Flow of oil ends troubled trip

By JOHN ENGSTROM

VALDEZ, Alaska (UPI) — A thick river of North Slope crude oil, vanguard of a 10-billion barrel supply that will last into the 21st century, completed a troubled 800-mile journey across the nation's largest state early today, gushing into the Southern terminal of the $9 billion trans-Alaska pipeline.

The oil finally reached Valdez at 4:02 a.m. EDT (11:02 p.m. Thursday, Valdez time), after a 38-day run during which the line was shut down six times.

A bomb-shaped "pig" scooting ahead of the oil struck with a sharp "thunk" into a recovery trap to complete the trip from Prudhoe Bay. The black crude then gushed past into huge storage tanks at a rate of 200 barrels per minute.

Energy-hungry Americans will tap those barrels for the next 25 to 30 years to heat their homes, run their machinery, and provide countless other modern necessities.

Seconds after word was phoned from behind the tight security of the terminal, a siren atop the Valdez police department wailed a long greeting that bounced off the steep snow-capped mountains, which nearly surround the new oil superport.

Cars drove through the dusty streets of Valdez, horns blaring and firecrackers exploded in sporadic rapid-fire cracks.

Terminal workers immediately began filling 10 storage tanks with an estimated 2 million barrels before the first load is pumped into a tanker, probably during the weekend.

"At this time all systems are going smoothly and, of course, we are very happy about the arrival of the oil here in Valdez," said a spokesman for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. Inc. Alyeska workers at the Pipeline Club went about their drinking and pool playing with little reaction to the arrival of the oil, save for one bearded fellow who said "the gravy train is dead" and his high-paying job would soon be over.

Tourists mingled with Valdez residents in other bars and cafes to

Cohen to reconsider ban on Avcolle case appeal

WATERBURY (UPI) — Superior Court Judge Simon S. Cohen, beset with heavy criticism, will reconsider his refusal to let the state appeal his acquittal of former legislative leader Bernard L. Avcolle.

Cohen July 20 rejected a jury's guilty verdict and cleared Avcolle of murder charges.

Avcolle, 45, was accused of strangling his wife, Wanda, a 43-year-old nurse and mother of five found floating face down in a swimming pool Oct. 30, 1975.

Cohen said there was not enough evidence to support the conviction and dismissed the case.

He also refused to permit prosecutor Francis M. McDonald appeal the acquittal to the Connecticut Supreme Court.

State law requires the trial judge to give his permission before an appeal can proceed.

Cohen Thursday scheduled a Monday hearing in Waterbury Superior Court to allow McDonald to restate his reasons for wanting to appeal the case.

Cohen has already heard McDonald's arguments on two occasions. The first time was immediately after Cohen threw out the verdict.

The 68-year-old judge said "motion denied" in apparent response to McDonald's request for permission to appeal, but the next day claimed he was misunderstood.

"I went back over the transcript and saw that it was ambiguous," Cohen told UPI the day after his ruling ended the nine-week trial of Avcolle, a lifelong Naugatuck politician and four-term Democratic member of the Connecticut House of Representatives.

Cohen held a special hearing two days later, and again refused to grant McDonald permission to appeal.

The state accused Avcolle of murdering his wife so he could live

Rec programs called success at Squire Village, Beechwood

A seven-week recreation program held at the Squire Village and Beechwood Apartments has proved very successful, according to Ron Viafore, program director for both sites.

Viafore said he is very pleased with the enthusiasm of the children, and the parents involved in the many daily programs. The daily program includes arts and crafts, nature science, music, and outdoor recreation for children ages 4 to 15.

The program is sponsored by the Community Services Division of Manchester Community College with funding and youth workers provided by the Comprehensive Youth Work Experience (CYWE) and the Youth Services Department of Manchester. There are about 15 workers for both sites.

The Manchester Recreation Department is also providing bus transportation to townwide playground tournaments in which teams from both complexes have participated, Viafore said.

