Bullet-riddled train inspected

People in Glimmen, Holland, were eager to inspect the bullet-riddled train after it was stopped by Dutch forces early today. They examined the damage caused by the hail of rocket and machine-gun fire used to free the hostages. (UPI photo)

Hostages freed by Dutch troops

GLIMMEN, The Netherlands (UPI)—Dutch marines backed by low-flying jet fighters stormed a hijacked train nearby school at dawn today, freeing 53 hostages held by Moluccan terrorists for 19 days. Six gunmen and two hostages were killed. An army spokesman said 120 marines backed by dozens of F104 Starfighter jets launched simultaneous assaults on the four-car train and the Bovenindische elementary school 15 miles apart in a deafening roar of gunfire that lasted about 10 minutes.

When it was over, two of the train hostages, including a 19-year-old girl, and six of the train hijackers were dead. In addition, nine train hostages, two marines and two of the surviving gunmen were wounded, according to officials at the hospital in Groningen where they were taken. No one was injured in the assault on the school, where four more gunmen holding four hostages were rendered as armored cars came crashing through a plate glass door followed by 55 marines, their assault rifles blazing. One of the gunmen tried to flee but was wrestled to the ground outside the school. The others surrendered after returning the fire briefly and were marched away in their undershirts.

Solons pleased with session

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
State legislators who represent Manchester were generally pleased with the recently completed legislative session, although all expressed disappointment with some personal proposals that were not passed. "I have a good feeling about the session. I thought it was a productive session," Sen. David Barry (D-4th) said. He pointed to two bills also mentioned by other local legislators—the equalization of educational payments and reorganization of state government.

"These are things that have been talked about for a good long time," Barry said. This session, steps were taken in both areas, he said. He also said that he received more mail this year than in any of his three previous terms in the Senate. In fact, he has still not answered all of it. "It's incredible, and it's also very healthy," he said of the mailing. A personal disappointment for Barry was the defeat of a bill that would have "facilitated organ transplants. The bill proposed that the "irreversible cessation of brain functions," according to customary standards of medical practice, would be sufficient to determine the time of the donor's death.

Barry battled with the Connecticut Right to Life Corporation throughout the session over the bill, which eventually lost by a narrow margin in the House. Rep. Theodore Cummings (D-12th) also cited the defeat of the organ bill, which he co-sponsored with Barry, as a frustration of the session. But, he also pointed to other bills that he was pleased to see passed.

Justice Minister Dries van Agt said the dead hostages had not been killed by the Dutch marines, whose assaults immediately triggered warnings from Moluccan radicals of unspecified "consequences." Troops quickly moved to seal off a nearby Moluccan community from where several shots were apparently fired at the marines who rushed the schoolhouse, according to witnesses. The train passengers—most walking with fists clenched and smiles frozen on their faces, some carried on stretchers—were taken to a Red Cross emergency post and then rushed along cleared roads to the Academic Hospital at Groningen. One of them was immediately operated on but no details were released. The other injured hostages were at a what hospital officials called a "pleasingly good" condition. Dutch Premier Joop den Uyl, his voice trembling with emotion, said he had ordered the attacks reluctantly, only after "almost three weeks of virtually superhuman efforts to end the sieges through patience and persuasion." The tension was becoming unbearable, we saw no other way." The twin assaults began at 4:53 a.m. (10:53 p.m. EDT) as Starfighter jets swooped down from the dark moonless sky, dropping smoke bombs on passes made as low as 50 feet above the train. They were accompanied by a barrage of gunfire and the flashes of at least three explosions—diversionary tactics intended to confuse the train hijackers. Under the cover of a thick mist, a force of 65 marines, their faces blackened, stormed aboard the train, where they unleashed a hail of bullets so intense that it apparently prevented the terrorists from making wholesale reprisals against their hostages. One enormous explosion occurred that witnesses said may have come from a mine placed under the main terrorist post at the front of the train. The front carriage was heavily damaged. Slowly, the explosions and the gunfire died down. Then came a cry of "hurray, hurray," as several marines emerged from the smoking, bullet-riddled train with their fists raised in a gesture of victory signaling the end of the assault. As the crippled train was towed toward Groningen after the 44-hour and 14-minute ordeal, a bloodstained blanket hung from one of many broken windows. Blood covered a running board. Torn magazines lay strewn in overhead luggage racks and clothing was scattered over the blue plastic seats. Moluccan radicals immediately branded the attacks "cowardly" and warned the government it must take "full responsibility for the consequences." Earlier the radicals had said use of force to end the sieges would prompt further terrorist attacks.

