Bolton Court Denies Question on Jurisdiction

A defense motion to dismiss the now-famous Bolton Democratic party misapprehension case, based on jurisdiction has been denied.

In a brief, state attorney James J. H. Meehan has ruled that the Circuit Court does indeed have jurisdiction in the case.

Attorneys were notified of the decision yesterday.

Defense Atty. Harry Hammer has contended that the Circuit Court does not have jurisdiction. The suit should come before a higher court, he says. In addition, he has said the suit is a factual dispute and, as such, could properly have been resolved by the Democratic State Central Committee.

But Judge Meehan declared the suit is essentially a demand for an accounting completely within the scope of local court.

The plaintiff asks for an accounting of $100 in town committee funds said to have been misappropriated and for $200 damages.

A second defense motion, to declare a non-suit, will be decided within a week, the judge said.

Hammer addressed both motions to the court May 16 before Judge Meehan.

The judge's memorandum, Judge Meehan said the Circuit Court may hear cases in equity at law involving up to $200 in damages, according to statute.

He said that in Bolton the suit was filed by Hammer in support of the defendant's motion to dismiss the suit, which he said is the defendant's motion to dismiss the suit.

The trial has dragged through three sessions in which the defendant's motion to dismiss the suit was denied. The defendant's motion to dismiss the suit was denied.

"Thank God he's back."

These few words summed up joy in the White House yesterday when news came that the astronaut, Lt. Col. Michael Smith, had returned safely to Earth.

Bonn's Top Spokesman Drops from Press Post

BY JOHN WELAND
BONN, Germany (AP) — Felix von Eckardt, 10 years the official spokesman for West Germany, is taking a new job.

The change reflects the end of a long and close relationship between Eckardt and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer.

He had long been an open secret that Eckardt was seeking a graceful way to leave out of the 60-man press office.

He will become his government's chief representative in Berlin, succeeding a retiring official, Dr. Heinrich Vogel.

The latter has been West Germany's representative since the time the ill-fated Berlin blockade was lifted in 1961.

Eckardt's friends talk up his appointment. They point out that he will supervise administrative controls by Communist East Germany and these will be expanded in U.S. Berlin settlement proposals become fact.

The more official post of spokesman will drop a peg or two in the government hierarchy but is expected to leave Bonn in mid-June and be replaced here by Karl-Guenther von Haas.

Chairman-Emil Eckardt, a one-time script writer, is as famous for his political sense as for his large wardrobe of stylish suits. He has shown wit and charm in stating the government's position on issues of the day.

Haas, with an encyclopedic memory, speaks abruptly, sometimes rudely with anger, and seldom smiles. He has made a bad name for himself in the past by his blunt remarks in public and in private.

The perfect press spokesman of the last, Eckardt has given no hint in public of his feelings. At 58 he made only this comment, delivered with a characteristic ironic smile: "It will be interesting to go to the front."

We'll Get Used To It

getting the United States certain special ties with and concerns inside that Common Market. All this takes place as a preliminary as the time has not long since passed in which anything short of a world common market would ever be the case. The time has now properly for anybody. All this takes place as if the world were entering happily and surely upon a new era of economic protectionism to be created by erecting higher walls around larger encaves than ever before.

But, no matter how much men plan and chart and work at such schemes, this little world of ours will insist on being one world, and if we insist on doing our planning in the opposite direction, so much the worse, inevitably, for our planning.

Take, for a sample of the way the big ultimate pressures of one world have it in for regional concepts like the Common Market, the case the Australians put to the United States. The Australians have been visited there recently. Britain has applied to join, and we are trying to get into the European Common Market. The Common Market, in order to get itself going just on the continent, had to agree to a certain amount of protection for French agriculture. We are afraid this will cost us of our foreign markets. We see big improvements that will be made for our foreign markets, and we are seeking a special deal for our farm products in common with the other nations of the world. This deal is a special one for our farm products in common with the other nations of the world. This deal is a special one for our farm products in common with the other nations of the world.

Astronaut in Danger, Confused on 3d Orbit

low, and that an emergency oxygen system could have been used. Carpenter was resting at Jamaica Plain, where he had an emotional reunion Thursday night with John H. Glenn, Jr., the first American to go into orbit.

Carpenter received a message from Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson.

"I'm a real cliff hanger with the whole world pulling for you," the Johnson message said.

"We are proud, very proud, that another American has joined the select company of men who have played the first turns in the sky."

At Mercury press headquarters here, information officers awaited possible changes in plans that previously had ruled out a Glenn solo mission in Washington.

One informed person remarked that the flight had been scheduled the significance that had been attached to it in advance, and with its thrilling character and other surprise elements, might warrant more public attention than originally planned.

At Grand Turk, Lt. Col. John A. Powers, information officer for the astronauts, said that Washington had ordered him to "stay flexible" for the next 24 hours.

Powers indicated a more elaborate homecoming might be in the offing.

Aurora 7, the satellite that Carpenter had handled so well, proved its worth by remaining aloft until the destroyer Pierce picked it up. It was taken to Roosevelt Roads, Puerto Rico, and was to be brought here today to Hangar 8 on the Cape, for a check of all its systems.

Carpenter was questioned today by physicians and capsule technicians anxious to mine all his information before he forgets any of it.

Mercury control center said the "during all the flight we noted a high body temperature of the astronaut," he said.

It also said police pressure was high at 80 and that this is too high.

"We can't explain it right now. It could be a faulty sensor reading."

He reported an erroneous warning was responsible during the first pass for a high body temperature. The reading, and that at one time a button on Carpenter's blood pressure device became stuck.

