Trees take brunt of storm

This photo shows some of the damage to trees caused by Sunday afternoon's storm which brought heavy rain and a half inch of hail to Manchester. The strong winds, heavy rain and frequent lightning was reported by the National Weather Bureau in Windsor Locks throughout several areas of the state. Manchester and East Hartford received the most extensive tree and power damage. This damage is at the home of Reginald Pinto, 371 W. Middle Tpke.

Late Sunday storm causes extensive power outages

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter

A sudden late afternoon thunderstorm Sunday brought about a half inch of hail, strong winds and heavy rain for about a half hour to the Manchester and East Hartford area. Lightning caused a power failure for 1,576 residents in the central section of East Hartford for an hour and 20 minutes, according to Hartford Electric Light and Power Co. officials.

The lightning damage occurred to a utility pole on Park Ave., east of Mitchell Ave. in East Hartford. Lightning also caused a 15-minute power failure for 188 Manchester residents in the Center St. area at 6:30 p.m. and 64 residents in the Bolton Center Rd. area were out of power 2 hours and 43 minutes from 5:52 p.m.

The storm came from the west, causing hail and thunderstorms in Agawam, Mass. and Enfield, before causing heavy damage to trees and power lines in the Manchester-East Hartford area, according to the National Weather Service in Windsor Locks.

The winds were strong enough to pull up several tents at the Manchester Community College New England Relays and flood the track before the conclusion of all events. It was the second time during the day that the event was delayed by rain. An earlier shower at noon delayed all afternoon events by about a half hour. Seven events were left when the 5:30 p.m. storm arrived, but were eventually completed.

Two workers are injured

Two workers were injured in an accident at Bolton and Cemetery Roads in Vernon this morning. Details and names were not available.

Reportedly the men were working on unloading pipe for the I-86 project and were nearly electrocuted.

Reportedly one of the workers is in good condition and one in serious condition. At press time the accident was still under investigation and Vernon Police would not release any information.

Residents reported hailstones ranging in size from moth balls to golf balls in several areas.

The storm traveled southeast into New London County, according to the weather bureau.

The Manchester highway department reported no problems with flooding except in one residence and no problem from the brooks. The department received a few calls about debris on the road today.

Another thunderstorm early Sunday morning caused power outages for a large number of residents in the south central portion of East Hartford. During that outage, starting at 5:34 a.m. and also caused by lightning, 742 residents were out of power for 44 minutes, 551 for 1 hour and 29 minutes, 34 for 2 hours and 36 minutes and one for 3 hours and 16 minutes, according to HELCO.

A power outage to 240 Manchester residents occurred Friday night, but was not storm related. The outage lasted from one hour and 15 minutes to one hour and 55 minutes in the section east of Manchester in the Oak St. area.

Panic ensued.

Jerry Wayne Dickey, the sheriff's criminal investigator, ran back to open the cells and collided with visitors stampeding toward the jail entrance through the smoke.

"All the visitors tried to get out the door where I was, and they pinned me against the wall, and I dropped my keys," he said. "I shouted for the dispatcher to call and get a bulldozer over here so we could push the wall down and get the people out."

The lethal gas took its toll so quickly that the screams from the jail stopped within four minutes after the fire was discovered. Four members

Burning foam may be 'toxic agent'

Police seek cause of 42 jail deaths

COLUMBIA, Tenn. (UPI) — Authorities said the foam in a padded cell would be analyzed today to determine the "toxic agent" that apparently killed 42 prisoners and visitors in a fire in the Maury County jail.

The fire, allegedly started by an emotionally disturbed youth in the padded cell during visiting hours Sunday, was confined to the 6-by-10-foot cell, but black smoke and gases spread through the ventilating system.

"This (two-inch thick foam padding) was what caused the killing gases. We're going to get it analyzed," said assistant fire chief Wayne Hickman.

Dr. George Mayfield, a local physician, said blood samples were taken from eight of the victims and autopsies would be performed on two of the dead to determine the "toxic agent" that killed them. He did not rule out simple carbon monoxide.

Sheriff Bill Voss said Andy Zimmer, 16, a fugitive from a home for mentally disturbed children in Dousman, Wis., set fire to his cell, possibly with a cigarette given him by someone visiting another prisoner.

Around 75 persons were in the one-story, cross-shape jail when the fire broke out about 1:30 p.m. CDT. "I'm on fire," Zimmer screamed, and the cry of "fire" rose above the buzz of conversation in the jail.