Martin Luther King's assassin escapes Police using bloodhounds to track James Earl Ray

PETROS, Tenn. (UPI)—James Earl Ray escaped Friday from the mountain prison where he was held for the murder of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. and lawmen used baying hounds today to track him and five companions in the snake-infested wilds of East Tennessee's coal country. State Corrections Commissioner C. Murray Henderson said there was little chance Ray and his five cohorts would elude their pursuers. "We feel like we have the area well surrounded," Henderson said. "We believe they are going in circles." Ray and the five other men—four of them convicted murderers—scaled a 12-foot wall at Brushy Mountain State Prison Friday night while

Ray called key link in House inquiry

HARTFORD (UPI)—A House Assassinations Committee member said today the key link in the investigation of Martin Luther King's assassination will be lost if James Earl Ray is not apprehended unharmed. "My concern is that he be apprehended as quickly as possible and without any harm," Rep. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., said. "If the man who has pled guilty to assassinating Dr. Martin Luther King is gone, then we lose the key link in the King assassination case," Dodd said. Dodd said Ray had been cooperative and the committee had been "looking forward to a close association." Ray has been interviewed by committee investigators five times this year. "If something should happen to guards were attempting to quell a fight that two prisoners faked in the prison recreation yard. By the time guards in prison towers spotted the break and opened fire with rifles and shotguns, the six prisoners had climbed a makeshift ladder, slipped beneath a 22,000 volt electric wire atop the wall and vanished in the wilderness. A seventh man—bank robber Jerry Ward—was hit by gunfire as he tried to climb the ladder and was captured. Authorities said his wounds were not serious. At a hospital, Ward repeated to anyone who approached: "James Earl Ray got out. Ray is out." Henderson said he had no doubt other convicts aided in the escape.

"These are hard-core prisoners," he said. "They like to see the system beaten." Meanwhile, Ray's attorney said he believes Ray may have been abducted and fears for the convicted assassin's life. The attorney, Jack Kershaw, said he spoke with Ray by telephone Wednesday and was given no indication an escape was being planned. About 150 lawmen, including state troopers, prison guards and deputies from nearby counties were involved in the search today. "We feel like our chances of catching them are very good," Henderson said. "This country is as rugged as it gets to be in this area," said assistant prison warden Herman Davis. "It is infested with rattlesnakes and copperheads."

Davis said the escapees would have to go five miles up rugged Fritchhead Mountain before they reached a country road. Davis was asked whether officials had any indication Ray was planning a break. "Not through the grapevine... no, we didn't have specific indication he would try to escape," Davis said. "As far as I'm concerned he's (Ray) still a good prisoner," Davis added. "He's got 99 years. If he had to do that I would try to escape, too."

Henderson said a fight that broke out between two inmates in the prison recreation yard was a ruse to draw attention of guards away from the break. He said the failure of most of the prison telephones at the time of the break may have been caused by sabotage. Ray, 49, pleaded guilty on March 10, 1969, to the assassination of the Nobel Peace Prize winner who was gunned down April 4, 1968, on the balcony of the Lorraine Motel in Memphis.

The auto research story

Have we gone about as far as we can - or should go - with the conventional, gasoline-powered, piston-engine car? Unmistakenly, immense progress has been made in cleaning up the family gasper. In the decade or so since precontrol days, the average level of pollutants emitted by new cars - chiefly carbon monoxide, nitrogen oxide and hydrocarbons - has been reduced by 83 per cent, thanks to more efficient engines, add-on devices like the catalytic converter and government-mandated measures such as lead-free gasoline.

But we seem to be reaching a crunch point where more and more effort is required to produce smaller and smaller results. As it is, the even more stringent emissions standards that were scheduled to go into effect with 1978 models have been postponed by Congress at the behest of the industry.

