Food costs will go up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Increased charges by middlemen and higher costs for imports will boost food prices for American consumers as much as 6 percent in 1978, the Agriculture Department said today.

And for the second year in a row, consumers will pay more to get the food from the field to the grocery store than they pay the farmer to grow it.

Kenneth Farrell, head of the agency's Economic Research Service, said farmers would see little benefit from the price increases, receiving the same $56 billion for feeding America they have received each of the past five years.

The expected increase in food prices will be slightly below the 6.5 percent rise endured by consumers this year, Farrell told the department's annual Outlook Conference today.

Increased prices for sugar, spurred by a higher government import fee, will account for part of the food price increase.

Rising coffee prices alone accounted for about half of this year's overall grocery increase. Food prices increased 3.1 percent in 1976.

Labor costs for grocery clerks, processing workers and others involved in marketing food reached $56 million this year, the first time those costs have topped the farm value of foods, Farrell predicted that in 1978, labor costs again would exceed the value of food at the farm level.

Farrell said middlemen's charges are going up because food industry wages will probably rise 7 to 8 percent next year and food industry firms will be faced with higher cost for energy, packaging materials and transportation.

In addition, he said, rising consumer income will increase consumer food demand. And as incomes rise, the expert said, consumer demand for food services, like processing, will put increasing pressure on retail prices.

Supplies should be plentiful, Farrell said. Shoppers can expect a slight decline in total beef supplies, but big supplies of corn and other livestock feeds indicate production of high-grade, grain-fed beef will be up.

Egypt aide quits over Sadat visit

CAIRO, Egypt (UPI) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat today formally accepted Israeli Premier Menahem Begin's invitation to address the Israeli Parliament and Begin said Sadat would arrive in Jerusalem this Saturday. Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmi promptly resigned in protest.

Sadat flew to Damascus Wednesday for day-long talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad but was unable to win the approval of his closest ally for the visit that will be unprecedented in the history of Arab-Israeli relations. Assad said he was deeply hurt but Sadat said he would go through with his historic visit anyway.

The Egyptian President returned to Cairo today, flew to a presidential residence at Ismaili where U.S. Ambassador Hermann F. Eilts handed him the white envelope that contained Begin's official invitation. Sadat then announced his official acceptance.

Moments later Fahmi said he was resigning "because I feel that I can no longer carry out my duties and share the responsibilities under these circumstances." Sadat immediately named Mohammed Mahmoud Riad, Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, to assume Fahmi's duties.

In the swift moving developments Begin announced in Jerusalem that Sadat would arrive in Jerusalem Saturday night and address the Israeli Knesset, or parliament, on Sunday — the first time in the history of the Jewish state that it has received an Arab leader.

Begin said Sadat will address the Knesset at 4 p.m. Sunday in either Arabic or English. Arabic, Hebrew and English are used in the Knesset which has a number of Israeli Arab members.

Israel has been making frantic preparations for the visit. Music dealers dusted off old copies of the Egyptian national anthem and flagmakers began making hundreds of Egyptian flags for the occasion. Begin promised the most formal welcome for the visiting head of state and said he would meet Sadat at the airport.

Fahmi's resignation was so unexpected that the Egyptian Embassy in Washington telephoned UPI to ask about the rumors. When informed he has resigned and that Riad had been named to succeed him, a spokesman said, "Oh, really."

Begin, 64, made the announcement. —See Page Ten-A

Shah pledges try to hold oil price

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Shah of Iran wound up a riot-marred state visit Wednesday night with a promise to Americans that he will try "to give you a break" on oil prices next month.

The Shah, who wants to buy 140 sophisticated U.S. jet fighters, told a news conference before he left for France that he will press other oil producing nations not to raise the price at a Dec. 20 meeting in Caracas.

"We were neutral" on a price hike prior to meetings Tuesday and Wednesday with President Carter, said the Shah, who was dogged by sometimes-violent protests by young Iranians here.

"But after perusing the world economic situation, we decided to come to the conclusion to give you a break."

If Iran, Saudi Arabia and 11 other OPEC countries agree to hold down the price of oil, it would be a major victory for Carter, who has pressed hard to keep the lid on. The current world price is $14.50 a barrel.

The Shah flew to Orly Airport near Paris. He scheduled meetings today and Friday with President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

The monarch, who has met with every American president since Harry Truman, and his empress left for Paris Wednesday night aboard a

Town responds to new HUD rules

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

The Town of Manchester is preparing a response to regulations written by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for the Community Development block grant program.

The town will comment on some of the changes in the new regulations, including one that would permit a core city to purchase a building in a suburban town and located low-income housing there, Alan Mason said.

That proposal has created concern among town officials in suburban communities surrounding Hartford. Mason said that the proposed change is inconsistent with the Community Development program.

"The whole program is based on neighborhood revitalization. All of a sudden, you're moving 20 miles outside the neighborhood to buy a home," he said.

Another change requires that 75 percent of the block grant funds be used for projects that directly affect low and moderate-income residents.

Digging in the dark

Workers from the Town of Manchester Water Department spent Wednesday night digging in the dark to find a water main break near the intersection of Center and Winter streets. The problem was discovered at 3:30 in the afternoon and was not repaired until 10 p.m. Some homes and a business in the area lost water service during the period. (Herald photo by Dunn)

Town recreation plans include Love Lane park

By GREG PEARSON
Herald Reporter

A committee made up of Town of Manchester officials has listed five recreational projects that might be eligible for federal funding, including a proposal for a large park on property off Love Lane.

A member of the committee will attend tonight's meeting of the Advisory Recreation and Park Commission, but the report on the committee's work may center on general recreation needs of the town rather than the committee's proposed projects.

The number one project of the committee is the Love Lane park. Ernest Tureck, the town's park superintendent and one of the seven members of the committee, said Wednesday.

In proposing a Love Lane park, the committee is seeking a large recreation area with a baseball field, tennis courts and other facilities, Tureck said.