Panic ensued.

Jerry Wayne Dickey, the sheriff's criminal investigator, ran back to open the cells and collided with visitors stampeding toward the jail entrance through the smoke.

"All the visitors tried to get out the door where I was, and they pinned me against the wall, and I dropped my keys," he said. "I shouted for the dispatcher to call and get a bulldozer over here so we could push the wall down and get the people out."

The lethal gas took its toll so quickly that the screams from the jail stopped within four minutes after the fire was discovered. Four members of one family were believed to be among the victims.

Ambulances shuttled 75 persons to Maury County Hospital. Hospital officials said early today that 42 persons were killed and 33 were injured. Of the injured, 12 were transferred to Nashville hospitals, six were treated and released and 15 were hospitalized here.

One witness said Zimmer's padded cell "went up like wildfire."

Chief deputy Bob Farmer and jailer Willie Cummings dragged Zimmer from his smoking cell as the ventilation system gushed blinding smoke through the building.

Firemen rushed to the jail from their station a block away and began punching a hole in the back wall. They cleared a hole about the time Dickey, alternately running outside to get fresh air and then groping along a smoke-filled corridor, found the keys. That was about 12 minutes after the fire began.

"That place was so full you could hardly walk in it," said ambulance attendant Eugene Ford. "It was absolute hell."

Court strikes down lawyers' ad ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court today struck down the ban against advertising of lawyers' prices and services.

The decision said that in the case of lawyers, "it is entirely possible that advertising will serve to reduce, not advance, the cost of legal services to the consumer."

The restriction first was imposed in 1908 by the American Bar Association in support of professional dignity. It now is enforced in all states either by law or by a rule of court.

The test case stemmed from a case by the Arizona Supreme Court of two Phoenix attorneys, John R. Bates and Van O'Steen, who operate a legal clinic.

Their advertisement in the Arizona Republic offered to handle such matters as uncontested divorces for $175 and individual bankruptcies for $250, plus filing fees.

In the opinion by Justice Harry Blackmun, the court said advertising legal services is not inherently misleading, since only routine services lend themselves to advertising and for which fixed rates meaningfully can be set.

The opinion concluded that advertising, traditional mechanism in a free market economy for a supplier to inform a potential purchaser of the availability and terms of exchange, may well benefit the administration of justice.

At the same time the opinion warned that advertising by lawyers may still be regulated.

About 3,000 stage pro-nuclear rally

MANCHESTER, N.H. (UPI) — Saying nuclear power means jobs, about 3,000 rallied in support of the planned Seabrook nuclear power plant — a project which triggered a massive anti-nuclear rally last month.

All the speakers Sunday in the sweltering J.F.K. Coliseum were cheered, but the biggest round of applause went to atomic power-advocate Gov. Melvin Thompson, who received standing ovations when he arrived and left.

"Why should a small minority be allowed to bring America to her knees," Thompson said, referring to the 1,414 anti-nuclear demonstrators who were arrested last month for occupying the construction site of the Seabrook plant.

The plant became the focal point for antinuclear demonstrators around the country. Thompson urged the crowd to continue their support for nuclear power until "America is not dependent on the OPEC nations or anyone else." He said the crowd was a "better audience than I saw on the first of May... by comparison you're beautiful."

The rally was attended by members of electrical, construction, pipefitter, and plumber unions from all New England states, and New York and New Jersey. Many wore hard hats and carried signs which were distributed at the parade site.

"The parade doesn't mean anything without a sign," a man in a sound truck told the marchers. The rally was organized by the New Hampshire Voice of Energy and was designed to counter the Seabrook occupation.

"You have to do what your competition does, or yield the field to those with other ideas," said Madeline Thompson, 53, the head of the organization.

She said the rally was designed to "let people in Washington know there is strong support for Seabrook construction."

Construction permits for the Seabrook plant were suspended last November when the regional administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency ruled against the use of an open ocean cooling system.

Opinion

The price of injustice

Someone has finally said it: The purpose of school integration is integration, and its academic benefits to the integrators is purely coincidental.
"The question is not whether one likes integration," E. Lutrell Bing, assistant superintendent of Hillsborough County, Fla., schools told a recent conference in Washington sponsored by the National Institute of Education. "The question is whether we're going to abridge the constitutional rights of our citizens."