The question is not so much whether Detroit can build virtually pollution-free automobiles, or when it can build them, as whether the benefits will be worth the cost. According to an allegedly "suppressed" memo by Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the Carter administration's proposed regulations for pollution controls, fuel economy and safety would raise the average price of a new car $1,000 by 1985. Some automakers are claiming that government rule-making could force Americans to pay upwards of $10,000 for an ordinary 1985 model sedan.

Automobile safety is one thing, and cost considerations here should take a back seat to the saving of human lives. Unfortunately, when it comes to pollution control vs. fuel economy, the trade-off is usually an adverse one.

For example, other EPA statistics indicate that, on a car-to-car basis, California's emissions standards, which are tougher than the federal ones, have cut average economy by 12 per cent. Committed as they are to the internal combustion engine for as far ahead as they can see, the automakers are turning to the strategy of reducing the

Thought

From my Uncle Billy, who was a good and kindly pediatrician, I hope I learned patience. The good physician knows that he is really not the healer. People get themselves well if they are, indeed, going to get better. The doctor assists in a number of ways. He understands, in part, the healing process.

My own faith is like that. I believe in the innate goodness of persons. I believe that in all souls is a precious spark of divine fire and that it will not go out. If we have any task at all, it is to help one another appreciate that spark, to fan it and help it grow and glow into a flame to encompass the whole being.

Holiness is not a virtue to be rubbed in from the outside. It is something there, even in the child, to be allowed out. We all know, even from the beginning, what it is to feel awe and wonder. The goodness is there all along. God is not out there watching you. God is every impulse within to reach out to touch another and allow another to feel better about herself/himself. To know God is to have faith that there is wholeness and health inside us all. That the demonic is there, as well, we all know. That we are all sinners is not the point. Suffering is reliable even if it is unfairly distributed. But the flame is there as well. That's what really matters. The impulses toward faith and hope and love are in us, all.

I think this is what Emily Dickinson meant when she wrote in a letter:

This world is just a little place, just the red in the sky, before the sun rises, so let us keep fast hold of hands, that when the birds begin, none of us is missing. Arnold P. Westwood Unitarian Universalist Society: East

Protect the people around Redwood Park

Lee Roderick

The Herald's Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON - "It may be peanuts to you but it's jobs to us," read the placard on a 18-foot hunk of California redwood that rode into the capitol on the bed of a truck the other day. Carved into the shape of a huge peanut to impress you-know-who, the log was part of a 23-truck convoy from the Pacific Coast here to protest extension of the Redwood National Park.

Nearly 450 loggers and industry representatives from California, Oregon and Washington - most arriving by airplane - rallied and fanned out across Capitol Hill to lobby by members of Congress who are now considering possible extension of the northern California park. Once again Washington is host to a pitched battle between environmentalists on one side and industry and local community interests on the other.

A simple case It's a simple case of those who produce goods and services against those who don't," said Jim Schirmann, a contract logger for Louisiana-Pacific Corp., one of the three companies which own timberland surrounding the park. Schirmann, of McKinleyville, Calif., told Scripps League Newspapers that "there is no need for a larger park. I am absolutely opposed to any expansion." The current park of 58,000 acres near Arcata, Calif. was created in 1968. Residents of the area were pleased with the park because logging on privately owned land just outside its borders. Accelerated erosion is killing a unique and vulnerable environment within the park.

The reality, however, was spelled out for this writer by an aide to Rep. Don Clausen (R-Calif.), the congressman for the Redwood Park region who opposes the extension. "You can't take a 55-year-old man who has been working in the woods for 30 years and convert him into a tour guide or maître d' at a hotel," he said.

The Coast Redwood is a magnificent tree - tallest in the world and one of the oldest, with ancestors that lived among dinosaurs. No one in his right mind wants to see the redwood eliminated from the earth. But there already are more than 181,000 acres of other redwood forest areas in the Pacific Northwest, virtually assuring that this will never happen. There's no good reason now to bring more economic havoc to the people surrounding the Redwood National Park for the sake of 48,000 more acres.

Assets threatened Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus, in calling for the enlarged park, explained that "the public has purchased a national park whose prime assets are being destroyed by logging on privately owned land just outside its borders. Accelerated erosion is killing a unique and vulnerable environment within the park."

