PTAs continuing the drive against television violence

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter
Television violence is not going unnoticed. The National and State Parent Teachers Associations are doing something about it. State PTA officers told the Martin School PTA Tuesday night that the National PTA became involved in response to a request from a single PTA unit. The National PTA has become involved in extensive research into the media on violence. Mrs. Mae Schmide, Connecticut PTA state president, said. Enlarging upon the state and national PTA's involvement, she said the two groups are researching child abuse, teacher evaluation, collective bargaining and racial balance. "As taxpayers, we have the right to have a say in our children's education," Mrs. Schmide said. "This is where the PTAs are getting involved with the help of the local PTA units."

Last year, the National PTA sponsored a series of eight public hearings across the United States in which the public voiced opinions on violence in the media. Soon afterward, WFSB-TV, Channel 3, conducted a three-hour ascertainment session during which they listened to callers' comments. Mrs. Schmide commended the area television station for becoming involved. The National PTA's first step in its action toward controlling TV violence was to appoint a 10-member commission with two consultants from Young Associates a Chicago consulting firm. The national public hearings were the second step of the National PTA's overall plan which included a followup of the hearings.

Mrs. Irene Barry, Connecticut PTA state vice president and state coordinator of the PTA Program on Violence, said the findings showed that there was less creative play among children, that violence is a cheap attention-getting method, that even adults respond to violence, and that there is an excess of immoral sex. The PTA's particular concern is the use of the prime time from 7 to 10 p.m. on television. Mrs. Barry listed several effects of violence on TV. "Violence incites violence among the youth; it causes a desensitization, making people passive to situations they used to react to; it distorts reality, and it can create a state of paranoia where youth and adults watching violence become afraid of life as it really is," she said.

On basis of working paper

Israel agrees to talks

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Israel has agreed to go to a renewed Middle East peace conference at Geneva on the basis of a joint U.S.-Israeli "working paper" and challenged Arab nations to follow suit.

The Israeli Cabinet unanimously approved the working paper Tuesday in a five-hour special meeting chaired by Prime Minister Menahem Begin, who was released from a hospital earlier in the day. He had spent 11 days undergoing treatment for inflammation of the heart membrane.

"We had to discuss a very serious problem and the Cabinet decision was adopted unanimously," Begin said.

In Washington, the State Department said the Israeli decision opened the way for a Geneva conference before the end of this year and announced it will transmit the text of the working paper to Arab governments through diplomatic channels.

"We welcome the decision announced by the Israeli government," the State Department said. "We note, however, that what has been accepted is still a working paper, which may require further negotiation after the Arab governments have given their views on it."

The paper was drafted in a marathon six-hour meeting of President Carter, Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan last week in New York.

Although the provisions are secret, it is believed to call for Israel to negotiate with a single all-Arab delegation at Geneva consisting of Palestinian representatives, but no members of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Arab nations have refused to go to Geneva without the PLO and their acceptance of the U.S.-Israeli document was far from assured.

Israeli Cabinet Secretary Arie Naor said Israel is now awaiting Arab and Palestinian response and the "the ball is in the Arabs' court."

In New York, Israel's ambassador to the United States, Simcha Dinitz, said he was confident of success at renewed peace talks provided the Arabs do not try to satisfy the "extreme demands" of the PLO or Syrians.

"We have done our 50 per cent," Dinitz said. "It is up to the Arabs to do their part."

Charter revision initiated

Landfill action rescinded

By GREG PEARSON

Herald Reporter

The Manchester Board of Directors Tuesday night took the first steps to settle two recent disputes—landfill fees and a charter revision committee.

The board unanimously voted to rescind a previous action that established fees for the landfill. The board scheduled a public hearing on a new approach to the matter for the November meeting.

The directors also unanimously approved establishment of a charter revision committee to look into conflict of interest and any other items that the board feels should be studied.

Mayor Matthew Moriarty had proposed the establishment of such a committee to study conflict of interest. Republican members had voiced two different viewpoints. Some said that they opposed the formation of such a committee; others said that they supported the idea but felt the timing, just before election, was bad.

Thus, Tuesday night's unanimous vote surprised the Democratic members.

Moriarty proposed that each party appoint four members to the committee. The ninth member will then be selected by the mayor and minority leader appointed after next month's election.

Republican Paul Willhide, who has spoken against revising the conflict-of-interest section of the charter, called the mayor's proposal "a good compromise."

Vivian Ferguson, Republican minority leader, said after the meeting that the appointments to the new committee will not take place until after the election.

"The new board is going to make the decision," she said explaining her vote on the matter.

Landfill hearing

In July, the board had approved a fee schedule that set charges for certain vehicles using the town landfill. Enforcement of the ordinance proved cumbersome, and many people complained that the fees were a form of double taxation on town residents. Republican Carl Zinsner asked that the directors reconsider the fees, and Tuesday night the board agreed to rescind its action.

Moriarty proposed that the board consider updating a 1964 ordinance. The ordinance included landfill use permits for town residents at no charge and established fines and suspensions for any non-resident using the dump or for anyone using the dump to dispose of out-of-town trash.

The proposal will be a public hearing item at the board's November meeting, which will be held after the town election.