Integration or desegregation has nothing to do with the academic progress of students.
This, alas, may be true. Happily, however, Bing was able to report that both ends have been served in Florida. The countrywide desegregation that began there in 1971 has raised the achievement scores of both blacks and whites, he said. And because desegregation is countrywide, Florida has avoided the problem of the white flight because "there's nowhere for anyone to flee."

There are not many other similar success stories elsewhere in the country, unfortunately. Resistance to busing has only begun, judging by an enthusiastic convention held in Nashville a couple of weeks ago by a new organization called the National Association for Neighborhood Schools. Formed last August with an initial membership of several hundred thousand and predicts a million members within the year.

Let it be stated as emphatically as possible that deliberate, conspired racial segregation is as wrong as it ever was. It is the wisdom of the busing remedy that is, or should be, the issue.

ROTC is back

Military careers - especially via the college Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) - are beginning to look better to young Americans facing a tight job market.
Army ROTC, largest of the three run by the military services and which wilted under the torrent of student protests from 165,430 cadets in 1967 to 33,220 in 1973, has grown steadily each year since. Enrollment now stand at 54,671.

Three reasons are given. First, the Vietnam War, which generated the protests, is over. A new college generation is looking at ROTC with eyes unjaundiced by disaffection with that wretched conflict.
Then, too, last year's Bicentennial celebration brought what ROTC officials refer to as "a tinge of patriotism" to college students.
Most important, perhaps, is the fact that these days the military is a beneficent employer. New second lieutenants start at about $12,000 a year, plus such cushy perquisites as commissary privileges, free medical care and the like.

Almanac

By United Press International
Today is Monday, June 27, the 178th day of 1977 with 187 to follow.
The moon is moving from its first quarter toward full.
The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars and Jupiter.

Bids reflected the harvest; if the crop was good, the prices were lower; as the season neared the end, and the supply dwindled, up went the prices.
We didn't look for volume figures, but in 1948 the strawberry market produced $87,000.

The market usually opened the first week of June. It reopened in the fall for truck garden products.
There once was a football field there for midgets; there was softball. Most of them are still there, but altered. The field was low and the approaching roadway was not paved.

The market really was an auction. It opened during June for about three weeks to handle the strawberry crops in the area. Most of them came from Bolton.
The Herald covers the daily auction with a reporter. We had a late copy deadline thirty years ago - 3:30. The market opened at 2 P.M. and it didn't take Robert M. Reed and Sons Auctioneers long to take bids on the baskets of berries.

The Manchester Trust Co. was the treasurer for the association, and a bank employee was there every day to collect auction bids.
We remember that Louis Andisio was the market master. There were others, too.

'Well we're not Georgia legislature'