Andrus asked timber companies for a six-month moratorium on logging operations while Washington sorts out the proposal. The request was promptly rejected and Andrus' claims hotly refuted. "The government's best current working estimates is that between 1,000 and 1,100 jobs would be eliminated during the first year after adoption of legislation," reads an Interior Department press release. "Employment in the redwood timber industry has been declining for years...."

Don't heal the patient In other words, if the patient is sick, don't bother trying to heal him - kill him. The redwood industry estimates job losses at between 2,000 and 3,000, including secondary jobs which now depend on timber revenues. There would be an estimated loss of $35 million in total regional income. Property taxes would rise for those left with jobs as taxable timberland was converted into public land.

Little wonder that folks on the northern Pacific coast whose livelihood depends on an abundant supply of redwood were less than enthused by an announcement this spring that the Interior Department now proposes to add 48,000 acres to the park. The Department already manages in part the administration of a scaled-down version of a bill introduced by Rep. Phil Burton (D-Calif.) to add 74,000 acres to the park.

Andrew Tully was a youth of about 17 named Jose, still chubby with boy-fat. "Jose is a good soldier, but he is homesick," said Johnny. "He misses his mother much."

The government forces guarded that main road well, with mortar and machinegun fire. The patrol retreated in some confusion, all except Jose. Johnny confronted the lieutenant, his face stern. "Where is Jose?" he asked. Jose, who had missed his mother much, had gone down. "He is dead," said the lieutenant. "There is a large hole in his throat." His body had been left where it had fallen in a sandy gully.

Johnny was off - running, skulking crawling. There were crashes of machinegun fire and the whumping, mangleing blasts of exploding mortar shells. But 10 minutes later, Johnny was back - with Jose's body slung over one shoulder. "His mother will want him," Johnny said. "He is dead, but his mother will want to care for him, still, for the last time." Eleven years later, they stood

Illing rises to the challenge in presenting 'Sound of Music'

By SUSAN VAUGHN

Undertaking a full-scale production of one of the most successful musicals of all time within the confines of a small school cafeteria auditorium is a major challenge. But that is what a huge cast and crew from Illing Junior High School have done with their production of "The Sound of Music" with delightful results. Friday's opening night of the favorite musical played to a near-capacity audience who greeted the players with enthusiasm. Any slight mistakes or vocal tremors were met with good humor by the audience and players alike.

As in its predecessors, carried on the seven Von Trapp children during the show. Shari Bauer is a completely convincing, energetic Maria as she leads the children through several familiar musical numbers, complete with excellent choreography. Ms. Bauer has excellent diction, a loud clear voice, evidence of her acting is as delightful as her music.

Police report

Walter Larson, 42, of 71 Seaman Circle was charged Friday with operating a motor vehicle while his license was under suspension and registering while his right to register is under suspension. The summons refers to an earlier violation when Larson was stopped on Ottest St. for operating a motor vehicle with a defective exhaust system. Court date, June 28.

A resident of Tolland Tpk. reported a watch valued at $120 missing from his coat pocket left in a coat room at work, late Thursday night.

About $360 worth of tires and fishing equipment was reported missing from the storage bin of a resident on Ottest St. sometime between December 1976 and June 8.

The St. James Cemetery office at 368 Broad St. was reportedly broken into sometime between Thursday and Friday. A desk was ransacked and car keys were removed from a driver, police said. Police said it appeared that the intruders planned to steal a car parked in the garage if they could get it out. There were keys in the ignition and there was evidence of unsuccessful attempts to open a roll-up door.

Other strong supporting roles were played by Maria Levy, as the Mother Abbess, Laura Valente and Julie Shea, and Laura Gatzkiewicz, as the nuns, who had lead musical numbers. Also, they were backed by an entire nun's chorus. Jennifer Sullivan drew laughs as the busy, excitable housekeeper, Frau Schmidt. Other good supporting roles were played by Marcel Beaudet as Franz, the tailor, Todd Coniam as Rolf Gruber, John Mumford as Max Detweiler.

A handicap which the players overcame was a technical difficulty with the sound system. The production will be repeated tonight at 8 at the school.