Squire Village has the largest attendance with more than 100 children signed up in the program and an average daily attendance of

75. Beechwood on Rachel Rd. has a smaller, but regular number of youth in attendance.

A picnic for the entire complex was held at Squire Village and included games and lots of food donated by the children and their parents, the workers, Highland Park Market, Supreme Foods and Singer Learning Center. MCC donated the use of the grill. Another picnic is planned for Aug. 18, the last day of the program.

Children at Squire Village have also been making crafts items to sell at an arts and crafts carnival on Aug. 8. They will use the proceeds to take a field trip.

Todays news summary

Compiled from United Press International

State

WATERBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Thousands of strangers have "opened up their hearts in the form of their pocketbooks" to grief-stricken Fred Beaudoin Jr. and donated $50,000 to help him rebuild his life. Beaudoin, 32, has been living in seclusion with his parents since his wife, three sons, four daughters and a niece were killed a week ago today in Prospect while Beaudoin was working at an aerospace plant.

DANBURY, Conn. (UPI) — Sources say federal prison authorities have transferred an inmate suspected of setting the Danbury prison fire that killed five prisoners earlier this month. The inmate FBI agents believe ignited Compound G has been taken to a federal prison in Butner, N.C., the sources said Thursday. The FBI office in New Haven refused comment.

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Trout in the Housatonic River probably will continue to contain high levels of the toxic chemical polychlorinated biphenyl for a number of years, according to a state official. There's little that can be done about it except to warn people not to eat the contaminated fish, Connecticut Health Department Commissioner Dr. Douglas Lloyd said Thursday.

Regional

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Opponents of the Seabrook nuclear power plant have vowed to continue their legal battle to halt construction of the $2 billion station. U.S. Circuit Court Appeals Judge Levin Campbell Thursday denied a motion filed in Boston by the New England Coalition Against Nuclear Pollution. The coalition asked the court to halt the order issued Tuesday by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission appeals board. The order allows construction to resume on Monday.

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Out-of-state libraries may soon be packed with New Hampshire Supreme Court justices and other members of the legal community forced to do research elsewhere due to the lack of a state budget. New Hampshire's continuing spending resolution outlaws the purchase of new equipment and according to the state's fiscal staff, books are considered equipment.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — A Rhode Island Supreme Court ruling may make company Christmas parties festive in the past. The high court deems the firms responsible for employees who get drunk and hurt themselves at on-premises Christmas parties.

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — Maine Indians could sue for title of all state-owned land in the northern two-thirds of the state under a proposal endorsed by both Gov. James B. Longley and Attorney General Joseph E. Brennan. The two state government leaders Thursday told William B. Garter, President Carter's personal representative in the Maine Indian land claim case, they could support that option, outlined in the report he submitted to Carter July 15.

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — Doctors and other professionals will be allowed to advertise their services and prices under a new code of professional standards approved Thursday by the state Board of Regents. The rules, covering all professions except law and the ministry, would permit advertising of services in any media outlet but would allow advertising of prices only in print — newspapers, magazines, and professional directories.

National

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (UPI) — The Rocky Mountain Arsenal deputy commander, charged with selling 470 pounds of military explosives to undercover agents, was one of 18 persons arrested Thursday in a raid which recovered nearly $300,000 in stolen property. The arrests were the result of an investigation by local authorities and the FBI who used undercover agents to pose as purchasers of stolen goods.

International

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ground and air fighting between Ethiopian and Somali forces has spread to tens of thousands of square miles of desert and mountain, with both sides issuing new victory claims. Somalia acknowledged for the first time it was directly involved in the fighting, which has expanded across a territory the size of Colorado. It previously maintained it was merely supporting guerrilla forces.

Town asking bids on drain

The Town of Manchester is seeking bids for the first phase of the White Brook storm drainage project.

The project includes improvements and installation of new pipes from the Union Pond area to the intersection of Green and Phelps Rds.

The improvements to the drainage system in the area were included in a study of the area done by Griswold & Fuss, a consulting engineering firm.

Walter Fuss said that he expects the first phase of the project will take about one year to complete.

Bids will be opened by Maurice A. Pass, director of general services, on Tuesday, Aug. 23 at 11 a.m.