The board also rescinded another of its actions when it voted 5-4 to approve three reclassifications.

The board had rejected the reclassifications in August, but Democrat Stephen Penny had asked that the decision be reconsidered. He said that he felt it was unfair not to approve the reclassifications when the people are doing more duties than those listed for their present positions.

Four other Democrats voted with Penny in favor of the reclassifications. Democrat Phyllis Jackson and the three Republican directors voted against the changes.

The approved reclassifications are secretary to executive secretary in the Fire Department, construction inspector supervisor to building and sidewalks supervisor and assessment aide to assistant assessor.

In industrial park case

Defendants testify on project benefits

By GREG PEARSON

Herald Reporter

Town Manager Robert Weiss this morning completed his testimony during the sixth day of the trial affecting Manchester's proposed industrial park.

Atty. Rolland Castleman, who represents the Manchester Economic Development Commission, questioned Weiss about several aspects of the J.C. Penney Co.'s 2-million square foot catalogue distribution center. The proposed Penney center would be the major building in the planned park.

Weiss talked about the taxes the town would receive from Penney and said that the town would receive a net benefit in tax revenues from the development.

Atty. Anthony Pagano, who represents the plaintiff, questioned the relevancy of questions about the economic benefits from the project. His objections were overruled by Superior Court Judge T. Clark Hull.

Pagano also objected to Castleman's proposal to submit as evidence the results of the March 15 referendum, where Manchester voters approved the borrowing of $15.4 million to finance the industrial park project.

"The result of the bond referendum shows that the town is going to great heights for the will of the people," Castleman said.

Pagano questioned the relevancy and argued that the vote was dependent on what the town had told townspeople about the project. This objection was also overruled.

During his cross-examination, Pagano asked Weiss several questions about when the state Department of Commerce became involved in planning the industrial park.

"This is a crucial issue in the case," Pagano said. "If the town initiated the project, I don't think a CEPA (Connecticut Environmental Policy Act) statement is required. If the state initiated the project, a CEPA statement is required."

Judge Hull indicated that that interpretation might not be the same as his.

Alan Lamson, town planner, also testified this morning. He talked about existing land uses surrounding the park area, and, using the map as a reference, referred to several improvements connected with the park project.

Judge Hull also said this morning that he plans to tour the proposed park site. The date of that tour is apparently not been set.

Directors okay 28 jobs under federal program

The Manchester Board of Directors Tuesday night approved filling 28 Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) positions. Twelve of the positions will be filled by the town government, ten will be used by the Board of Education and six will be given to non-profit organizations.

The positions are funded through Title II of the federal CETA program. The federal government pays fringe benefit costs and salary costs up to $10,000. The town must pay any salary cost above that figure.

The directors approved the following positions for the town government CETA jobs — account clerk for the collector of revenue office, building inspector, buyer trainee, clerk II for the general services office, two construction inspectors for the Engineering Department, construction inspector for the Highway Department, planning draftsman, public works grants coordinator, staff nurse, water and sewer analyst and a youth services researcher.

The starting salaries for four of the positions will exceed $10,000. The three construction inspectors will start at $13,913.12 and the building inspector will begin at $11,917.36. The salaries of all the positions are based on what a new full-time town employe would make.

The board rejected two proposed CETA positions, a communication specialist and a human services aide. One position was filled with a second inspector for the Engineering Department. The other position was given to the non-profit organizations.

The positions approved by the directors for the Board of Education are as follows: electrician, elementary physical education teacher, groundsman, custodian, elementary instrumental music teacher for band, elementary instrumental music teacher for strings, school enumeration and research clerk, library assistant, maintenance helper and remedial reading teacher.

Republican Paul Willhide voted against the CETA positions for education. The other eight directors voted for the positions.

Most of the Board of Education positions will probably be within the $10,000 allocation, according to Ray Demers, business manager for the board. However, he said the pay scale will be determined only after the qualification of the applicants are known. The remedial reading teacher will probably be at a higher pay scale because of higher qualifications of the job.

The total added cost to the board may be about $2,000, Demers said today.

The directors approved the remaining six CETA positions for non-profit agencies. The groups that will receive the positions are the Manchester Housing Authority, River East Homemaker — Home Health Aide Service, Inc., the Manchester Early Learning Center, Crossroads and the Manchester Public Health Nursing Association, which will receive two positions.

The town also expects to receive a large group of CETA positions under Title VI of the act. These positions will be for a one-year period to do work on temporary projects. The directors will act on appropriating these positions at future meetings.

Bloodmobile to visit A-N Club on Thursday

The Red Cross Blood Center in Farmington issued an urgent appeal today for both type-O negative and type-O positive blood. Their supply is critically short, Red Cross officials said.

The Red Cross Bloodmobile will be at the Army-Navy Club, 1090 Main St., Thursday from 12:30 to 5:30 p.m.

The Greater Manchester Chamber of Commerce is encouraging all businesses on downtown Main St. to cooperate with the Red Cross appeal for blood. This is the Bloodmobile's first visit to a Main Street location.

Local Red Cross officials said that for the first time in about a year emergency donors have had to be recruited for Manchester Memorial Hospital to meet the need for particular blood types because they were not available from the blood center in Farmington.