Recent visitors to the business education classes at Bolton High School were two speakers, Mrs. Lisa McCormick of the state Department of Consumer Protection and Mrs. Carol Cloutier of Ellington, an entrepreneur. Among business students receiving Community College credit for high school courses are Carrie Doonan, typing and shorthand, and Jean Faulkner, typing.

Children will be able to experience nature first hand and will enjoy a program of sports, crafts, swimming and other outdoor activities. Campers will bring their own lunch and milk will be provided. Bus transportation will also be available with pickups to be made at several locations.

The cost will be $40 for a two-week period. This will cover the cost of transportation. If a parent provides the transportation the cost will be $35 for two weeks.

Camp Newioca is located on middle Bolton Lake and was purchased by the town several years ago from Newington Children's Hospital. The area has several buildings, including bath houses and a large semi-wooded area.

Allen said the student taking the course must develop a contact with the sponsoring agency to improve his or her life situation and long range goals. They may include job placement, alternative life situations, personal counseling, use of drugs, or family relations.

The student chosen must be willing to assist the Youth Services Bureau in developing a local program. Those interested in becoming a candidate for the program should contact Allen at 872-8501.

Day camp registrations open Monday in Vernon

The Vernon Recreation Department will start accepting applications for enrollment at Camp Newioca, the town's summer day camp, starting Monday.

Applications will be available at the recreation office, 26 Park Pl., between 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., and 2:30 and 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Applications will also be available any time at the police station.

The camp is open to boys and girls aged 6-12. There will be three, two-week sessions with the camp program to run from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. five days a week.

The first session will run from July 9 to July 15; the second from July 16 to July 22 and the final session from Aug. 1-7.

Wilderness trip offered

The Vernon Youth Service Bureau will sponsor a student interested in a 19-day course in the Wilderness School Program from July 18 to Aug. 5.

The offer is open to males or females aged 14-21. The course will be conducted in the woods and on the rivers and mountains of Northwest Connecticut.

Charles Allen, director of the local youth bureau, has completed a two-day orientation course which consisted of backpacking, white water canoeing, rock climbing and sharing group experiences.

The Wilderness Program is based, in part, on the American Outward Bound program. Allen said its creation was in response to the need for alternative treatment approaches in the field of delinquency prevention and rehabilitation.

He said it's an opportunity for youths who are not satisfied with themselves to make changes in the course of their life. The format of the program is a goal-oriented approach. Allen said the goals relate to the student's personal aims. He said students need not be athletically inclined or physically robust to enroll in the program.

Young science fans had many projects

In the eighth grade physical science division, trophies went to Grade 7 and 8 students in the school's recent science fair. He said the park project is the one proposal most closely in line with the federal grant "preparation-wise and dollar-wise."

The student exhibits were divided for display in two categories—biology and physical science. Individual projects ranged from reports on parts of the body to plants and pollution.

The young scientists were judged on thought, originality and workmanship. Judges included Mrs. Linda Aube, Stephen Bent, John Bouchard, Mrs. Doris Cox, Mrs. Cathy Egan, Mrs. Helen Mills and Richard Zawada.

Diana Gagon, a member of John Termini's eighth grade class, was awarded the grand prize. Her exhibit was titled "What is the Earth?"

Eighth grade winners in the biology division were Mary Jo Donovan and David Peletier. Miss Donovan won first prize for her display on the eyes.

Park project likely Bolton reviewing plans for grant

David Dresely, Bolton first selectman, said Friday that town officials are now reviewing plans for town projects that will qualify for $151,000 in grants under the federal Public Works Employment Act.

Dresely said recreational development of Indian Notch Park, the former E. J. Holl property on Bolton Lake, is likely to be the only project that can be funded with the money.

Dresely said he confirmed the amount of the grant Thursday. The funds were awarded by the Economic Development Administration in the second round of distributing money under the federal act.

Development of Indian Notch Park was estimated to cost $368,500 when Bolton filed its applications for the first round of federal grants last year.

Dresely said Friday that Bolton wouldn't have to do the entire project but could do the first phases of the development plan. He said the park project is the one proposal most closely in line with the federal grant "preparation-wise and dollar-wise."