Flooding problems on Green, Oakwood and Avondale Rds. and White, Henry, Tanser, Summit and Hudson Sts. have been blamed on the inadequacy of the present White Brook drainage system, Jay J. Giles, director of public works has said.

The improvement project was included in a 1974 bond issue for storm drainage improvements.

A second phase, which includes improvements from Summit St. to Bowers St., has also been proposed. This, however, may not be needed after the first phase is completed, Giles has said.

Yuki Fujita faces busy year

Yuki Fujita of Otsu City, Japan, is looking forward to snow, horseback riding, roast turkey and cooking for her American family during her year here as Manchester High School's American Field Service student.

Yuki, who arrived in Manchester last Friday, was welcomed to Manchester Wednesday night by members of the AFS Town Committee at a picnic at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Donovan.

Yuki's host family includes Paul and Georgianna Sombric of 97 Oxford St. and their three daughters, Kathy, 17, Janet, 15, and Linda, 8. Kathy and Janet are a senior and a sophomore, respectively, at Manchester High and Yuki, 16, will be a junior. The whole family will take Yuki on a camping trip to Maine for the next two weeks.

Since she has been here, Yuki has been introduced to such activities as a SAM concert, swimming at Globe Hollow and going to the family's church.

Although the climate in middle Japan near the city of Kyoto where Yuki lives is warmer than here, Yuki has not been able to swim much because the large lake around her town and the ocean are too polluted for bathers.

Other activities which she enjoys are ping pong. She is on a ping pong team at her high school. She also likes volleyball, reading and cooking.

Yuki said she cooks for her family every night. Mrs. Sombric said she will look forward to learning some Japanese cooking and trying Yuki's favorite dishes.

Yuki has a younger sister, age 13. Her father is employed in a railway office and her mother sells makeup from an office in her home.

Yuki smiles all the time and seems most at ease in her new surroundings. She admitted to being a bit frightened when leaving home Japan with 100 other AFS students who arrived in California July 18 for an orientation session, but she says she is not at all homesick.

A busy year is planned for Yuki, which will include visits to other communities schools families and with other AFS students.

The purpose of her year here will be to give her as many typical American living experiences as possible, said Mr. and Mrs. George Garman, co-presidents of the AFS committee. Yuki will also be available to speak to organizations later in the year once she becomes more comfortable with English.

Yuki already speaks excellent English, which is her favorite subject in school, but it may take her while to get used to our fast talking and American idioms.

The AFS committee is also sponsoring an MHS student, Donna McCarthy, on an exchange visit to Ejea, Zaragoza Spain this summer.

Mrs. Garman noted that any families interested in becoming AFS host families in the future should contact Allan or June Walsh at 649-3797.

60 demonstrators arrested at Kent

KENT, Ohio (UPI)—Sixty demonstrators, protesting the construction of a gymnasium complex at Kent State University, were arrested early today by sheriff's deputies who formed a wedge to break through a group of spectators attempting to block the arrests.

The demonstrators, members of the May 4 Coalition, believe the $6 million complex will desecrate the site where four students were shot to death by National Guardsmen during an anti-war demonstration seven years ago.

Portage County Common Pleas Court Judge Joseph Kainrad last Monday ruled the university should be allowed to continue construction of the facility. That decision has been appealed to the 11th Ohio District Court of Appeals in Painesville, Ohio.

Program on crime against elderly will be coordinated by college

A new program aimed at prevention of crime against the elderly involving police and senior citizen volunteers will get under way in about two weeks in Manchester.

The project, called "Volunteers in Prevention (VIP)," is being funded by a federal grant under Title IA of the Higher Education Act. The grant of $17,938 was received by Housatonic Community College in Bridgeport as the contract institution which has recruited core staff from Mattatuck Community College for load the arrival and enjoy the attention of television interviewees.

Before the river of oil completed its journey, it took one life, soaked a section of delicate tundra and destroyed a $20-million pump building.

"There'll be more trouble, you can count on that," said one worker from the pipeline terminal. "How do I know? Because there are men running this thing, and somebody will screw up."

Flaws in the system and human mistakes were blamed for the six halts in the initial run, the last stoppage ending early Thursday with 18 miles of empty pipe left to fill.