This will be the first opportunity for Manchester donors to use the new medical history record form which must be prepared before each donation. The American National Red Cross is in the process of preparing and mailing to all blood donors of record since 1975 a plastic card, similar to a credit card, which will be used at future blood donations.

There is a shortage of advance appointments for Thursday's Bloodmobile visit. All donors who have made appointments are urged to keep them. Anyone wishing to make an appointment may do so by calling the local Red Cross office at 643-5111. Walk-in donors will also be welcome throughout the day.

Free baby-sitting will be provided from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. for mothers who must bring their children with them.

United Way nears 20% of drive goal

Manchester has reached nearly 20 per cent of its United Way goal for 1977.

As of the end of last week, Manchester United Way workers reported a total of $15,841 pledged, or 18.08 per cent of the $90,720 goal.

Manchester area towns have reported the following collections as of last weekend:

East Hartford — $2,148, or 20.95 per cent of total; South Windsor — $1,805, or 30.03 per cent of total.

GOP picnic reset

The Manchester Republican party picnic which was canceled last Sunday because of rain will be held Sunday from noon until dark at Wickham Park.

Families are invited for a day of fun and games and meeting the candidates.

Food and beverages will be served. The event is free.

Commuter parking lot endorsed

David Call, a Republican candidate for the Manchester Board of Directors, has announced his support for a commuter bus parking lot in the South End of town.

The Burr Corners commuter bus lot has been an overwhelming success, but it is inconvenient to those commuters in the east and south sections of town," he said. It is also overcrowded, he said.

Call said that he contacted an employee in the state Department of Transportation (DOT) who said that if enough interest is shown the state will look for a commuter lot site in the South End.

Call said that he was told a potential site was available at Manchester Community College two years ago, but there was insufficient response to a DOT survey. Call said that he told DOT the survey was not well publicized.

He suggested that residents interested in another commuter lot write to the Bureau of Planning and Research, DOT, P.O. Drawer A, Weathersfield, 06097.

Opinion

Truth in mileage

Very few car buyers have been getting that "35 country, 23 city" or whatever the official gasoline mileage figures are for a particular automobile. Some have been so upset by the discrepancy between advertised and actual performance that they have stormed into dealers asking, "How come?"

Storm no more. The Environmental Protection Agency, which administers the mileage tests, says it is going to change the tests beginning with the 1979 model year so they more accurately reflect the mileage motorists actually get on the road.

The figures were never meant to represent real-life experience, says the EPA. They are a laboratory standard by which the performance of a given car can be rated against that of other cars. In other words, a guide for comparison shopping.

The consuming public, of course, takes the figures quite literally, especially since they are prominently displayed in advertising by the automakers (as required by federal law). The change can be welcomed not only as a small victory for truth in advertising but as a small step toward restoring public confidence that the people who run the agencies that regulate our lives know what they're doing.

Even when the revised figures come out next year, however, prospective car buyers will be cautioned that their personal driving habits, etc., may give them mileages different from the "official" ones.

Members in good $tanding

Between 1960 and 1976, the FBI paid nearly $1.7 million to 301 people to become members of and report on the Socialist Workers Party and its youth affiliate, the Young Socialist Alliance.

The bureau was forced to make the disclosure in "discovery proceedings" arising out of the party's multimillion-dollar damage suit against it.

Since the SWP and YSA have never had a combined membership of more than their present 2,500, these 301 FBI informers represented 12 per cent of the two organizations' total strength and, one can surmise, must have provided a similar

Just to be safe, the FBI also paid 1,000 other people who did not join but who also reported on the party, although it is not revealed what their total payments were.

All told, that FBI had the Socialist Workers Party under active surveillance for 38 years, from 1938 to 1976, without discovering a single instance of criminal or treasonable activity - which suggests that never in the course of human rindomness have so many been paid so much to spy so long on so few for so little purpose.

Poor quality FBI checks

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters
WASHINGTON (NEA) - President Carter has inadvertently brought to the fore an issue which long has concerned many federal officials - the quality of the FBI background checks of those in line for high government positions.

At the emotional press conference devoted to the announcement of Bert Lance's resignation as director of the Office of Management and Budget, Carter twice cited the FBI's report as evidence of his purportedly unimpeachable character.

"I would hope that in the future the complete FBI report might be made available," Carter said. "I think that if any of you would read it, he would see that... all of the analyses of Bert Lance's character and ability were favorable. And I don't think any mistake was made."

Report qualified him
Later in the press conference, Carter added: "If you examine the entire FBI report now... (and) if that was all you knew about him and had never seen Bert Lance before, you would agree that he was superlatively qualified to be a cabinet-level officer."

Few people have seen the report on Lance because, like other FBI "special inquiries" conducted for the White House, it is held in strict confidence. But the fact remains that Lance was forced to resign because other investigative agencies - not the FBI - developed evidence which raised very serious questions about the propriety if not the legality of his business activities and financial transactions.

Problems in systems
The FBI's Special Investigative Division conducts a "full field investigation" of all men and women the White House plans to nominate for a presidential appointment, to determine both if there are any

"skeltons in the closet" and if they qualify for the security clearance required for many positions. But there are numerous problems with the system developed by FBI over the past quarter century. Among them:

The investigation often is geographically fragmented, with FBI field offices and resident agencies scattered throughout the country each responsible for only a small portion of the total.