The park would be similar to Charter Oak Park in the South End and Robertson Park in the North End, he said. The Love Lane site could service the western area of Manchester.

Tureck said that other projects listed by the committee are neighborhood play areas for the Forest Hills, Redwood Farms and Highland Park sections of town, an all-weather track at Manchester High School and a pool at the Nike Site.

The committee was formed to study projects that would be eligible for federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation grants. Members of the committee are Tureck; Alan Lamson, town planner; Jay Giles, director of public works; William Tierney, management analyst; Mel Siebold, director of recreation; Wilson Deakin, assistant superintendent of schools; and Bill Dion, director of building and grounds for the Board of Education.

Cuba move a threat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter considers Cuba's expanding role in Africa not only a threat to peace on that continent but a barrier to resumption of diplomatic relations with the United States, White House sources said today.

One official said the White House had been under the impression Cuba was reducing its influence on the continent when in fact it was increasing its presence there.

The projects listed are the tentative choices of the seven-member committee. The Rec and Park Commission and the Board of Directors both are expected to have some input into the final choice of projects for which the town will seek the federal funds.

The site of the Love Lane proposal is about midway between Center and Olcott streets, Tureck said. The property is now owned by the town's Water and Sewer Department.

Tureck said that the location would provide a recreation area in the western part of Manchester and would help alleviate the overuse of some fields.

White House sources said the buildup runs contrary to Carter's statement last February that he would be willing to restore diplomatic relations with Havana "if I can be convinced that Cuba wants to remove their aggravating influence from other countries in the hemisphere (and) will not participate in violence

Summary

Polio is reported

For the first time in years, polio has been reported in several states and although health officials are disturbed, they say they are not worried about an epidemic. In New York an unidentified woman died of the disease and other cases include, a child in Texas, a woman infected in Maryland and three cases in Minnesota.

Dr. Charles R. Webb Jr., chief of the Health Department's communicable disease service in Texas, said the virtual disappearance of polio in the decade following perfection of the Salk vaccine in 1955, produced a certain carelessness on the part of parents. He said, "There's a fear of immunizations in general — an irrational fear. We see a lot of danger that we will have more cases."

Put smoking aside

The American Cancer Society predicted an estimated 5 million Americans would put smoking aside for the annual coast-to-coast "Great American Smoke-Out," and in Pennsylvania Health Secretary Dr. Leonard Bachman said, "Latest figures indicate that 40 percent of cancer in American males is caused by smoking."

The 24-hour tobacco break, voluntary of course, began today. The purpose of the campaign, supported by federal health agencies, is to focus national attention on the health hazards of tobacco and to encourage at least some of the nation's 54 million smokers to kick the habit.

Heat problems due

DETROIT (UPI) — Based on a study of this city's elderly poor last winter, University of Michigan's Dr. Leon Pastalan, the head of the university's Institute of Gerontology, said Wednesday about one-fifth of America's senior citizens will have heating problems this winter.

Pastalan, said a smaller number — maybe 1 or 2 percent — would have "really severe problems with money and heat," and some would be forced to choose between eating and paying utility bills.

Crime cost is high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A report by the Commerce Department shows, "Thefts committed by employees are behind at least 60 percent of crime-related losses," that cost American businesses an estimated $30 billion last year.

The 124-page report, "Crime in Service Industries," outlined criminal activity in such wide-ranging areas as cargo transportation, schools, hospitals, motels and hotels, banks and insurance companies. It suggested preventive measures to combat severe crime in each industry studied.

Fighting in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine said gunmen opened fire on a packed Israeli military bus Wednesday afternoon, but military sources in Tel Aviv dismissed the report as "nonsense."

Shortly after the attack on the bus, a Mercedes staff car carrying Israeli officers drew up behind the bus and the Palestinians unleashed a second burst of machine-gun fire. The guerrilla statement said "There were 20 killed, soldiers and officers" in the two attacks. It said

Pacific fires doused

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (UPI) — Firemen declared victory today over two late-season brush fires which flamed through the suburban canyons and hills near the Pacific Ocean west of Los Angeles.

In three days, the two fires chewed through 2,550 acres of brush and destroyed four houses, a mobile home, two outbuildings and about 10 structures described as shacks.

Favorable nighttime weather — reduced winds and the fog rolling in from the nearby ocean — helped a force of almost 1,000 men beat back the fires before they did great damage.

Tax cut suggested

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., urged President Carter today to seek a tax cut of $20 to $25 billion early next year to reduce unemployment and offset increases in Social Security payments.

"A major tax cut soon should be at the top of the Carter economic agenda," he said in a statement.

"A major tax cut — in the neighborhood of $20 to $25 billion — early in 1978 is vital if the economy is to grow. If unemployment is to be reduced and if government spending is to be cut," he said.

'Oklahoma' old home week

They remembered Oscar Hammerstein Wednesday in New York, and they remembered the triumph they shared with him 34 years ago when "Oklahoma" made its Broadway debut.

The occasion: A party given by Hammerstein's widow in honor of Hugh Fordin, author of "Getting to Know Him," the great lyricist's biography.

In attendance were original costars Alfred Drake and Celeste Holm, Richard Rodgers, who wrote the music, and Agnes deMille who handled the choreography.

More sunshine

Anita Bryant will go right on selling orange juice — at least through August 1979.

The Florida Citrus Commission has extended her $100,000-a-year contract, despite controversy engulfing her anti-homosexual crusade — an issue that threatened to end her 10-year career of singing around the "Florida sunshine tree."

The commission plugs her "courageous leadership," and Miami's gay-activist leader Bob Kunst says, "We could have never organized the gay community without Anita Bryant. We congratulate the commission for keeping the gay issue alive and growing with million dollars of free publicity."

Rough road home

The love here in Ireland — but the fact that they may not let her leave has little to do with Miss Lillian's popularity.

The Irish Transport and General Workers Union says it will refuse to retail, load or service the chartered Trans International Airways jet on which President Carter's mother is supposed to fly home.