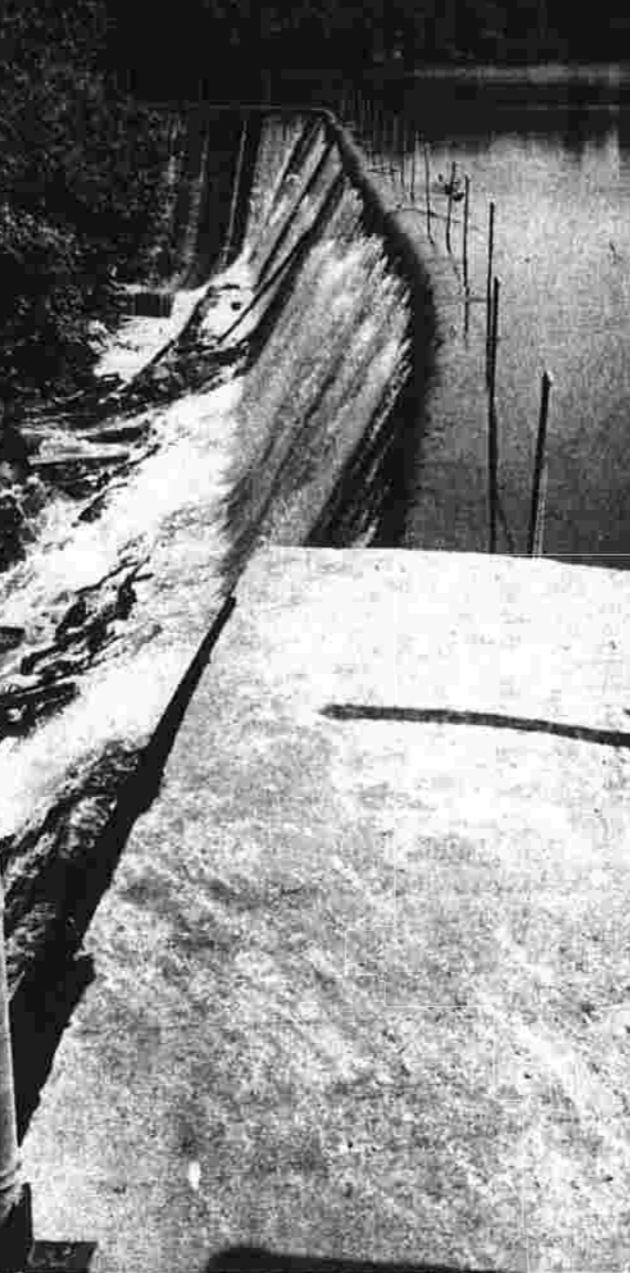

WASHINGTON - It's not true Jimmy Carter only recently discovered Congress. He knew it was there all the time, and tried not to notice it.
This is not to condemn him out of hand. All Presidents, in varying degrees, have looked upon Congress as a neighborhood nuisance. A man moves into the White House full of plans to make an honest woman of the country. He wants all his programs, big and little, enacted yesterday. Time is of the essence in a rescue operation.

A sleeping giant that had seemed to be a sleeping giant, dreaming of pork barrel projects to insure election, gets into the act. It reminds the President that while he has the authority to propose, Congress retains for itself the right to dispose.
That's what Congress has done to Jimmy Carter. His members and assorted committees have started to whittle down his programs to Congress' taste, notably in the energy field.

This time, however, there is a difference. Usually Congress does its surgery more or less good-naturedly when the President is a member of its majority party. True, Kennedy had his problems with Capitol Hill, but there was very little ill will toward him personally. And, of course, everybody liked the Republican Ike even when the legislative branch was frustrating him, and even throwing out on his ear Ike's trusted aide, the dour Sherman Adams.

But Carter is an outsider. He is not a member of the club, as Kennedy and Johnson were, or a hero in Ike's image. He is the guy who walloped all the Establishment candidates for the Democratic nomination, and in the process treated them with a usually unspoken but always conspicuous contempt.
Carter campaigned mostly for himself. He wasted little time giving a hand to other Democratic candidates; indeed he made a point of avoiding some of them. He committed an even more serious sin: He campaigned against a Democratic Congress, in effect blaming his own party for many of the country's troubles. He even insulted Lyndon Johnson, a man whose first political loyalty was to his beloved Congress, and who was always a stand-up Democrat.

Cutting down the party "Hedfield!" exclaimed Rep. Tip O'Neill, D-Mass., during the campaign. "The man is cutting down his own party. I wouldn't be surprised if he said a kind word for Dick Nixon."
O'Neill, of course, went on to become House Majority Leader after appointment as one of the movers and shakers of the Congress Carter

Black gains are real

Don Oakley

The civil rights struggle of the 1960s, favorable court decisions and the passage of equal opportunity laws it must be proved that a seniority resulted in more economic, educational and social gains by black Americans than they achieved in any previous decade.
More significantly, blacks are retaining those gains during the recessionary 1970s, says Prof. Reynolds Farley, a demographer with the University of Michigan. Some skeptics had predicted that the leveling of racial barriers was only temporary, and attributed it to the soaring Vietnam wartime economy rather than to any fundamental decline in white prejudice.
It would also mean that the predictions of the skeptics could yet come true and that the philosophy of "last hired, first fired" may once again threaten the hopes of blacks and others for a fairer share of the economic pie.

Examining some 65 current students and census reports on education, occupation and income trends, Farley finds that the predictions were wrong: the gains of the 1960s have not disappeared.
Despite a shrunken job market and a standstill in civil rights and anti-poverty legislation, "racial differences have continued to narrow in all spheres," he says.

Young blacks and young whites are now more alike in educational attainment than ever before. And while the earnings of black men still lag far behind those of white men, the earnings of black men rose more rapidly than those of white men in the first half of the decade. By 1974, the wages of black women were closer to those of white women with comparable experience.
Gains are small. Nevertheless, he points out, these gains are small compared with many of the racial differences that still remain. For instance, the purchasing power of the typical black family in 1974 was still only equivalent to that of a white family 10 years earlier.

It should also be noted that Farley's study was undertaken before a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision, which civil rights activists have called not merely unfavorable but "disastrous."

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Don't tell me you've been a closet socialist all these years. How can you say that? "There is no such thing as a 'frigid dear' - only clumsy men!"