An owlsh editor's notebook

By FLOYD LARSON

In case you're interested, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., is alive and well and giving advice to the President even though Carter is of different political persuasion.

In an interview this week, the blunt Goldwater said he will keep offering the advice even if it is ignored. "If I can help from screwing up here and there, I'll help him," he said.

He went on to suggest Henry Kissinger replace Cyrus Vance in the State Department to "get out of all this foreign entanglement." He told Jimmy to stop worrying about foreign policy and start worrying about things that are bad in our own country.

Now if the President could get some of his Georgia advisors to speak as bluntly, maybe we'd get somewhere.

The problem of being president is your friends too often tell you only what you want to hear rather than what you should hear and the opposition's advice is rejected offhand as suspect for partisan reasons.

We think what Goldwater was saying in effect is that Vance is not Kissinger and as a result Carter is burdened with being president and secretary of state without the background needed since he had no national political experience behind him. Even a vice president learns a little waiting in the wings but governors rarely become foreign policy heavyweights by virtue of election.

There was word early this week that the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration suppressed test results highly unfavorable to the air bag Nader's bunch wants in every American car at a cost of a couple hundred bucks. The Detroit News reports Thomas H. Glenn, a scientist, was harassed when he refused to testify the test results were inconclusive. Glenn had placed the test results on the public docket - a means to make them available to the public but NHTSA withdrew the results only to put them back a week later after several members of Congress protested.

NHTSA withheld its analysis of the tests until Sept. 28, but by then, both the House and Senate had completed hearings on resolutions to overturn Transportation Secretary Brock Adams order to require air bags on some new cars in the 1982 model year. The rule will take effect Friday unless overturned by Congress.

The tests, conducted for NHTSA by Calpan, a private research firm in Buffalo, N. Y., compared the effectiveness of air bags with safety belts in four offset collisions of cars moving at 30 miles per hour.

None of the test subjects (cadavers and dummies) used in the seat belt-equipped cars suffered crash impacts over the injury limit set by passive restraint standards. However, two of the cadavers and one of the dummies in the air bags would have been killed had they been living humans, the tests showed.

Of course, we know the pro-air baggers will say this test wasn't "conclusive" since it casts a shadow over tests supporting air bag claims. Undoubtedly NHTSA will continue to commission tests of air bags until it comes up with the data it wants to support its case for air bagging cars.

We hope we live to see the day when a bureaucrat or a bureau will admit that perhaps it isn't inevitably right in deciding what is best for us.

If we had NHTSA and some other regulators back in the early days, every American would have moved around with his head encased in an oaken bucket to protect him from the potential dangers of Old Dobbin's flicking forelocks.

Maybe we should be seeking ways to prevent collisions rather than sell air bags. As a practical matter it would appear there is a point of diminishing returns on how safe we can make a car - the driver.

Uncle Julius wants to know why it is that when television is criticized it claims it does not have any influence over our minds, but when it comes to selling us something, it does?

Phasing out civil service retirement plans

WASHINGTON - Consider the Social Security tax. Congress has imposed this levy on the public, but not on itself or on the federal bureaucracy.

As a result, members of Congress and federal workers get higher benefits from their own pension plans when they retire. In the federal bureaucracy, employees pay 7 per cent of their salaries into the pension system. This is matched by a 7 per cent contribution by the government. Benefits are worth an average of $670 a month.

Take care of No. 1
Congressional pensions, it goes downy for all 12 million state and local government employees. For the nongovernmental working stiff, this would be a bonanza.

For example, it would eliminate "pension hopping." Under this popular loophole, a public employe may work for years as a carbon paper guard, then get appointed to a higher-paying job just before he retires and get all his years as a flunky credited under his new higher salary to get an inflated pension benefit.

New York notorious
In New York, the practice is notorious. Only an employe's last year of work - reformers pushed through legislation under which a state worker gets a pension based exclusively on the money he paid into the fund, plus the state or local government's matching contribution.

Naturally, howls have been raised by federal employe unions over phasing out the present system, although bureaucratic benefits would still be higher than those of the private Social Security pensioner. But this is an idea whose time has come. Congress will dawdle at its political peril. Social Security pensioners and future eligible out-voye the total of public workers at every governmental level by more than 6 to 1.

News for senior citizens

By WALLY FORTIN

Hill With this past Monday being a holiday, there isn't too much news to talk about. We did open up Monday morning from 8 to 10 to sign for our foliage trip. We filled one bus during those two hours and at this writing it looks like that will be the only one because the day trip is scheduled for tomorrow morning. The bus will be leaving shortly after 8:30 a.m. so those going should arrive right around that time.

Speaking of trips, you folks going on the second week to Penn Dutch country must get all your money in by this time next week. In fact, all monies for both weeks must be in by then.

Also this Friday, is the absolute last call for anyone wishing to go on that 15-day stay at Fort Lauderdale. Stop by your firm. It's scheduled for the middle of January, and if the World Almanac is close to being right, that may be a good time to get away from the cold and snow.