The American Teamsters Union

requested the blackball because of a union dispute with the airline. Says Irish union leader Walter McFarland, "Unless there is a settlement, and we get the okay from the Teamsters Union, the flight will be blocked."

A direct hit

Douglas Rankin's session at the television set was rudely interrupted Wednesday — by an 18-inch, 25-pound practice bomb.

The projectile, accidentally dropped by an Air Force jet fighter, slammed through the roof of his North Las Vegas, Nev., home and imbedded itself in the concrete floor of the kitchen, just 15 feet from where the 15-year-old boy was sitting.

Says Rankin, "I first thought it was a gas explosion or an earthquake." His parents were at work at the time, and no one was hurt.

Glimpses

Comedian Danny Kaye — traveling ambassador for the United Nations Children's Fund — took up the baton for the cause Wednesday, directing the orchestra of the Royal Theater in a Copenhagen, Denmark benefit ... Peter Falk, television's "Columbo," will marry actress Sheri Danese in a black-tie ceremony in Beverly Hills, Calif., Dec. 2 ... Charleston Heston is in Washington, D.C. today, taping an American Film Institute 10th anniversary special at the Kennedy Center, for airing Monday on CBS-TV ... The wife of rock singer Leon Russell delivered their second child Sunday — a daughter, Tina Rose ... Singer Bobby Vinton got a star bearing his name in the Hollywood "Walk of Fame" Wednesday — right between those of Veronica Lake and Dinah Shore.

Gramps may lead the nation, but on a stroll around the White House grounds it seems to be presidential grandson Jason Carter who shows the way.

Sidewalk job under way with public works funds

Work has started on one of three projects the Town of Manchester has received money for through the federal Public Works Employment Act. A town employee who works closely with the projects expressed concern that some contracting companies might not be bidding on the projects because of federal regulations.

William Tierney, the town's management analyst who has been involved with the projects, said that sidewalk repairs have started on Diane Drive. He estimated that the work on Diane Drive and three other neighboring roads — Frances, Niles and Judith drives — will take about one month.

Sidewalk repairs on these streets are only a portion of the work that will be done through a $770,000 grant that the town received through the Public Works Employment Act.

Tierney said that the town hopes to complete repairs in the Diane Drive area before winter arrives in full force. Sidewalk work cannot be done during extremely cold weather.

Tierney also talked about the involvement of contractors in the projects.

"The feedback we're getting is that contractors aren't clamoring for the public works contracts," he said.

The town, for instance, only received two bidders for the first phase of the sidewalk work.

This is a concern because if the town does not receive enough bidders, the bids might not be a fair representation of the project cost.

The federal program requires that at least ten percent of the project work be done by a minority-owned firm. In two other states, suits have been filed about this requirement.

Now you know

Arts unit gives work to CETA employees

The Manchester Arts Council Board of Directors has identified three areas which could utilize 23 Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) employees to help expand the arts in Manchester.

The board Tuesday morning outlined the areas which they feel will fulfill the town's needs for promoting and preserving the arts.

The positions would be divided among an architectural team, a visual arts team and artists in residence.

Members of the architectural team would study the architectural history of Manchester, identify and catalog historical buildings, and suggest what historical properties should be preserved. The council is considering a tour of historical locations next fall.

Photographers, graphic artists and video tape operators would record the various aspects of the arts such as recording the town's musical groups, video-taping various events for reproduction on Cable TV. This group might also work in cooperation with the architectural team.

The third group, artists in residence, was described by Alan Mason, president of the council's Board of Directors, as possibly being a small group of musicians, such as a trio, that would perform music throughout the community. Mason said the group might perform for such things as programs at Lutz Junior Museum, convalescent homes, daycare centers, nursery schools, and wherever they could "bring music into the community."

A dance or mime group would serve the same purpose, he said.

There are public relations and organizational personnel in the arts council who could do the backup work for any of the working groups, Mason said.

If the Board of Directors approves the council board's application next Tuesday, it will then be submitted to the Hartford Comprehensive Manpower Program office, local coordinators for the CETA program.

Opinion

Caution on Korea

A sense of balance needs to be restored on Capitol Hill, and quickly, lest relations between this country and South Korea be fatally poisoned.

President Carter has asked Congress to approve the transfer of $800 million worth of U.S. weapons to the South Korean army. This is far less than was "transferred" to North Vietnam by the fleeing South Vietnamese army, in April 1975, and would be by way of compensation to South Korea for the scheduled withdrawal of American ground troops.

But such is the anti-South Korean sentiment in Congress these days that the President's proposal would be defeated if put to a vote at this time, says Chairman Clement J. Zablocki of the House International Relations Committee. And it won't have a chance, he adds, until the Seoul government begins cooperating with the investigations into the South Korean influence-buying scandal, the so-called Koreagate.

Congress' anger has centered on Korean businessman Tongun Park, who was indicted on charges of attempting to bribe U.S. congressmen and is the key man in an alleged plot by the South Korean Central Intelligence Agency to influence U.S. foreign policy. Up to now, South Korea has refused to extradite Park to the United States, although at latest report it had offered to let the Justice Department in-terrogate him in a neutral country.

The basic explanation, however, is that the honor of Congress has been called into question, and hell hath no fury like a congressman in a self-righteous mood.

But while Congress will eventually calm down, the great danger is that the public will be so aroused by the anti-South Korean feelings generated by Koreagate that it may demand actions we later regret very much.

Of course, Americans are sick and tired of supporting so many allies that are disastrophous. Yet compared to North Korea, the regime of South Korean President Park Chung Hee looks quite reasonable.

South Korea lives literally under the gun. If a strong, dedicated enemy were as close to Washington as Dulles airport — which is the distance between Seoul and the nearest North Korean troops — our government would do little else but worry about its self-preservation. That's why South Korea tried to buy an insurance policy in the form of friends on Capitol Hill.