I thought that satisfying sex was achieved through the loving cooperation of both partners, and not dependent on the male's aggressiveness or degree of expertise.
Or maybe you will agree to another sexist corollary: "There are no important men, only emasculating women." That way you can offend BOTH sexes.

EQUAL PARTNER
DEAR PARTNER: Generalizations are dangerous, but you may have stumbled on a truism. I wouldn't be surprised if more than half of the cases of male impotency were due to "emasculating women." Wizease the number of men who can't perform at home but are tigers with their mistresses.

I saw him eat a few times before we were married and was appalled at his table manners, but I thought I could change him after we were married.
Maybe it's a case of not being able to teach an old dog new tricks, but every time I mention the way he eats he becomes irritated and the battle is on.

When he starts to eat, he puts his face right down into the plate like a dog, and he doesn't speak or look up until he's cleaned his plate.
He is a good man, a good provider, and believe it or not, he's well-educated. How he escaped learning table manners is a mystery to me.

I love him and don't want to divorce him, but he's repulsive at mealtimes. Any suggestions on how to save an otherwise good marriage?
NEAR ATLANTA

DEAR NEAR: Yes. Don't bring it up when he's eating, but catch him when he is in a good mood and tell him how important it is to you that he improve his table manners. If he is as wonderful as you say he is to all other respects, you may have to be a little more tolerant. Divorcing a man because he lacks table manners is like chopping off a man's head to get rid of the dandruff.

DEAR ABBY: We have a big, headstrong, disrespectful 17-year-old son who uses abusive language and breaks the furniture in order to get his way.
Now he is demanding the $900 he earned and put away in a savings account.

My husband wants to give it all to him right now, and then completely disown the boy when he turns 18 (legal age).
I want to hold back some of that money to pay for the damage he's done to our house and furniture, plus a deposit for further damage until he gives him. What do you think, Abby?
OREGON MOM

DEAR MOM: I would not give him any of the money earned or the furniture. And then I would deduct the cost of repairing the damage.

'Juice stealers' upset utilities

HAFTFORD (UPI) — Spokesmen for Connecticut utilities say they're getting increasingly concerned about "juice stealers," the shoplifters of electricity who tamper with meters to save themselves money.

Norman S. Tasker, manager of system security for Northeast Utilities, New England's largest utility, said Sunday that meter tampering wasn't considered a major problem until one to two years ago.

He said Northeast, which has 850,000 Connecticut customers, estimates it is losing $2.5 million annually because of meter tampering. The firm now seeks criminal prosecution of anyone who is caught.

School board to act on proficiency tests

The Manchester Board of Education is scheduled to act on an administrative recommendation to require proficiency examinations for high school graduation at tonight's regular meeting at 8 in the board rooms at 45 N. School St.

The superintendent's report will include plans for the Nathan Hale School playground, presented by Principal Leo Diana.

The Citizens Advisory Committee last week approved an allocation of no more than $50,000 for improvements to the playground. Its condition had been brought to the attention of the town Board of Directors by parents and residents of the school neighborhood.

Electric Volkswagen wins AV regatta

Mercedes running on soybean oil to capture this year's top prize in the Alternative Vehicle Regatta.

The regatta, held for the third year and the brainchild of Charles McCarthur from Tolland, Conn., was initiated to give people a chance to test out experimental vehicles.

The object was to make it to the top with the least amount of fuel energy.

Contestants came from Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, North Carolina, New York, Connecticut and West Virginia.

The J.C. Penney Co. appeared before the PZC last Monday to seek special exceptions required for its proposed two-million square foot catalog distribution center.

The PZC is expected to hear an inland-wetlands request from Robert Stone and Jack Goldberg, two developers who have proposed a 70-unit residence AA Cluster Zone development for the Lenti Farms tract.

The proposal includes a two-pond area that would be used as a drainage detention area. The work would require an inland-wetlands permit, but the permit request does not require a public hearing.

Many residents of the area spoke against the proposed development at a public hearing on June 13. Much of the opposition was because of the proposed drainage areas, which would be a safety hazard for area homes, the residents said.

Miss Manchester places second

Miss Manchester 1977, Cindy Tucker of 135 Burnham St., did Manchester proud Saturday night as she captured the first runner-up spot in the Miss Connecticut Scholarship Beauty Contest at the Waterbury Center Theatre.

The 20-year-old junior at Eastern Connecticut State College, sponsored by the Manchester Jaycees, also won the talent and personality competition in her division giving her a total of $600 in scholarship monies.