The other applications submitted last year—all of them rejected—were a solid waste transfer station, $223,500; a gymnasium at Bolton Center School, $970,000; a cafeteria-auditorium at Bolton High School, $907,000; and a town garage and dog pound, $177,500.

The transfer station and garage-pound proposals are not as far along in planning as the Indian Notch Park development, and the cost of the two school building projects apparently rules them out.

School Supt. Raymond Allen noted Thursday night, at a Board of Education meeting, that "they (the school projects) probably don't stand a chance."

Bolton has to file more applications and proposals before actually getting the $151,000 allocation, Dresely said.

Wings of evening

By CLIFF SIMPSON

Dwight L. Moody Many of you know of Dwight L. Moody who was founder of the Northfield Schools and an ardent evangelist. Once when he was in a Chicago railroad station he started passing out tracts on temperance. A bending elderly gentleman glanced at the paper he had been given, then peered curiously at Moody and asked, "Are you a reformed drunkard?" "Then," inquired the old gentleman, "why don't you reform?" Transition House A candle in Cambridge The American Friends Service Committee Bulletin came to me recently, with the latest account of work done by the Quakers. Many associate this group primarily with their relief work during the Vietnam War, but the Bulletin in their bulletin range from Bangladesh to Mali. There are also programs in this country which arise from their desire to be true followers of Jesus who was concerned for everyone in need. On a back street in Cambridge is Transition House where battered women may find a refuge. It is the place of its kind in the Boston-Cambridge area. Mothers are allowed to keep their children with them and no severe restrictions are imposed on the women. They are helped with practical problems, offered food, housing and welfare agencies, and offered moral support. No one is pressured to return to her home. All such decisions are left to the women themselves. Here is another candle, one of many, lit by our friends of the Quakers. Roots and fruits Alex Haley has done a service for both the blacks and whites in America with his book, "Roots." Many of you saw the TV series based on this document, many have read all 788 pages of the book, and others have sampled it in the Reader's Digest condensation. The memory of the past is a powerful factor in our present day conduct. I believe that our recent account on the 200th birthday of the United States has had an influence on the main stream of our life today. It is good for us to look back and see the way that we have come, as individuals and as a people. But it is absolutely necessary that we look forward, too. Some may laugh at the "American dream" but I feel that it is important to the future of the United States to have an alabaster city gleam undimmed by human tears. The seeker after God There was a dreamer once, whose spirit fled in thwarted search for God. He stirred the dust on ancient books; he sought For certain light in what the teachers taught; He took his staff and went into the Wise. And deeper darkness fell about his eyes: He lived a hermit, and forebore his food. And God left visitless his solitude: He wrapped himself in prayer night after night, And mocking demons danced around his sight. Reigned at last to Him he could not find, He turned again to live among mankind - And when from man he no more stood apart, God, on that instant, visited his heart!

Advertisement for 'The Bible Speaks' by Eugene Brewer. It features a black and white photo of a man and text describing the book as a collection of numerous bills currently before Congress, representing serious efforts to subject non-profit (including religious) groups to some regulation of their money-raising schemes. The text also mentions a 'Bring the Family' Sunday 7 PM Calvary Church event.

Predicts jobs

HARTFORD (UPI) — Gov. Ella T. Grasso says 200 jobs will be created by an indoor mushroom farm in East Windsor. The governor said the facility, to be built and operated by Castle and Cooke Inc. of Honolulu, "will produce in excess of ten million pounds of fresh mushrooms annually." "The 200 new jobs expected to result from this project will provide a significant economic stimulus to the East Windsor area," she said. "Even though this facility will be a farm operation, the employment will be year-round because the mushrooms will be grown inside."

Town to start flushing west side mains Monday

The Town of Manchester Water Department will be flushing lines in the west side of town beginning Monday.

The department will be flushing west of Main St. between Hartford Rd. and Center St. to the town line. There may be discoloration of water and reduced pressure in the area during the flushing.

If water appears discolored, the homeowner should try to avoid using it until it clears. This will prevent rust and sediment from being brought into the home's system.

If sediment does get into a home's hot water tank, the homeowner should wait until the water clears and then open the faucet at the bottom of the tank to drain the collected material, which will settle at the bottom.