All the South Koreans want is to know that the United States will not abandon them in the event to another invasion from the North.

The U.S. Congress should not for one minute entertain the idea or permit anyone else to entertain the idea that we might.

Caught in the squeeze

This will be good news to everyone who has stayed up late worrying about the future of the Florida orange juice industry: Persons of all sexes may once again drink it in good health.

At any rate, a magazine called Mandate, which claims to speak on behalf of the nation's "gay" community, says it will urge its readers in its next issue to end their boycott of the state's famous product. The boycott was instituted to protest the employment by the Florida Department of Citrus of crusading anti-homosexual Anita Bryant.

The boycott has achieved its purpose, says the magazine, since the department has replaced some originally scheduled Bryant commercials with those of other celebrities and its executive director has recommended that the controversial saleslady be phased out.

We hope this is the last we will hear about orange juice. Anita Bryant and homosexuals. If the citrus people could squeeze as much juice from an orange as everyone concerned has squeezed publicity out of this story, and if you could substitute orange juice for gasoline, why, we could boycott Middle East oil.

GOP fortunes changing?

By LEE RODERICK

WASHINGTON — In vintage political fashion, both Republicans and Democrats claim they are pleased by the recent election results. GOP National Chairman William Brock points to his party's gains among black voters as a key outcome of the scattered off-year races, while his Democratic counterpart, Kenneth Curtis, expressed relief that his much stronger party generally held its ground.

"We're keeping what we had," said Curtis, "and given the substantial numbers we had already, that's good." He pointed to the New Jersey governor's race as a victory that "bodes particularly well for the 1980 elections." In that contest, incumbent Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, who was written off by most observers after pushing enactment of the state's first income tax, came from far back to easily defeat Republican challenger Raymond H. Bateman.

Republicans here had only to look to neighboring Virginia, however, to know that the gods of the 1977 election had blessed them as well. Governor-elect John Dalton will replace fellow Republican Mills Godwin there after handily defeating populist Democrat Henry Howell. The latter's defeat came despite personal campaigning for him by an old friend — Jimmy Carter.

Virginia saw another Republican elected in a race some here regard as even more significant to the GOP's future than Dalton's victory. He is J. Marshall Coleman, an aggressive, 35-year-old moderate who is about to become Virginia's first Republican attorney general — the state's second most powerful position. Coleman's victory automatically makes him a leading candidate for governor in 1981.

Further south, Republicans had reason to believe one of their pet goals — to attack more black support — was starting to bear fruit. Brock singled out Coleman and two other winners, all whom he said won "unprecedented percentages of the black vote in achieving their upset victories." The other two are the newly elected chief executive in populous Jefferson County, Kentucky, which includes Louisville, and the newly would hate to see Eastland retire. Kennedy, after all, is without a potential threat as it is enough of the added stature and publicity which goes with a major committee chairmanship.

More than half the legislation introduced in the Senate each year is referred to Eastland's committee, including all civil rights bills, constitutional amendments, immigration matters and anti-trust measures.

Conservatives consider the panel so crucial that earlier this year they persuaded Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., to give up the top GOP position on the Armed Services Committee in order to block liberal Sen. Charles McMathias Jr., R-Md., from becoming the ranking Republican on the Judiciary Committee.

At the moment, the 17-member committee is evenly split between liberals and conservatives with Eastland, D-Miss., holding the decisive vote.

The committee is no longer the burial ground it used to be for civil rights bills and other major liberal proposals. On really significant measures, Byrd consistently votes with the eight liberals to send the bill to the floor for action by the full Senate.

But with Eastland as chairman and Thurmond as ranking Republican, conservatives still maintain full control of internal committee procedures, scheduling and rules.

Potential threat
 Even Jimmy Carter, very quickly and very privately, let it be known he

Eastland stays, Teddy loses

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — He didn't actually say it, but he might as well have.

In announcing he will run for reelection next year, Sen. James O. Eastland, D-Miss., was sending a message three-fourths of the lobbyists in Washington had been praying for:

"Teddy Kennedy is gonna be chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee over my dead body."

Eastland, 73, had been privately telling his colleagues for months that he expected to retire at the end of his current term, the sixth he has served.

But that would have elevated Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee which Eastland has ruled for the past 20 years — a prospect which sends shudders through the business world and conservatives of every variety.

For weeks on end, Eastland's office was inundated with letters, phone calls and visitors beseeching the cigar-chomping old senator to spare the nation from the liberal scourge.

Chairmanship secure
 As long as Eastland remains in the Senate, his chairmanship is secure. He is scrupulously fair to the liberals on his committee, even when he disagrees with them, and generous with subcommittee chairmanships and staffing allowances.

Senate liberals took a fearful drubbing this year when they tried to oust at clockwork since 1962 William L. Waller, a Democrat, and GOP businessman Gil Carmichael, the Republican Eastland beat in 1972, they are all backing off now.

It is possible Waller could give Eastland trouble in a primary, but the smart money says he won't risk it. Which means, in all likelihood, that Teddy Kennedy has a long, long way ahead for the Judiciary Committee chairmanship.

Better for plants

Stanley Ries, professor of horticulture at Michigan State University, mixed triacetonol with potting soil, a mixture that is claimed to increase plant growth and yield far above plants treated with commercial nitrogen fertilizer. The chemical triacetonol was accidentally discovered during a classroom exercise and was isolated from alfalfa about a year and a half ago. (UPI photo)

Personal income shows strong increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Personal income, an indicator of future consumer spending, increased a strong 1.3 percent in October, the largest rise in seven months, the government said Wednesday.

Pay hikes for federal civilian and military personnel, which took effect last month, were a major contributor to the overall increase, according to the newest Commerce Department statistics.

Income last month rose by $20.2 billion to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $1.88 billion, the Commerce Department said. Personal income increased by a revised $12.4 billion in September.

The 1.3 percent increase in October exceeded September's 0.8 percent climb and was the largest monthly rise since a 1.5 percent jump in March when the economy was recovering from the effects of severe winter weather.