Miss Karen Kopina, Miss Riggall 1977, took top honors and will reign as Miss Connecticut for the ensuing year and compete for the coveted title of Miss America in Atlantic City in September.

Highlighting the program was the appearance of Miss America 1977, Dorothy Benham, the former Miss Minnesota.

Other runners-up were Miss Brierwood, Colleen Marie Cooney; Miss Cheshire, Patricia Ann Brucato; and Miss Fairfield, Valerie Jean Dreyer.

The Miss Congeniality Award was presented to Miss Waterdown, Lydia Ann Aureli.

A near capacity crowd filled the theatre and gave a standing ovation to the contestants.

The final tryouts for "Cabaret" will be held by the Little Theatre of Manchester at the LTM workshop on 22 Oak St. tonight and Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Manchester PZC faces full agenda tonight

Manchester's Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) will meet at 7:30 p.m. today to consider several pending issues. The agenda includes the Stone & Goldberg and J.C. Penney Co. applications, although both may be tabled until next month.

The PZC is expected to hear an inland-wetlands request from Robert Stone and Jack Goldberg, two developers who have proposed a 70-unit residence AA Cluster Zone development for the Lenti Farms tract.

The proposal includes a two-pond area that would be used as a drainage detention area. The work would require an inland-wetlands permit, but the permit request does not require a public hearing.

Many residents of the area spoke against the proposed development at a public hearing on June 13. Much of the opposition was because of the proposed drainage areas, which would be a safety hazard for area homes, the residents said.

HSA unit to review needs poll

Results of a questionnaire to help determine Manchester area's top priority health needs will be among the first items to be discussed Tuesday night by members of the Subarea F of the Health Systems Agency of North Central Connecticut (HSA).

The Subarea F will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Municipal Building. Raymond Newman of Glastonbury, HSA board member, will conduct the meeting in the absence of Paul Moss, chairman, who is on vacation.

The HSA has tabulated the results of questionnaires that were distributed to HSA members last spring. The questionnaire gave all participants a chance to list their area's health needs as they saw them.

The agenda will also include a discussion of the formation of task forces within the HSA to develop some of the most important health needs.

Town studies proposal to use self-insurance

The Town of Manchester is studying a proposal to institute a self-insurance program to provide coverage for all town employees.

The town presently provides coverage through three private insurance services, but a self-insurance program could cut town insurance costs, according to a study done by Connecticut Health Plans Ltd. of West Hartford.

Charles F. McCarthy Jr., assistant town manager, said that the self-insurance approach, if adopted, would result in no change in the insurance coverage provided for town employees. The only change would be in the method of paying those benefits.

The town would, in effect, become the insurance firm providing coverage for its employees. The employees' insurance deductions would go to the town, which would then pay for coverage of any insurance costs that might be needed.

McCarthy said that the town's staff self-insurance program would be large enough to spread the cost if such a plan was adopted.

But, the town has reached no final decision on such a program and whether it would be cost-effective. Controller Thomas S. Moore said.

Elderly woman hurt in auto accident

Douglas E. Graveline, 16, of 94 Foster St., was charged with reckless driving in connection with an auto accident on E. Center St. Saturday afternoon.

Graveline received a fracture to his right arm which was treated and released from Manchester Memorial Hospital.

Police reported that Graveline's car, was going east on E. Center St. about 5:40 p.m. when it hit the curb, drove over a sidewalk and hit a tree.

The car continued through bushes on a lawn, crossed both eastbound lanes of the street, went onto the traffic island and over a tree, breaking it. The car then crossed about westbound lanes and came to a stop after hitting a utility pole.

The distance from the first point of impact to the final point was 175.5 ft. Graveline was also issued a written warning for driving after drinking. He was released for court appearance July 11.

Ludwig Miczko, 47, of New Britain was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Sunday night in connection with a two-vehicle accident on New State St.

He was treated for contusions of the chest at Manchester Memorial Hospital and released.

Police reported that Miczko's car struck the rear of a car driven by Leo J. Marquis Jr., 30, of Amston, which in turn struck the car driven by Robert Edwards, 71, of 70 Imperial Dr., Apt. P. The vehicles which were struck were stopped for a stop light, police said.

Miczko was released on a $100 non-surety bond for court July 11.

In other police reports over the weekend, the owner of a farm on Burnham St. reported vandalism and damage to two tractors with an estimated damage of $1,000.