Also, if a load of wash is done during the period of discolored water, the load should be done again after the water clears. Four ounces of cream of tartar should be added to help clean any discoloration of the clothing.

About town

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Mann will serve as host and hostess Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m. at Lutz Junior Museum, which is open to the public free of charge.

Profile programs scheduled

The first production of this year's edition of "Manchester Profile" will be broadcast on cable channels 21 and 13 Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. The program will include coverage of Manchester Community College's commencement, the town Memorial Day parade, an evening with the Manchester Arts Council, and a discussion of the Board of Education's new summer enrichment program. Mark Zarbo, a senior at the University of Connecticut, and Marc Hirschfeld, a senior at Syracuse University, will co-direct the hourly news show. Last summer, the two produced 15 hourly programs. William Tierney, management analyst for the Town of Manchester, will serve as the liaison between the video production team and the town government.

Ask Kleiner
By Dick Kleiner
Image of a man with a mustache.

DEAR DICK: Was Janet Gaynor or Mizzi Gaynor married to clothes designer Adria? ELEANOR WILLIAMS, Stockton, Calif.
That was Janet.
DEAR DICK: Do you happen to know what has happened to the singer, Gary Puckett? He used to be with a group called The Union Gap, then he was on his own, but I haven't heard of him lately. Is he still in the business? HELEN MUNROE, Sparks, Nev.
My musical sources tell me that Puckett is still singing, doing mostly club dates in and around Portland, Ore., and Las Vegas.
DEAR DICK: On NBC Saturday Night, sometime in April, I saw the Queen of England. My parents won't believe me. Was it really her? VERNON BAKER, Roseburg, Ore.
Always listen to mom and dad. It was a spoof, that's all, with one of the Not-Ready-For-Prime-Time-Players making like Her Majesty.
DEAR DICK: I would like to know why the first half of "The Wizard of Oz" is filmed in black and white and the rest in color. I could never figure that out. BARBRA SCHMOLZE, Philadelphia, Pa.
That was producer Mervyn LeRoy's idea, and I think it was a good one. The film magically turned into color when Dorothy landed in Oz, and it helped establish the mood of the film.
DEAR DICK: My hairdresser tells me that Farrah Fawcett-Major's hair is a $5,000 wig from France. She says no human hair could hold up so perfectly at all times. Is this true? DEBBIE CHRISTIE, Lethbridge, Alta., Can.
In this case, even your hairdresser doesn't know. Farrah's friends insist that that is all her own hair, that she does everything in it, even swims with it, and doesn't wear a wig. Just lucky in the hair department.
DEAR DICK: Is Vivien Leigh, who played Scarlett O'Hara in "Gone With the Wind," still alive? Is there a book that tells everything about Clark Gable and where could I purchase it? CHRIS BAYER, Columbus, Ohio.
Vivien Leigh died in 1967. There are several good biographies of Clark Gable around. Your local bookstore probably has one or more of them, or can order them for you.
DEAR DICK: I saw "Something For Joey," the story of John Cappelletti and his younger brother. Could you please tell me who played John Cappelletti. LORI HOPPER, Stafford, Mo.
That was Marc Singer, and a fine performance it was, too.
DEAR DICK: What is Kevin Tighe's real occupation? He plays Roy DeSoto on Emergency. LINDA SCHILARMAN, Dubuque, Iowa.
Strange how so many people wonder about Kevin and his Emergency partner, Randy Mantooh. They are both actors, of course, and not real firemen.

New stamps due from United Nations

By RUSS MacKENDRICK

There will be a half dozen new items coming from the UN Postal Administration June 27. This is the batch that was originally slated for Jan 7 but postponed due to mysterious "unavoidable circumstances."

Shown here is a neat 31-cent airmail stamp designed by A. Polluck of Canada and printed by photogravure at the Heracleo Fournier facility (Spain) in two shades of maroon.

The first-day ceremonies will be held in the public lobby of the General Assembly building at 11:30 a.m. The American Air Mail Society will have a special souvenir folder for sale at that time.