The cost—in money and lives—of getting the oil across Alaska was staggering.

Alyeska has admitted to more than 30 deaths over the construction period, but officials agreed there were "numerous" others killed on the Waterbury area and Manchester Community College for the Hartford area.

Mary Michaelson, assistant professor at Manchester Community College, was named this week as coordinator of the program for the Greater Hartford area. She coordinates the corrections program and teaches criminal justice at the college.

Ms. Michaelson has been involved in the criminal justice field for 20 years. She was formerly a probation officer in Manchester and was the first woman in the United States to teach in a criminal justice program.

Ms. Michaelson said she will be contacting police and senior citizens representatives in Manchester initially to meet with her to formulate the program.

The main thrust of the program will be to train volunteers to provide direction education to senior citizens and elderly poor and to train law enforcement personnel to service needs of the elderly.

Ms. Michaelson said she hopes to develop a good cadre of people who will then teach other senior citizens methods for preventing crimes and situations in which elderly are victimized.

Ms. Michaelson said she does not know how many persons the program will be able to train, but she hopes to do as much as possible in the Greater Hartford area.

Limiting town jobs concern for Zinsser

"We're starting to give out all the political plums to certain select people," Zinsser said.

He said that he would have spoken up about the issue whether it was on the Democratic or Republican side.

In fact, last summer, Zinsser was a vocal critic when Vivian Ferguson, another Republican director and wife of Republican Town Chairman Thomas Ferguson, sought a vacant seat on the Republican State Central Committee. Mrs. Ferguson later withdrew her candidacy.

Zinsser said that he sought the ruling on Mrs. Ferguson because others asked him about whether it would present a conflict.

He also said that he supports some type of revision to clarify the conflict-of-interest issue.

Democratic Town Chairman Theodore Cummings said that he would request that the board establish a charter revision committee to study the matter. Mayor Matthew Moriarty had also previously suggested at a board meeting that the directors take steps to clarify the issue, a statement that Zinsser supported at that meeting.

Zinsser asked for a ruling from Town Council Victor I. Moses about whether Marci Negro's appointment to the MHA presented a conflict-of-interest because her husband, Roger, is town treasurer. The Board of Directors approved the appointment by a 7-2 vote, with Zinsser and Republican Paul Willhide voting against.

Moses issued a ruling Monday that Mrs. Negro's appointment does not present a conflict.

Zinsser said, "I don't want people to think I'm carrying a vendetta against the Negroes."

He said that he felt the Democratic party could have found an appointee previously compiled an in-depth study of transportation needs in Manchester.

Cohen reconsiders

This week the murder conviction of Guillermo Allison was thrown out by the state Supreme Court because it said Cohen had met improperly with a juror considering the case.

Asked if she had discussed a possible probe of Cohen's conduct with prospective council members, she said, "I would consider that an interference. But if I thought they weren't going to be doing certain things I would be making referrals to them."

But Avocelle maintained his innocence and said his wife must have drowned accidentally. Three out-of-state pathologists backed up his claim, saying Mrs. Avocelle drowned. Cohen is a former U.S. attorney for Connecticut.

To refer complaints.

HARTFORD (UPI)—Gov. Ella T. Grasso says all complaints received about Superior Court Judge Simon Cohen will be submitted to a new judicial review council set up to handle misconduct by judges.

Mrs. Grasso Thursday told a Capitol news conference she is continuing to get mail complaining about Cohen, who has been involved in a series of controversial decisions adverse to Cohen's actions.

The new judicial review council, which was created by lawmakers this year but does not officially have any powers until Jan. 1, 1978, will look into the Cohen matter, said the governor.

Jay Jackson, Mrs. Grasso's legal aide, said he thought the council, whose members are expected to be named within a week, could begin its organizational work and start assembling information on expected cases before January. But he said he didn't think the panel could do anything "substantive" before then.

Mrs. Grasso said the complaints about Cohen and all other judges would be turned over to the council "without comment."

Cohen overturned a jury's murder conviction of former legislative leader Bernard Avocelle and threw out the Peter Reilly and David Friend cases. Reilly was charged with murder and Friend was the key