Gardening

By Frank Atwood

The season for making apple cider runs from mid-August to the first of January. Each weekend through this period fresh apples from a Connecticut orchard are ground to pulp and then squeezed in a press to make apple cider at the Bolton Cider Mill.

Half-way up to Bolton Hill on Middle Turnpike, the cider mill was built in 1919 by Harry and Esther Silverstein. They had come from Russia a few years earlier, and lived for a time in Columbia until they found property they could buy on Bolton Hill, then on a country road out of Manchester. They died in the 1960s.

Morris Silverstein, the youngest of their five children, operates the mill. It is open Saturday and Sunday only and most of the cider goes out the door in gallon or half-gallon jugs purchased by individual customers, some of whom have been coming to the mill for many years.

Some apple growers bring their fruit to the mill and have it custom processed for their own use, taking it home in barrels but there is comparatively little of this business today. Most of the apples are bought by Mr. Silverstein and he goes out with a truck to bring them to Bolton from the orchard. Mostly they are in apple boxes holding 40 to 60 pounds.

Taken first to the second floor of the mill, the apples go through a roller that cuts them to pulp which then goes down a chute to the press on the ground floor. The pulp is caught in a nylon cloth spread on a wooden rack, just the size to fit the press.

Apple juice is already trickling down the sides of the "cheese" and flows more rapidly when the pressure starts. The juice, squeezed out through the nylon cloth, is strained of pulp fragments, and at the bottom of the press flows into a stainless steel holding tank.

The apple juice is strained a second time when it is pumped from the holding tank through plastic hose to a 50-gallon stainless steel fill tank, shown at the right side of our picture. The cider is not filtered and Mrs. Silverstein emphasizes that no preservative is added. The cider will ferment but keeping it cold in the refrigerator will slow down this natural process.

Mr. Silverstein hires high school boys to fill jugs, wait on customers and help with the clean-up chores. No more than two batches are put through the press before it is taken down and washed with soap and water. Keeping the equipment clean and using only sound apples keep sediment in the cider to a minimum.

He has six boys helping him, although not all at once. A big job that Morris' mother used to do was washing glass jugs that were returned. Washing was eliminated four years ago. The jugs now are plastic, each used once.

Late apples best
Russet apples, in Mr. Silverstein's opinion, make the finest cider, but few of them are available. He likes the later-maturing varieties including Baldwin, Red and Golden

Delicious and Stayman. He uses some McIntosh apples, grown in larger quantity than any other variety, but says they make a lighter cider than the later kinds. It is both lighter in color and has less "body."

Although the cider mill is open only on weekends, Mr. Silverstein finds that business connected with the mill has to be attended to, sometimes seven days a week. He also has other occupations. He is a life insurance agent and has rental property to oversee, some his own and some owned by his mother's estate of which he is administrator.

In the mill building he'll point out the beams of native chestnut, cut by his parents in their own woodlot on Bolton Hill. They put up the mill with their own hands, he says, standing side by side, each with a hammer, pounding nails.

Julian Bond will speak in MCC lecture series

Julian Bond, State Senator from Georgia and nationally known activist, will speak Tuesday, Nov. 22, at 8 p.m. at Bailey Auditorium in Manchester High School. His topic will be "The New Politics."

The lecture is part of the Manchester Community College (MCC) speaker series and is sponsored by the MCC student activities committee. Tickets will be sold at the door. Further information is available by contacting the MCC student activities office at 644-4000.

Bond has been active in movements for political and social change since his student days at Morehouse College in Atlanta, Ga., when he helped to found the Committee on Appeal for Human Rights and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee. He has fought for civil and human rights in his native South and throughout the nation, and was a leading spokesman against the war in Vietnam.

In 1965, Bond was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives, but was barred from taking his seat by legislators who objected to his statements about Vietnam. Despite winning two special elections, he could not take his seat until 1967 after a ruling in his favor by the U.S. Supreme Court.

He eventually served four terms as a state representative and, in 1974, he was elected to his present seat in the Senate.

Bond also serves as president of the Southern Poverty Law Center and is board chairman of the Southern Election Fund. He is a board member of many organizations including the Voter Education Project, Southern Regional Council, National Sharecroppers Fund, Robert F. Kennedy Memorial Fund, and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Social Change.

Bond was recently named to Time Magazine's "200 Leaders List."

Talent to return with field hockey

By LEN AUSTER
Herald Sportswriter

There will be some talent lost, obviously. But Manchester High girls' field hockey team is returning enough to look forward to a winning campaign in '78.

The Indians just missed qualifying for the state tournament, compiling a 5-2 record. It was, however, the Silk Towers' best finish since Mary Faigant returned as coach in 1972.

Co-captains Doreen Downham and Linda Cheney along with Wendy Kemp, Cindy Fornica and Lori McCurry will depart via the graduation route. Faigant is encouraged, though, by the prospect of returning most of her forward line.

Sophomore Mary Neubelt led the club with four goals with Liz Neubelt and Sue Roth, both also sophomores, adding three apiece. Manchester scored 14 goals and surrendered 14. Juniors Janet Ritchie and Lisa Griffin add depth to the front line.

Junior Cindy Mills and sophomore Linda Carpenter at half (linkback) return as well as junior goalie Lois Ann Diana. It'll be a question of shutting up the defense.

"We'll start next year off in better position than this one," Faigant stated noting the underclass starters, "and we have a fine jayvee team. From there we'll be filling in positions."

Mary Bossidy and Mary Shirer are top candidates on the defensive end of the 7-3-2 jayvee crew while

Making top 15 accomplishment Chances small for schoolboys

By EARL YOST
Sports Editor

How much of a chance does a schoolboy runner have of winning the Five Mile Road Race in Manchester? This question has been asked many times over the years and the first schoolboy winner since the race was revived in 1945 has yet to take home first prize.

