The proposed building will consist of 18,000 square feet and is designed to meet the police needs of the town until the year 2000.

Bolton board's final days are busy

Bolton Board of Selectmen worked late Tuesday night in the last month before a new board takes office July 1. In the busy session, most of it reported in Wednesday's Herald, the board:

- Discussed the resubmission of projects for the federal public works program.
- Learned there will be a workshop on sexual abuse in children June 20 at the Ramada Inn in East Hartford. To register to learn more, call 566-3000.
- Accepted participation for the town in the state's pavement marking program. The roads involved will be completed after July 1.

- Accepted the Ambulance Study Committee report.
- Instructed its secretary to contact the state Labor Department to see if Bolton is eligible for the Title VI program. Park Commissioner Stanley Jones questioned if a person could be used at the park.
- Learned the unemployment rates for Bolton have been decreasing. The figures are: February, 9.2 per cent; March, 7.9 per cent; and April, 7.3 per cent.
- Received one price quote for a bronze plaque, Indian Notch Park, to recognize the involvement of the Nature Conservation in the park's purchase. The estimate was $288.
- A long list of other club members received mementos, letters, charms, and other citations.

Hebron health issue fades

Only about 10 residents attended the last Hebron Board of Selectmen meeting, urging the board to continue a health services contract with the Town of Glastonbury. Hebron residents might lose out if the contract was dropped, residents said.

Selectmen have been considering eliminating the contract and hiring someone to perform the tasks. A number of residents had petitioned the selectmen for a Town Meeting on the matter.

Selectmen declined to call a Town Meeting but opened their regular meeting for discussion of the issue.

Attendance at the meeting was about a third of the number of persons who had signed the petition. In general, the group praised the quality of service provided by Glastonbury and questioned whether the proposed change would provide equal service.

First Selectman Aaron Reid said he hoped to obtain more service for the same money, or less than is being paid to Glastonbury. He said if selectmen found they could not provide equal or better service through a local system, they would continue the Glastonbury arrangement.

David Marnecki questioned whether the funds budgeted, $7,200 for the Glastonbury contract and $270 for office expenses, could provide more than the present 10 hours per week for the sanitarian and the office of director of health.

Reid said the Glastonbury contract was only a temporary arrangement until the town was able to obtain its own health director.

Reid said he hoped to get about 20 hours per week in service for the same amount of money. He said the board plans to hire a registered sanitarian to do septic work and food service inspections.

Reid said the anticipated advent of a practicing physician in town makes a local system possible. He said Dr. William Ellzey of Columbia has agreed to accept the appointment of health director until a doctor is established in town.

In connection with the proposed medical service, Reid said a family practice is anticipated with Dr. John Hayes and Dr. Peter Jones and pediatric service with Dr. Charles Oskstein and Dr. Richard Moriarty.

In other business, the selectmen will call a Town Meeting June 13 to elect three Regional District 8 Board of Education members, to the resignation of Everett Graham.

Masons appoint Bernier

Robert J. Bernier Sr. of Ellington has been appointed a district deputy of the Grand Lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons of Connecticut. He was named to this high office by Arthur F. Simpson, grand master of Masons in Connecticut.

Bernier is a cost estimator with Harvard Precision Components of Hartford. In his new Masonic post he will supervise the works of the five Masonic Lodges in District 98 which includes Uxbridge, Merrow; Eastern Star, Williamite; Wolcott; Stafford Hollow; Fayette Ellington; Ionic; Stafford Springs.

A presentation ceremony to be led by Dr. Oliver J. Parnell, grand justice steward of Vernon, will be held at the Masonic Temple, Orchard St., June 11 at 8 p.m. It will be preceded by a dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Bernier became a Mason on March 25, 1969, served as master of Fayette Lodge in 1974 and has since served as chaplain as well as being active in other lodge activities.

He is a member of Adoniam Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; Adoniam Lodge, Royal and Select Masters; and Hope Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star.

Discipline, drugs, respect are concerns at school

The school houses about 1,950 students in Grades 7, 8 and 9 — an age group, according to School Supt. Robert Goldman, which is often a challenge to motivate and handle.