Flu shots
A reminder that on Tuesday morning, October 18, we will be giving free flu shots here at our center from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

Halloween dance
Also, don't forget our gala Halloween Dance scheduled for Thursday, Oct. 27. Lots of great music by Lou Joubert and his band, goodies to munch on, and our favorite door prizes. Tickets are available at the office.

The United Way plays a big part in my future.

Looking back, I wasn't sure I would get this far. I've got a good job, I'm active in community affairs, I have a good social life. A lot of the credit for my success goes to The United Way and the programs it supports. Take the Urban League, for instance. It offers vocational training and job counseling for everyone. The Visiting Nurse Association and various homemaker services help to care for my elderly mother, giving me some time to pursue my own interests. I know that my own pledge to The United Way is helping me reach my goals. Help yourself: give to The United Way of Greater Hartford.

Health agency to expand with aid of federal funds

By JUNE TOMPKINS
Herald Reporter

With the aid of federal funds, Manchester's Health Department plans to expand its staff.

Dr. Alice Turek, town health director, told the Advisory Board of Health Tuesday that she hoped the Board of Directors would approve a position for a staff nurse.

The nurse is needed to gather information on reportable diseases, patient histories, make patient contacts, and provide information to the public and health professionals.

The department's expansion plan also calls for a clerk to provide the paper work for the positions.

Dr. Turek said that dental assistants could also be used to help identify dental needs in the school system before a proposed dental clinic is established.

There is a "desperate" need for patient advocates to work with the Health Department.

The Women's Fellowship of the Manchester Presbyterian Church will sponsor a prayer breakfast Saturday at 9 a.m. in the church hall.

All women of the church are invited. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Isabel-Kay, 643-8237.

With the aid of federal funds, Manchester's Health Department plans to expand its staff.

Dr. Alice Turek, town health director, told the Advisory Board of Health Tuesday that she hoped the Board of Directors would approve a position for a staff nurse.

The nurse is needed to gather information on reportable diseases, patient histories, make patient contacts, and provide information to the public and health professionals.

The department's expansion plan also calls for a clerk to provide the paper work for the positions.

Dr. Turek said that dental assistants could also be used to help identify dental needs in the school system before a proposed dental clinic is established.

There is a "desperate" need for patient advocates to work with the Health Department.

The Women's Fellowship of the Manchester Presbyterian Church will sponsor a prayer breakfast Saturday at 9 a.m. in the church hall.

All women of the church are invited. Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Isabel-Kay, 643-8237.

Deficit figures debated

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter
A recent report on the 1977-78 Town of Manchester budget triggered a one-hour discussion at Tuesday night's Board of Directors meeting.

The report, issued by Controller Thomas Moore at the request of Republican Director Carl Zinsner, said that the town faces a possible deficit of $668,000. The report, however, did not include possible future increases in revenues, a point that particularly angered Democratic board members.

"I can't really understand how someone can come up with a figure like this while just looking at the problem areas," Democrat Robert Price said.

Democrat Stephen Penny said, however, that he did not know how the present board could act on a report that presents only one side of the budget picture.

And Pascal Prignano, also a Democrat, said, "It might be worth the political nonsense about the budget."

Democrat Stephen Penny said, "I appreciate the help from all the directors—Democratic and Republican."

Schaffer said, "I've enjoyed working with you."

Mrs. Ferguson praised all the board members and singled out Town Counsel Victor Moses for his work with the board. She referred particularly to his drafting of the message parlor ordinance.

Mosses and Town Manager Robert Weiss also praised the board members for their service.

"You don't get paid for it. You take a lot of bruises for your public service. You're doing something for democracy that needs to be done," Weiss said.

Bolton panel considering sending students to MHS

By SUSAN VAUGHN
Herald Reporter
A committee studying the future of the Bolton school system has asked the Manchester Board of Education to meet with it concerning the possibility of sending Bolton High School students to Manchester High School.

Manchester School Supt. James P. Kennedy read a letter from Bolton School Board Chairman James Marshall and Mrs. Jacqueline Abbott, chairman of the Bolton study committee, at Tuesday night's Board of Education meeting.

The letter said the Bolton committee is studying various options for the school system, which is suffering from declining enrollment. One of the options is to send the Bolton students to Manchester High School.

Bolton School Supt. Raymond Allen is eager to cooperate on the matter and resolve it in the near future, according to Marshall's letter.

Kennedy said he would be open to receiving more information and talking with the Bolton Board of Education. Board members agreed that Kennedy and a representative of the Personnel and Finance Committee should listen to the Bolton board on the problem and report back to the full board.

The current cost of receiving an out-of-town student into Manchester High School is $1,400, Kennedy said. However, he said that when dealing with a number of students from another district, every item, such as tuition, transportation and other costs considered in the fee, has to be considered individually.

Appointment of the Bolton study committee was approved by the school board in May, after many residents voiced concerns about the increasing school budget and declining enrollment.

The group is exploring ways to increase enrollment in Grades 7 to 12, researching plans to maintain an independent school system without additional students, and researching other alternatives.

The first phase of the Bolton study includes looking at demographic trends, enrollment trends and costs, and the possibility of other towns sharing an educational program with Bolton.