The chances are slimmer than a telephone pole's shadow that a scholastic runner will step home ahead of a college or club runner. Little Johnny Kelley, who went on to world fame after his New London Bukley High career, holds the distinction of being the top schoolboy finisher in the past 32 years. The Boston University grad and two-time member of the United States Olympic team was third in 1949 when the field numbered 50.

Three youngsters placed fifth while schoolboys, Ed Norris of Boston in 1964, Jimmy Hall of Newton in 1967 and Dan Moynihan of Malden, Mass., in 1968. The starting fields those years numbered 141, 173 and 247.

Gerry Whittaker of Torrington High set the pace for schoolboys by being No. 1 three straight years, 1975-74-73.

Charlie Duggan, one of the men to watch in this year's race, was a repeat winner in 1969 and 1970. Last year's best finish was a 23rd place by Glenn Florsdorf of Manchester High, now a member of the University of Connecticut varsity and enjoying a fine cross country campaign.

Bill Rodgers, perhaps the best marathoner in the USA today, was the top schoolboy in 1965 in 18th place. Seven-time Five Mile winner Andy Burfoot was 14th in his first race while attending Fitch High in Groton.

Rodgers and Hall were out of Newton High and Duggan is a Hartford Public High product.

Glenn Florsdorf

Making the top 25 will be a major accomplishment for a schoolboy in the Thanksgiving morning run when more than 1,200 runners are expected to answer the starter's gun at 10:30.

Bulls' owner suspended

HARTFORD (UPI) — The World Hockey Association announced Wednesday it has suspended Birmingham Bulls' owner John Bassett for six months for signing of underage player Ken Linseman.

Bassett's immediate suspension will keep him from participating in the hockey operations of the Bulls, according to WHA President Howard Baldwin.

Baldwin said a WHA regulation prohibited the signing of underage junior players.

Baldwin said the Bulls are required to post a $100,000 performance bond to guarantee the team will comply with all league bylaws and league rules and regulations.

A federal judge in Hartford last month upheld Linseman's right to play, ordering the Bulls to honor his long-term contract.

While under suspension Bassett will not be allowed to participate in the hockey operations of the Bulls and responsibility for all such matters will rest with the team's general manager and its coach.

Baldwin said Bassett will retain his seat on the WHA board of trustees throughout his suspension and continue to represent his franchise in matters such as marketing and business operations.

Bassett, principal owner of the Bulls, completed a trade Tuesday with Detroit, the first between a WHA team and the National Hockey League.

The Bulls traded right wing Tim Sheehy and center Vaclav Nedomansky to the Red Wings for defenseman Steve Duraban and forward Dave Hanson. The Bulls are in the cellar of the WHA with a 2-10-1 record.

Manchester also left its mark in state competition, garnering fourth place in Class LL and sixth place in the State Open.

From the top group only Lori Veal graduates. Junior tri-captain Kate Hennessy returns as do sophomores Lynn Wright, Lee Sadosky, Sue Brown, Pat Adams, Wendy Taylor, Lisa Tilden, Lauren Woodhouse and Chris Cheney. Barb Slaiby, a junior, will have another season.

Blanchette, unsure of all hopefuls, did mention the names of Sue Couette and Jackie Meyer as top prospects from the junior high ranks.

"I think we have the basic nucleus rolling up 300 yards offensively. Since then, each team has lost a game. The Patriots lost to the Miami Dolphins and the 2-7 Bills lost to the Baltimore Colts.

Buffalo Coach Jim Ringo is trying to forget the Baltimore game. "I'd like to think that we're more like the team that played New England," Ringo said. "It showed that our men have a lot of character."

Patriots' linebacker Steve Zabel, who had been suffering from an injured Achilles tendon, returned to practice Wednesday and might play against the Bills. Linebacker Pete Barnes and tight end Russ Francis are injured and not expected to play.

Buffalo's running back O.J. Simpson is out of action for the season. He also missed the last game against the Patriots. Buffalo linebacker Merv Krakau has a pinched nerve in his neck and it is not known if he will play Sunday.

Providence, R.I. (UPI) — Narragansett Park officials have abandoned their quest for Sunday racing, uncertain whether the Pawtucket track will operate beyond Dec. 31 when the current meeting ends.

The board of directors, in a letter Wednesday to the state Racing and Athletics Hearing Board, withdrew its appeal of the State Racing Commission's Oct. 28 denial of Sunday racing.

Track President J. Alden Dooley said the action followed refusal of the Mutual Clerks Union to negotiate contract changes to allow Sunday racing.

Dooley said the track will remain open until the current meeting ends Dec. 31 but he made no commitments for 1978. He said the board of directors will have to review its profit and loss situation at the end of the year.

What you saw this year is what you'll get next. Manchester High girls' cross country team in '78 will not change dramatically as only one of the top 10 will be lost to graduation.

The Lady Indians, sophomore led, registered a fine 102 mark in dual meets winning the last eight straight. Coach Phil Blanchette's contingent also took second place finishes at the Simsbury Invitational and Knights of Columbus Meet and a third at the season-opening Farmington Invitational.

Manchester also left its mark in state competition, garnering fourth place in Class LL and sixth place in the State Open.

Celtics run like old in trouncing Atlanta

BOSTON (UPI) — The Atlanta Hawks wouldn't be able to identify the Boston Celtics in a police lineup because they never saw the culprits' faces.

Running like the Celtics of yesteryear, Boston lapped past the flat-footed Hawks, 131-105, in a Wednesday night windprint.

By Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown's count, the Celtics scored 80 points off their transition game from offense to defense. Discounting the rebounded shots, the fast break and fouls that resulted from it netted 51 points.

"We played aggressively as a team," said guard Jo Jo White, who has helped Boston to three straight wins since quitting for a day to "jolt" the team from a 1-3 start. "The ball moved and we moved ourselves. This win just shows that we weren't playing any ball earlier in the season."

The Hawks, with four straight losses following an 8-1 start, got buried by a slow start. They fell behind 7-0, but rallied to gain a 16-13 edge on two baskets by John Drew, the game's high scorer with 25 points.