Goldman said although a number of the questionnaires expressed concern over reported problems at the school, basically the results were positive.

Areas which received the most favorable comments were the students' interest in extracurricular activities, music program, the clubs and curriculum choices.

Concerns of the teachers at the school include vandalism, student disrespect, and discipline.

The Committee on Student Life and Discipline, organized to study the situation at Timothy Edwards Middle School, has recommended student involvement be increased at the school. They have proposed the following to accomplish this:

- Organize the Student Council before the year begins. Hold elections to incoming children, now in sixth grade, can be involved in student government.
- Use student monitors to encourage the student responsibility.
- Establish a Big Brother, Big Sister program in which each incoming student would be assigned to someone who could show him around the answer questions.
- Provide more orientation time to give students more opportunity to get to know the administration and become familiar with the school.
- Institute a campaign to build school pride through various projects such as mural painting, cleanup week and poster contests.
- Organize a student newspaper.

The committee found that parental involvement is minimal at the school. Two recommendations were made to help enforce the rules:

- Assign specific, appropriate penalties for common infractions of school rules.
- Give parents of each incoming student a copy of the student handbook, to acquaint them with school rules before the school year begins.

A large part of the committee's discussion centered around the size of the school itself. They felt the school needed either more administrators or fewer students.

- Use student monitors to encourage the student responsibility.
- Establish a Big Brother, Big Sister program in which each incoming student would be assigned to someone who could show him around the answer questions.
- Provide more orientation time to give students more opportunity to get to know the administration and become familiar with the school.
- Institute a campaign to build school pride through various projects such as mural painting, cleanup week and poster contests.
- Organize a student newspaper.

The committee found that parental involvement is minimal at the school. Two recommendations were made to help enforce the rules:

- Assign specific, appropriate penalties for common infractions of school rules.
- Give parents of each incoming student a copy of the student handbook, to acquaint them with school rules before the school year begins.

A large part of the committee's discussion centered around the size of the school itself. They felt the school needed either more administrators or fewer students.

William Yetz, community relations officer for the Vernon Police Department and a member of the board of directors of the Rockville Area Chamber of Commerce, asked the board Wednesday to consider moving the chamber office to a more accessible spot.

The office is on the second floor of a two-story building at Lafayette Square in the northeast section of town. Yetz said he had talked with many members and prospective members and they feel the office is out of the way.

Ogrodnik resigns East hoop post

By LEN AUSTER
Herald Sports Editor
After nine years, three leagues and one state title the ball has stopped bouncing.

Stan Ogrodnik, head basketball coach at East Catholic High, submitted his resignation last Friday to the Rev. Robert Saunders, principal, and released it to the Herald Wednesday. Ogrodnik, 34, will remain on as guidance counselor-teacher at the school.

"It was a very difficult decision to make," Ogrodnik said Wednesday. "I thought about it through the year and probably decided it at the end of the year (right after the loss in the quarterfinals to South Catholic). Ogrodnik indicated he waited before making an announcement to see if he'd have a change of heart. He didn't.

"Why? The only reason is because I've been doing the same thing for 14 years," stated the Providence College grad. "It's become a pattern; repetition, become a routine. This might be the dumbest decision I've ever made but I didn't think I could continue with the same amount of enthusiasm as before," he continued.

In his nine-year tenure, Ogrodnik's teams won 159 and lost 12. His Eagles captured Hartford County Conference championships three times and were runners-up on three other occasions. East won the Class I Division title in 1970-71 when a 21-3 record was compiled and the worst was in 1974-75 when a 12-10 ledger was logged. Three All-Stars, Tim Kearns, Ed Fitzgerald and Joe Whelton, have come under Ogrodnik's tutelage.

Time and opportunity can also be cited for his departure. "Time had become an element in a day, I haven't spent time with my youngest who likes to hit the ball. I've had to miss time," Ogrodnik and his lovely wife, Kathy, have three daughters, Susan, 12, Stacy, 9, and Stephanie, 8. "Basketball has been my whole life but other things in life have been opening up," Ogrodnik stated. "I have other things which