Hearing on SNET Thursday

Vernon

The Public Utilities Control Authority (PUCA) will conduct an all-day public hearing Thursday, starting at 10 a.m., in Vernon's Memorial Building on a request for a rate increase filed by Southern New England Telephone Co.

The telephone company is asking for a 21 per cent increase. This would mean an addition of about $2,450 to the annual phone bill of the town bringing the bill to about $54,500 a year. The town pays about $24,000 a year now and the Board of Education, about $21,000 a year.

Stanley Roessler, director of administration, has been seeking alternate phone systems for the town. Several years ago the Board of Education also investigated alternative systems but stayed with SNETCO.

Town officials plan to object to the request.

PZC proposal opposed

Coventry

The Coventry Planning and Zoning Commission (PZC) came under fire Tuesday night during a public hearing on a new regulation that would set minimum distance requirements between septic systems and wetlands.

Half a dozen residents, most of them builders and realtors, attacked a proposal to require 150 feet from the high water mark of a watercourse and 50 feet from a poorly drained soil to a septic tank.

Town Planner Gregory Padick said a similar provision in the town's Inland Wetlands Regulations would be backed up by this new regulation, which will go in the town's zoning regulations.

Two PZC members questioned the zoning proposal and suggested that the inland wetlands rule, passed in 1974 should be reconsidered. Dentz Bank said the regulation would make it for someone to construct a dwelling on a lot that had a large wetland area.

John Motyka noted that an intermittent body of water could be considered a watercourse. Richard Breen felt the regulation should be more specific.

Zoning Agent Ernest Wheeler strongly supported the regulation, which would allow him to reduce the requirements in special cases.

Although the commission voted to table action on the regulation until its next meeting so that the wording could be made more specific, three of the five members present supported it in theory, and it seems certain of passage later this month. No one in the audience at the public hearing spoke in favor of the proposal.

Two of the lots are on Oak Trail. The other two are on Hickory Trail and have been bid on by William and Beverly Bresnan, who hope to swap them with the town for three poorly drained lots they now own in that area.

We're counting on you.

Nothing in the world is worse than feeling unwanted, and you can find that out for yourself by visiting some of those old rest homes around the country or by listening to Paul Blair, who will tell you straight up and down he isn't ready for any place like that yet.

Not at 33, and certainly not when he can do the kind of things he has been doing the past 72 hours for the New York Yankees.

Last Sunday night, he led off the ninth inning with a single up the middle against Kansas City and then came around with the tying run in a come-from-behind, pennant-winning, three-run rally.

In Tuesday night's World Series opener with the Dodgers, Blair entered the game as Reggie Jackson's right field defensive replacement in the ninth inning with the score tied 3-all and it was still that way in the 12th when Rick Rhoden took over as the Dodgers' fifth pitcher of the long evening.

Willie Randolph, who had homered in the sixth, initiated Rhoden with a double to right field, after which Thurman Munson was purposely mugged. Now Blair came up with instructions to bunt both runners along. This was his specialty.

But he missed one attempt completely and fouled off another, running the count to 2-and-2. The bunt sign was still on as he stepped back into the batter's box.

At the last moment, he heard third-base Coach Dick Howser hollering at him. Howser, getting his instructions from Manager Billy Martin on the Yankee bench, was telling him to forget all about bunting and swing away.

Blair did, connecting with a fast ball on the outside and driving it into the field for a single that scored Randolph from second and gave the Yankees a first-game jump over the Dodgers, 4-3.

The Yanks struck it rich when they made the deal for Blair with Baltimore.

Yanks 'forgotten' man Jim Hunter to throw against Dodgers tonight

NEW YORK (UPI) — Billy Martin, whose managerial wizardry has wangled another miracle victory from his wounded New York Yankee pitching staff, will send "forgotten" Catfish Hunter to the mound today in an effort to carry a 2-0 game lead in the World Series back to Los Angeles.

Hunter, who has not pitched since Sept. 10 because of a neurological ailment, will oppose Bert Blyden of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"My control is the only thing I'm concerned about," said Hunter. "Having been away from it for a month, this will be just like spring training all over again."

"Catfish is a great competitor," said Martin. "I believe he will rise to the occasion — just like Gullett."

Gullett indeed rose to the occasion Tuesday night, shaking off a sore arm and pitching 8 1/3 innings, while holding the Dodgers to just five hits and three runs.

Lastors started his best "money" pitcher, Don Sutton, who had never lost a post-season game and the 32-year-old right-hander wasn't far off his customary October brilliance.

But a controversial play in the sixth inning, in which the Dodgers tried to steal an insurance run on the 3-2 lead they forged for Sutton, seemed to be a turning point for the Yankees.

With Steve Garvey on first via a single, light-hitting Glenn Burke stroked a single through the hole at second base into right field. Yankee center-fielder Mickey Rivers scooped the slow-rolling ball up, but Garvey was already turning third and heading for home. Rivers bounced his throw home and Yankee catcher Thurman Munson ran in front of the plate to pull it in and tag the sliding Garvey in almost the same motion.

Garvey said, "From the angle I came in and how far he (Munson) had to dive, I thought I was safe. I thought I was there on the outside of the plate with my right leg."