But the Celtics then set the tone for the game, scoring the next 10 points on a drive through the lane by White, a layup by John Havlicek after a steal and half-court rush by Dave Cowens, an unassisted layup by basket-hanging Charlie Scott off a court-length pass, a steal and drive by Scott and a Dave Bing layup after a Havlicek steal.

The spurt moved Boston ahead to stay at 25-16 and helped the Celtics mount a 30-22 first-period advantage. The margin ballooned to 64-46 at halftime, 97-76 after three quarters and 122-94 with 1:37 to play.

Rookie Cedric Maxwell and Tom Boswell had 20 points apiece to lead seven Boston players into double figures. Once again Maxwell was the sparkplug — opening the game with a three-point play, scoring seven of the first 13 Boston points and adding 10 more in the third period after the Hawks had whittled the lead to 14 points.

"I never thought I'd be playing this much but then I never thought the Boston Celtics would be doing this badly this early in the season," said Maxwell, the top-round draft choice from UNC-Charlotte who has started in the three straight Boston wins and has converted 24 of 31 shots in that span.

"But I'm there getting more confidence every game along with Dave Bing, who wasn't here last year and Sidney Wicks, who missed training camp and is just starting to get back into the system," Maxwell said. "We're starting to pass the ball much better and move without the ball."

While the Celtics were running and converting 59.6 percent of their inside shots, the Hawks were struggling at 44.1 percent clip from the outside. Additionally Boston dominated the backboards, getting 51 rebounds to 35 for the Hawks. Cowens had 14 of his game-high 20 rebounds on the defensive boards and sent the Celtics running with quick outlet passes.

"We had an old-time Celtics effort out of everybody and we found the open man," said Coach Tom Heinsohn, who made a "major adjustment" in practice to work the inside to his big men rather than force his guards to handle the bulk of the shooting from the outside. "We got a lot of layups."

Early in the game the ball kept going inside to Maxwell," Heinsohn said. "We didn't design it that way. The plays were designed for one of the big men to be cutting inside but Maxwell was hustling his tail off to get down the court and he was open all the time. That's what I liked about the kid in the first place."

Atlanta Coach Hubie Brown took some solace in the loss, citing his players' unfamiliarity with one another.

"Look, Boston and Philly had problems but they bounced back," Brown said. "We're a young team, though. We also have five guys totally new to the team. You have to be like a father here."

"We have 69 games to go. We're not happy with four straight losses but we can certainly regroup and turn it around."

The Celtics are home Friday against the Philadelphia 76ers.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I'm still in shock from a telephone call I just received from a young woman informing me that I had an 18-month-old granddaughter! It was speechless. My only child is a 35-year-old college graduate. He's not married, not living at home, and he works 800 miles away. I see him only three times a year.

I phoned him and told him about the disturbing call I had just received. He calmly said, "It's possible." Then he told me he doesn't see the girl anymore, he's never seen the baby, and he has no plans to.

The baby's mother says she is 25 and still lives my son, but they decided a marriage wouldn't work out.

Abby can be a grandmother if my son accepts no responsibility for this child? The young mother invited me to visit her and see the baby.

Will I complicate matters if I go? STILL IN SHOCK

DEAR STILL: First, get together with your son and find out why he is treating the matter so casually. From what he says, he may not even be the baby's father. Once his legal and moral obligations in this situation have been established, you can decide what role you want to assume in it.

DEAR ABBY: You were quick to agree with RIPPED OFF, who complained because a co-worker had bought a fur for a fellow worker as a gift from the office, and claimed it cost $21. RIPPED OFF later learned that the purchase had been marked $15.81.

Consider these figures, Abby: $15.81 - purchase 1.00 - tax 2.00 - fancy gift wrap 1.00 - card Total - $20.81

This doesn't include the time spent shopping or the cost of transportation. And the poor woman probably skipped her lunch to buy it.

This should serve as a warning to others who shop for a group. Get receipts for everything! NO RIP OFF

DEAR NO: You're right. I shot from the hip like one of my ex-spouse and demoted me to book private.

DEAR ABBY: My heart aches today for my 14-year-old daughter who went to a school dance last evening and wasn't asked to dance once.

When her older brother was her age and popular with the crowd, I always encouraged him to ask the not-so-popular girls to dance, impressing upon him how much it could mean to a girl who might not otherwise receive an invitation to dance during the entire evening.

I was proud that he followed my advice. I wish other mothers would tell their sons the same thing. Will you help spread the word, Abby? It could mean so much to the girls.

ACHING MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You bet I will. An ounce of thoughtfulness can ease a ton of heartache.

Skateboards riding high

NEW YORK (UPI) — Would you believe $5,000 for a skateboard? Depending on whose estimates you accept, annual sales of skateboards and related equipment are expected to approach the $2 billion mark (industry estimates) or between $500 million and $1 billion this year (government estimates).

But whatever the final figure skateboards are big business. An estimated 60 million are now in use in the United States. They range in price from $15 (the pits — according to aficionados) to the above mentioned $5,000, with an average "decent" board costing about $75.

The $5,000 skateboard actually is a streamlined skateboard car in which the rider lies prone. It is made by Hobe Skateboards Inc. of Costa Mesa, Calif., and a dozen other companies. These deluxe skateboards are raced at Signal Hill at Long Beach, Calif., at speeds of 50 miles an hour and up.

Skateboards received attention recently when a California inventor filed a patent infringement complaint with the International Trade Commission, alleging foreign manufacturers are cheating his interest on the "kick tail," the curved rear end of the skateboard that makes some of the more spectacular stunt riding possible.

Skateboarding began many years ago with kids tearing down old roller skates and nailing the wheel carriages to a wooden plank. It was commercialized in the late 1950s by California surfboarders as an alternative sport when the ocean was too rough to ride the waves.