Two Croft Drive residences reported damage to their lawns from motor vehicles on Sunday morning. An attempted theft of a television set was reported by a Garden Dr. resident Sunday afternoon, but the intruder fled before anything was taken, police reported.

president, Leonard Cutter, said that it couldn't guarantee such a savings, but added, "With our experience and expertise in the area of self-funding Employee Benefit Plans, these numbers are reasonably attainable."

"Whatever our experience is dictates what our succeeding year's premium cost will be," Moore said. Thus, if the town has only minimal insurance costs for one year, the following year's charge would be quite low.

The main effect of a self-insurance program would be in Connecticut Medical Service (CMS) insurance provided by the town.

CMS coverage is primarily for medical and surgical costs. Moore said that the town pays a flat rate for insurance coverage from CMS.

The study done by Connecticut Health Plans Ltd. said that the town would save about 50 per cent on its CMS payments. It estimated that the town could save more than $300,000 per year by adopting a self-insurance program.

The study, written by the firm's president, Leonard Cutter, said that it couldn't guarantee such a savings, but added, "With our experience and expertise in the area of self-funding Employee Benefit Plans, these numbers are reasonably attainable."

"We're going to be very deliberate. This is an area that's just opening up," McCarthy said.

Congressmen face self-interest votes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of Congress will be faced with two strictly self-interest roll call votes amid a busy week in advance of a 10-day recess over the July 4 holiday.

The $12,500 annual raise raise which members accepted four months ago without a vote is back this week, as well as a vote on whether to pass up an annual cost of living increase due members in October unless they vote to spurn it.

On Tuesday the House calls up a $941 million appropriations bill to finance Congress and related agencies in the 1978 fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The emotional issues of abortion and school busing face the Senate, meanwhile. Both are included in a $60.7 billion money bill for the Department of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare.

The House's embarrassing sex problems started with a Senate-passed bill that calls for skipping an estimated 5 per cent of living pay boost for Congress. Top executive branch officials and the judiciary.

The measure is expected to pass easily, as it did in the Senate. It will set the stage for a tougher fight over cutting off the 29 per cent pay boost Congress got March 1.

Opponents of the increase complained because a roll call was avoided when the raise was adopted on recommendation of an independent panel.

Now, House Speaker Thomas O'Neill says, critics will have their chance to see a vote on the issue because an amendment will be offered to cut the current $77,500 a year pay back to $44,600 when the congressional appropriations bill is considered.

O'Neill, a strong supporter of the pay boost, predicted a close vote. In the Senate, the most explosive issue this week is a provision in the HEW budget which says no federal money can be used for abortions except to save a woman's life, in a medical emergency, or if a woman is a victim of rape or incest.

A House-passed version of the bill prohibits federal money for abortions under any circumstances. A similar anti-abortion measure approved last year is now before the Supreme Court.

Work also continues this week in committees on President Carter's energy programs. The House Ways and Means Committee hopes to complete work on energy tax proposals while a commerce subcommittee wraps up nontax energy proposals. The Senate Finance Committee holds hearings on funneling energy tax revenues back to taxpayers.

NEW YORK (UPI) — A banner in the crowd at Yankee Stadium Sunday read, "We pardoned Nixon — let's pardon Reggie." And 55,039 fans showed up to watch the Yanks take a 5-4 victory from the Red Sox and sweep their three-game series. The bickering seems to have ceased. The Bronx Bombers are making their move. "We don't play Boston again until September and then I figure we'll be by then," said Billy Martin, obviously pleased with his team's performance. "I don't think that series in Fenway will draw very many fans unless they fill the park to bow the Red Sox. Martin's cockiness is understandable but Boston Manager Don Zimmer took the sweep in stride. "This is no disaster," he said. "There's no way we could've continued at the pace we were going. We broke about every home record in the book. That had to be stopped sooner or later and it happens that we got

South Windsor debates fund priorities

South Windsor officials are expected again to "hash over" priorities for public works funding when they meet tonight at 7:30. Where to spend $438,000 awarded the town under the federal Public Works Employment Act brought the council into a heated discussion last week.

Three councilmen—Mayor Sandra Bender, Deputy Mayor Robert Myette and Raymond Danekl—favoring using the funds for the already-approved firehouse. Four council members—Leonard Sorostak, John Mitchell, Michael Essex and Edward Havens—voted to use the money for a new library. Although the vote favored the library, five votes were needed to make the decision official. Councilman John Archer and Councilman John Grebe were absent.