Home plate umpire Nestor Chyik thought otherwise, however, and the score remained 2-1 — until that is Willie Randolph led off with a walk and scored on Munson's double. But reliever Mike Garman came on to quell any further threat and left men stranded on every base.

The Dodgers finally got to Gullett in the ninth when Dusty Baker led off with a single. Gullett got Mota on a flyout, but walked Steve Yeager on a fourth pitch.

That brought Martin to the mound with trump card Sparky Lyle. Lyle gave up a single to Lyle, which scored Baker to tie it 3-3, but that was all the Dodgers were to get off the rubber-arm reliever who was going to win his third straight post-season game.

"I don't care about not getting the win," said Gullett, who kayoed after two innings in his only playoff appearance. "I'm just glad I was able to pitch well enough to keep us in the ballgame."

The odds-makers have now installed the Yankees as 6-5 favorites to win the series, although the Dodgers and Houston are 11-10 favorites over the questionable Hunter today.

Time out for protest

Dodgers' Steve Garvey didn't agree with ump's call of out home plate in sixth inning. Thurman Munson of Yanks tagged out runner in close play. (UPI photo)

Crucial play: Call at home

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don Gullett is a long-time Dodger killer and Sparky Lyle did his thing again, but the killing blow to the Los Angeles Dodgers' chances in the first game of the World Series really may have come from a man in a red sportscoat.

Dodgers' first baseman Steve Garvey was called out at home by plate umpire Nestor Chyik on a controversial sixth-inning play that even the TV camera couldn't verify one way or the other.

The play was costly because Yankees left-hander Don Gullett, complaining of a sore pitching arm, was touched for two runs in the first inning but settled down thereafter to one-hit pitching until the sixth.

The umpire was on top of the play," said Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda. "The umpire said he tagged him, but the umpire was on the other side of the plate."

The play was costly because Yankees left-hander Don Gullett, complaining of a sore pitching arm, was touched for two runs in the first inning but settled down thereafter to one-hit pitching until the sixth.

Sparky did 'job' but he disagreed

NEW YORK (UPI) — This is the kind of competitor the Los Angeles Dodgers are facing in relief pitcher Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees.

He thought he "didn't do my job" Tuesday night when he pitched 2 1/2 shutout innings in relief of Don Gullett and was the winning pitcher in the Yankees' 4-3, 12-inning victory over the Dodgers in the first game of the World Series.

"I didn't do my job," said Lyle in the otherwise jubilant Yankee clubhouse. "I let them score the tying run. That's not what I'm supposed to do."

Lyle meant that Lee Lacy, the first batter he faced in the Dodgers' ninth, singled home the tying run. Lyle chose to ignore the fact that the run was officially charged to Gullett and that he retired the next 11 batters before the Yankees won the game in the bottom of the 12th when Willie Randolph doubled and scored on a single by Paul Blair.

"I'll tell you what this game was all about, though," Lyle continued. "This game was guts. We were in a bit of trouble with our starter in the first inning. But this club rises to the occasion."

When Lyle's analysis of himself was relayed to Thurman Munson, the Yankees' catcher and captain allowed himself a rare grin.

"Well," he said, "Lyle might not have saved the game in the ninth in the long run, but he did allow them any runs. It seemed like a pretty good performance to me."

Pitching, of course, is the Yankees' problem in the World Series — just as it has been all year — and Munson quickly turned the subject to second-gear starter Jim Hunter, who suffered through a 9-3 season with a 7.1 earned run average and hasn't pitched in a month but Munson says those things "don't matter."

"I look for a fine performance by Catfish," said Munson. "He's a great competitor. He might get killed but I don't think so."

The Yankees clearly felt they were off and running with their first-gam victory but manager Billy Martin and Munson refused to gloat.

"It's nice to win the first game," said Martin. "But I think it's going to be a tough series. The Dodgers are a very good club."

"If anybody thinks winning the first game is all that matters, that's the wrong attitude," said Munson. "You gotta win four games."

Joe D. irked at Yankees

NEW YORK (UPI) — George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the New York Yankees, has apologized to Joe DiMaggio for a World Series ticket mix-up and invited him to throw out the opening ball for tonight's second game between the Yankees and the Los Angeles Dodgers.

DiMaggio, whom Steinbrenner had personally picked to make the ceremonial first pitch for last night's opener, passed up the game due to the difficulty he had in obtaining his ticket.

The Hall of Fame center fielder, who had flown in from Detroit for the series, arrived at Yankee Stadium early Monday to pick up his series tickets, for which he had paid well in advance.

But when the tickets could not be located, DiMaggio waited for nearly two hours and then angrily told the Yankees they could keep the tickets.

The celebrated Yankee Clipper then called the New York Mets, who immediately provided him with tickets.

"The two clubs that have always showed me a lot of class are the Dodgers and the Mets," DiMaggio said.

Still incensed over the treatment from his old club, DiMaggio gave his tickets to friends because he said he did not want to appear at Yankee Stadium.

Steinbrenner, who was not personally involved in the mix-up, then telephoned an apology to DiMaggio.

"There is nobody more important to us than Joe DiMaggio," Steinbrenner said.

The Yankee owner added he did not blame DiMaggio for being upset. He said two individuals carrying the tickets from Kansas City did not reach New York until early Monday morning and DiMaggio had shown up at the stadium before they arrived.