According to Pat Casey and Chip Ashbach, top executives of Hobe, there are now around 25 manufacturers in the United States, with a wholesale volume of between $10 million and $200 million a year. Hobe, a division of Hobart Alter's company which pioneered the manufacture of surfboards around 25 years ago, expects to do $11 million in sales this year.

Pat Casey got his first $150,000 of backing for the skateboard venture from Donald McAnis, a dentist. Casey had persuaded Hobe Alter to let him use the Hobe name but Alter insisted that Casey raise the needed funds. The Bullock's department store chain was the first important customer.

McAnis's son, Steve, became interested in the business and implemented on Casey and Ashbach, who

Hocker going with director

By MAL BARLOW
East Hartford Reporter

There will be no hocker in East Hartford Saturday. There may never be hocker here.

Hocker's chief proponent, Frank DeGregorio, is no longer the town's director of the Department of Parks and Recreation. Mayor Richard Blackstone exercised his power to change department heads at will Monday by naming Fred Balet to DeGregorio's job.

"It hit me like a bombshell," said DeGregorio Wednesday afternoon as he cleaned out his desk and straightened out department papers in his office.

"Three and a half years on the job isn't enough time. I've only just got a soccer program started. Hocker was to start Saturday.

He referred to many other programs he has begun or was working towards. Many of them, like hocker, involved new approaches in recreation. His programs meant less competition and screening out of less able players. They meant more people doing more things.

"I've planted the seeds for so many programs."

Mayor Blackstone said only that an evaluation of department heads led to his decision not to reappoint DeGregorio. A leading Democrat in town who asked not to be identified said DeGregorio may have worked hard but he "embarrassed" the mayor in many ways.

DeGregorio was in friction often with the leaders of organized sports, the traditional sports such as baseball, the Democrat said.

The complaints of the Hockanum Area Association must have played a part, he said. The association is a member group of the East Hartford Citizen Action Group (EHCAG). Its members have said publicly and often this fall the town has failed to give them their share at the Hockanum Park off High Street.

DeGregorio said Wednesday he had spoken to the Hockanum people at length. He told them they would soon get the town's largest swimming pool.

He disagreed with them that Hockanum Park was run down. He denied their reports of not enough swings or ballfields.

Association members said they were not satisfied with his answers. They went several times before the Town Council to press their demands for a better park.

DeGregorio said he had hoped for the director's job for years. He wanted to change recreation in East Hartford. Make it better for more people, he said.

"At the least, I'm disappointed," he said.

He is age 49 and has no plans for his future, he said. Before running the department, he had taught physical education in the town school system.

"The children feel very secure," said Mrs. Mildred D'Addeo of 76 Prospect St. as she talked about the Second North School at 1450 Main St., East Hartford.

"The small size seems to help. They like school. The teachers know them all well. They take special interest in them."

Mrs. D'Addeo said these are the main reasons she has been leading a fight since January 1972 to keep Second North open. Second North was built in 1920 and a small addition put on in 1956. It has a small playground with a few pieces of recreation equipment. There are five classrooms, a media center, a multipurpose room and a cafeteria.

The school has six teachers including a head teacher instead of a principal. All the teachers were listed as having at least six years experience in the 1976 reports on town schools prepared by the staff of Supt. Eugene Diggs.

The school takes children in Grades K-3. When Dr. Diggs first proposed closing Second North in 1972, there were 139 students in the school. As of Sept. 16 this year, there were 106 enrolled.

Mrs. D'Addeo and other parents in the school's neighborhood have gone to Board of Education meetings, public hearings, and special meetings with Dr. Diggs to argue for their school. Main points besides their faith in what it does for their children's learning include the danger to the small children if they had to walk to the next closest school, Anna Norris at McAllister Park. The parents were told the children would not be bused. Mrs. D'Addeo said.

Also, parents owning their homes near the school are afraid property values would drop. Many of the new families moving into the area have small children. Among the reasons they buy is the quality of Second North, she said.

And a third reason is that there are plenty of children to fill the small school. Despite the declining enrollments in most town schools, Mrs. D'Addeo expects Second North to have more children. Young families are buying the older homes in the area of older people whose children have grown beyond Second North, she said.

Her first act to keep the school was getting a petition signed by parents in 1972. This led to a public hearing Feb. 7, 1972. The school district's boundaries were changed so no children would have to cross the railroad tracks on Main Street. But the school was kept open.

Dr. Diggs again proposed to the board Jan. 24, 1975 that the town close the school. Another hearing was held Jan. 30, 1975. The board finally decided it would close the Woodland School to elementary grades this fall. It did. It also decided Second North would close in the fall of 1978.

With her own money, Mrs. D'Addeo hired Atty. Dominic J. Caciopoli of New

Youths rampage near Hockanum

Children and youths of the 100-unit Hockanum Village housing project "went on a rampage" Wednesday night, police said.

The fire department responded to several set brush fires at the village. When a fire truck was pulling into the village at 5:58 p.m., a youth threw a rock and struck a firefighter riding on the outside of the truck, police said. The firefighters were not able to apprehend the youth. Police sent an unmarked cruiser to the village at 9:04 p.m. where it came upon a barricade of boxes and cinderblocks in the road, police said. Youths threw rocks at the cruiser causing minor damage to it.

Police picked up several young people, questioned them, and released them. No charges were filed.

The set fires and false alarms have been going on almost nightly since Halloween, police said.

Someone broke into a Larain Avenue home sometime between 2:30 p.m. Tuesday and 12:33 a.m. Wednesday. The home was ransacked. Missing are jewelry, a camera, a .22 caliber pistol and $670 cash.

Better loom developed

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (UPI) — Development of a shuttleless loom that can weave multi-colored fabrics almost twice as fast as conventional equipment with less noise was announced this week by Crompton & Knowles Corp.

David A. Schrom, president of the company's textile machinery group, said tests made by the company show that the new loom can produce better quality multi-colored fabrics than bobbin-and-shuttle looms and sharply reduces yarn wastage. The new loom can weave about 19