The AAMS will collaborate with the UNPA in the launching of the pictured stamp plus a 25-cent airmail stamp and a 22-cent air letter sheet. They don't have much to celebrate these days now that our own airmails are no more, so they will make the most of this.

The other three releases will be postal cards — a nine-cent one and two in Swiss franc values.

The UNPA press release makes it tough to order the stationary. The weirdest part is where they say "Payment in cash is not acceptable and will be returned." Isn't there something on the law books about legal tender? Also, personal checks need two weeks to clear, so it would be easier to go down there and get everything over the counter at the public concourse of the building.

Fast production

An article in AAMS journal tells of the production of the Lindbergh stamp (Scott No. C10). As we know, Lindbergh landed in Paris on May 21 and on June 18 the stamp had first-day ceremonies at Washington, Detroit, St. Louis and Little Falls (Minn.).

It seems that the designing was started without formal request, and a model was ready for approval June 3. Engraving of the die commenced at noon the same day. A proof was made from the die June 6, the die was hardened June 8, "and by 8 a.m. June 9, six rolls were made from the die, one set of plates went to press, and by 11:30 p.m. of the same day 560,000 stamps

For further information, address the club at P.O. Box 3021, Enfield, Conn. 06082.

The participants pay a fee and jockey for position with their electronic contraptions and await the signal. Observers of such things have likened the ensuing bedlam to the Run of the Homesteaders at the opening of the Oklahoma Territory in the movie "Cimarron."

Something to do

Second Sunday Events:
Stamp Bourse at the Ramada Inn, 201 Washington Ave., North Haven.
S.S. Stamp Bourse, at the Holiday Inn Ballroom, I-91 and Wilbur Cross Parkway, Meriden.
Exhibition and Bourse at the Cardinal Spellman Philatelic Museum, Regis College, Weston, Mass., 11 to 5. Admission: 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children.
Annual Meeting Night for the Manchester Philatelic Society at Mott's Community Hall, 7 to 10 p.m. Officers will be elected; otherwise much as usual. Visitors always welcome.

CB Convac

Crossing the U.S.-Canadian border

By INK DIPPER

It's the time of the year when vacationists start thinking about crossing the border between the United States and Canada. And we CBers are going to modulating, whether we're headed north or south.

What's the difference between the two countries with respect of CBing?

In the United States it takes at least one month, sometimes as long as three months, to obtain your CB license from Gettysburg, Pa., where the FCC processing center is located.

In Canada, it is quite probable that the applicant's license will be sent him by return mail from one of the five regional offices located strategically throughout the nation. The Canadian Department of Communications actually operates from 16 offices, but five of these regional offices have been designated for CB license processing.

Though licenses are now free in the United States, and $13.50 (for a three year term) in Canada, the smoothness of handling excels in Canada.

Additionally, should a CBer from the United States wish to visit Canada this summer and open his mike while he's traveling, a request to the Department of Communications will be answered immediately with a temporary permit. The same request by a Canadian to the Federal Communications Commission will probably require at least three months for a response.

There are in excess of 7.5 million CBers in the United States now, according to the FCC. In Canada, it is reported there are nearly a quarter-million sets now in use, with 600,000 expected by the end of 1977, and a projected 1.2 million CBers in 1978.

CBing is growing fast in Canada — relative to its population, faster than in the United States. This obviously is putting a severe strain on the Department of Communications, and it worries the regional directors, who are rightly proud of their efficiency in servicing CBers.

The 40-channel units were approved and usable in Canada, effective April, 1977.

Insofar as regulations governing CBing, the Canadian rules are not dissimilar to those of the United States. Monitoring is handled differently, though. In the United States, the FCC maintains mobile squads of investigators on the search for violations, including over-powered CB units. The much smaller staff of the Canadian DOC, however, can only investigate when there have been interference or violation reports.

For example, in Vancouver, B.C., the regional DOC went into action when faulty CB units were being picked up at the head-end of the Vancouver cable television operation and distributed through the entire cable system. (It turned out that some CB units had harmonic radiation too high and this was causing the interference on several channels of the cable system.)

Another difference between the United States and Canada is that Citizens Band Radio in the United States is General Radio Service in Canada.

So CBers, warm up your mikes and enjoy your vacations, whichever side of the border you may find yourself on.