Bolton leader complains about noise at lake inn

After viewing activities at the Alpha Omega Inn June 19 at the request of a lake area resident, First Selectman David Dreselly has sent another complaint to the state Liquor Control Commission.

Dreselly said the noise was so loud it was impossible to hold a normal conversation. The resident said he saw the establishment's patrons drinking beer on the beach area and he saw beer being purchased at a stand adjacent to an outdoor terrace.

"I do not believe the Alpha Omega Inn is showing good neighbor qualities to the many local residents with property around the lake," Dreselly said. Dreselly said he has had other complaints about the establishment.

John Gorgoglione, general manager of the inn, says he is trying to keep the volume down, "but people have to realize this is a business." Gorgoglione said State Police visited the inn June 19 after receiving noise complaints, and they decided no police action was warranted.

The Board of Selectmen-elect that will take office July 1 will have an informational meeting Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at Bentley Memorial Library. The first official meeting of the new board is scheduled July 12 at 7:30 p.m. at the Community Hall.

State sues dead woman

WINDSOR (UPI)—The state of Connecticut is suing a dead woman for the cost of cleaning up the traffic accident in which she died.

The Small Claims Court suit charges the late Caroline S. Toner is liable for the $34.15 it cost to clean up oil spilled on the road. S. Toner was the driver of a 1965 Ford Mustang. The suit claims that "while operating her vehicle (she) failed to keep and maintain control of said vehicle and left the traveled portion of the roadway and required a cleanup crew after the accident."

Despite high winds, two interruptions by rain of 30 and 45 minutes, the second of a torrential nature which included hail stones that left Memorial Field's Wigren Track in puddles with seven events left on the schedule, part two of the 1977 New England Relays was completed yesterday after better than nine hours.

Nearly 750 athletes took part before a crowd that numbered as many as 1,500 before the storm broke. The first shortly after noon and the second at 5:30. The track was literally a pool of water which necessitated the inside two lanes being ruled out for the day's final runs.

Highlights included: World record holder George Frenn of Los Angeles successfully regaining his National AAU 56-pound weight throw championship.

Steve Lowell of Boston College managed to hold on to whip Gary Desjardins of Meriden and Bowling Green University in the mile in a photo finish. Each was clocked in 4:15.10 with Lowell winning by a hair.

Albert Lomety of Portsmouth, Va., and a 1976 Olympian with Ghana in the Montreal Games, lived up to advanced notices by winning both the 100 and 200-yard dashes and was named the meet's outstanding male Open Division participant.

Amy Davis, one of nine family members from Colchester, scored a double in the long jump and high jump to win Women's Open Division honors. She is out of the University of Guyana.

Lizette Hautau of Orangeburg, N.Y., who won the high school girls' division three mile race Saturday, came back Sunday to cop the mile run. Each was clocked in 4:15.10 with Lowell winning by a hair.

Manchester's Pacey Pet, a Loomis School student, won the shot put, and was selected the top male schoolboy competitor.

Scoring a double in the 120-yard hurdles and long jump was Greg Smith of the Jaguar Track Club in New York.

The muscular Frenn, who holds the world record of 49-8 1/2 feet, set in 1971, achieved his eighth national crown in the weights against the largest field ever.

Hill, a four-time USA Olympian, was third behind 50-year-old Bob Backus, another ex-Olympian. The latter was also runner-up a year ago.

Amy Davis, out of Bacon Academy in Colchester, comes from a family of 15 jump winners. She won the 100 and 200-yard dashes at the meet as well as the high jump. Competition was offered grammar school, high school and open participants.

Hollander upsets McDaid

By EARL YOST Sports Editor

What started out like a great day for the Irish was only half that in part one of the second annual New England Relays last Saturday when Tom Hollander upset Dan McDaid to win the 12-mile AAU championship and the three-mile race.

Handsome, freckle-faced, 19-year-old sophomore Patrick O'Neill of Southbury and the University of Connecticut zipped around the three-mile course in 13:08.9 to whip Wayne Jacob by 12 seconds.

The day's biggest surprise came when 24-year-old Tom Hollander, a Windsor resident who graduated from Eastern Michigan last month, overcame a 200-yard lead of defending champion Dan McDaid of Ireland at the halfway point to win by 200 yards in 1:02.33 with 27 seconds left.

McDaid, three-time winner of the Irish Marathon and twice a member of Ireland's Olympic team, was out front for first nine and one-half miles before Hollander took over and ran away from his 35-year-old chief.