Steinbrenner had chosen DiMaggio to throw out the first ball for the Tuesday night opener despite numerous requests from some of the nation's most celebrated figures to make the ceremonial toss.

Blair failed to bunt but then delivered

Vernon charter unit ready to draft its proposals

By BARBARA RICHMOND
Herald Reporter

With the exception of one chapter being reviewed by the town attorney, the Charter Revision Commission wrapped up its review of the Vernon Town Charter and is now ready to go to work redrafting revisions for the Town Council.

Tuesday night, the commission voted to delete Section 6 of Chapter 14, which deals with political activity. It states that no person holding a position in the classified service of the town may make any contribution to campaign funds of any political party or candidate for public office. It also prohibits them from taking part in political campaigns other than to register with a party and to vote. In the classified service are the building inspector, assessors, tax collector and town clerk.

Commission member Herbert Slicer said he didn't think there should be a distinction between classified and any other service. Thomas Dooley questioned why someone who has tenure should be subjected to this. He said those who don't have tenure would be more susceptible to coercion than those who do. But he added he didn't know of the town ever having trouble in this area.

The Rev. John Lacey, in a letter to the commission, asked to have the recently formed Cemetery Commission included in the charter. He suggested that five members be appointed for rotating terms; that they be responsible for the administration, care, and operation of all town-owned cemeteries; and that they administer their own money.

No action was taken on this Tuesday night. On recommendation of John Daigle, the commission voted to propose that all town personnel in Chapter 9 be appointed by the mayor and approved by seven affirmative votes of the council.

This would include the town clerk, treasurer, Board of Tax Review and Merit System Board. Now the charter states these people should be appointed by seven affirmative votes of the council. Daigle said the mayor is responsible for these people and should have accountability and therefore should appoint them.

Slicer said he would rather spread out accountability among the council than give it to the mayor. "I wouldn't like to see the mayor have more 'horsepower' than he already has," he said.

A motion to strike out, in the chapter on taxation, the reference to sewer user charges, was made by Daigle but voted down by the commission. Daigle, who has served on past revision commissions, said he has always been for one tax district. The town levies the user charge against those who have sewer service because some people still have septic tanks.

Daigle said people who have sewers are already paying higher taxes because their property is assessed higher because of the sewers. "We've yet to find a way of assessing users fairly," he said.

Dooley said the decision to eliminate the user charge could be made outside the charter. The chapter to be reviewed by the town attorney deals with such things as transfer of powers, existing laws and ordinances, advisory boards and commissions and amendments to the charter.

The commission deleted the section on special assessment revolving fund. Daigle said the original intent of that was to have money to pay off money borrowed for sewer line installations. He said the special assessments were to go into the fund, but it didn't work.

The chapter to be reviewed by the town attorney deals with such things as transfer of powers, existing laws and ordinances, advisory boards and commissions and amendments to the charter.

This week, along with thousands of newspapers throughout the world, The Herald is happy to salute its 500 newspaper carriers during International Newspaper Carrier Week.

These dedicated youngsters give of their time and energy exposing themselves to our business society in the handling of a newspaper delivery route.

Richy practices for his school's soccer team right after school. "I get out early and after practice am home before 5:30 and then Frank and I do the route," he said.

Frank, on the other hand, goes to football practice after he finishes his part of the route.

Both boys enjoy their work and have put their money to good use.

"We try to save about $5 each every week and with the rest we buy clothes or other things we need. It's nice when we want to go to the movies to have our own money," Frank said.

"We went to Niagara Falls this summer and took some of our savings and we also went to Florida in February," he said.

Anita is a member of her school's debating club, and meetings sometimes conflict, but she said, "I take a vacation.

"If it wasn't for Tom Gwilliam, being a couple houses down the street, if we need help and when we do, he's right there," Frank said.

In Manchester, Anita Tyschen of 116 Hamilton Dr. has built up her route to 84 customers since taking it on three years ago.

Starting out as a seventh grader, the attractive young lady, now 14 and a student at Manchester High School, finds being a newspaper girl no problem.

"My brother, John, who is 13, helps me and together it doesn't take too much time," she said.

Unfortunately, John, an eighth grader at Illing Junior High School, tore a ligament during gym class and his mom has been taking his place all he mends.

"The money comes in handy," Anita said. "It helps me buy some clothes, and I try to save some."

Anita is a member of her school's debating club, and meetings sometimes conflict, but she said, "I take a vacation.

"If it wasn't for Tom Gwilliam, being a couple houses down the street, in inclement weather, both winter and summer.

Union sued

PUTNAM (UPI) — A Putnam firm is suing a Teamsters union local in Montville for $1 million damages, saying it suffered losses during picketing of its plant.

The Container Division of the International Paper Co. of Putnam claims in its U.S. District Court lawsuit it suffered $1 million in losses because the union picketers used illegal tactics in July.

BIC has appointed National Media of Manchester, as the agency for its Division Five.

Division Five encompasses the full line of BIC pens, ballpens and lighters.

This division accounts for a significant portion of BIC's total volume. Its sales are devoted to the ad specialty, premium, college, and souvenir markets.