The surgeon said the blood pressure button was jammed twice by "multiple arcing," but he did not elaborate.

He said that suit temperature rose 4.2 degrees on the first pass over the Kono River and 4.2 degrees at that time "We should have stopped his exercise. We should have asked Mucka to do this."

It was later in the flight that Carpenter was ordered to stop exercising—something which had been primarily pulling anabolic bond.

The surgeon said that Carpenter's body temperature actually fell on the second and third orbits—fluctuating between 100 and 104 on the second and between 101 and 102 on the final circuit.

"The astronaut," he said, "did report he was warm and sweating. This caused more concern about what was happening to the body temperature."

The surgeon said that Carpenter drank much water because of the warmth. Carpenter also ate solid food cubes, reporting that they crumbled, apparently in the heat.

He also said Carpenter twice had trouble urinating while walking in the capsule for launching. No further mention was made of this.

Mercury control reported that at times during the flight, a high rate of fuel consumption on the automatic and "fly-by-wire" control systems was noted. Fly-by-wire is a combination manual-automatic system and draws fuel from the same tank as the automatic controls.

Manual control has a separate tank and Carpenter often ordered to turn to the manual device to conserve fuel for the automatic system.

"We are unable to verify the cause of the excess consumption," Mercury control reported. "But apparently the one-pound thrust jets (jets) were being used for long duration—sometimes five or six seconds on the first orbit. It appears to be a gyro problem."

The gyroscopes in part of the control system and help align the capsule attitude to the proper angle with the horizon.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said the overshoot resulted because his capsule was eight to 10 degrees off its intended attitude angle at the time the retro-rockets were fired, California to bring the craft out of orbit.

There was some speculation at the briefing that Carpenter's fatigue may have contributed to the off-angle.

The liaison station reported on his condition on the third orbit.

"He was quite concerned about his capsule attitude and therefore, on several occasions, when CapCom (capsule communicator) tried to get him on his retro-rocket, he kept returning the question to me as to what he was doing."

He said the retro-rocket was started doing something else. There was more confusion whether he understood what the order was.

"We had the impression that he was very confused about what was going on. But it was very difficult to assess whether he was confused or preoccupied. He certainly was a different man on the second orbit than on the preceding one."

The Wisconsin, Australia, station said, "We also feel the astronaut was acting somewhat tired during the last pass."

The spokesman at the Bermuda post, noting the fatigue, said that earlier in the flight, he had noticed the oxygen pressure in the capsule was decreasing and was

Mahler Gets No Answer to Apology Plea

By JOHN GRUBER

At his meeting yesterday, the board of directors of the Hartford Symphony Orchestra decided "to take no action" in regard to the letter sent by the late Fritz Mahler demanding a public apology for alleged remarks impugning him as musical director of the group.

Francis Goodwin, II, president of the symphony society, was empowered by the board of directors to meet with Mr. Mahler in an effort to iron out difficulties which have arisen, but it was definitely understood that no apology would be forthcoming.

Last night's talk with Mr. Mahler on the board was a unit, rather than a separate matter.

"According to the board, no apology would be forthcoming, but we have been in favor of meeting Mr. Mahler," Mr. Goodwin said.

Mr. Mahler, who is now in Europe, had been in Hartford for a number of days, but he had no contact with the board of directors.

Medical Care for Aged; The Hyphenated Bills

WASHINGTON, May 25 (AP)—As the argument over health care for the aged builds up, some lawmakers are pushing two bills that would combine the Social Security Act and the Medicare Act into a single law.

King-Anderson (for the bill) and Sen. Clinton P. Anderson, D.N.J., in the measure still pending in the House Ways and Means Committee. It would put into effect President Kennedy's plan for payroll-tax-financed health care for persons 65 and older with Social Security coverage. Many labor and senior citizens groups back it.

Kerr-Mills (for Sen. Robert Kerr, D-Okl., and Rep. William D. Mills, D-Ark.) is the program on the federal statute book since 1960 but not yet implemented in all states. It would help medically needy old persons through a combination of federal and state financing. The American Medical Association and other opponents of the administration plan say that, given a chance, Kerr-Mills would be a disaster.

The Welfare Department says there is no reason to repeal Kerr-Mills if King-Anderson is enacted, that together they can help nearly all the aged. King-Anderson, the department says, would take over enough of the load now being handled under Kerr-Mills and the Veterans Administration to reduce by $100 million to $125 million a year the amount of federal funds needed for these programs.

Here is a rundown of major provisions of the two:

King-Anderson: Those who have reached 65 and are eligible for Social Security for Railroad Retirement Act) Old Age Benefits, workers, widows and other eligible dependents. Those who are retired would be eligible, even though they did not during their working years pay the proposed extra tax. The income received by retired persons would be reduced to the extent that the services of internists, obstetricians and similar specialists might be reflected in hospital bills. No drug, except those administered in hospitals, would be paid for.

Kerr-Mills: Once again, the states set the standards within broad limits. They pay for physical and nursing services and create drug, as well as for hospital stays. Some covering nursing care, but the states are not required to furnish them. The services furnished. The administration estimates the program would cost about $1.2 billion during its first full year of operation. The A.M.A. says it might cost twice that amount.

Kerr-Mills: The Welfare Department estimates for the year beginning July 1 is $400 million, including $215 million of federal funds. The Welfare Department says if the plan were adopted nationwide, 50 far 27 states have programs in effect. Two more have state legislation but not yet started programs, one has legislation pending, and three have enacted enabling legislation but have not appropriated funds.

Thant Appeal Rejected By Dutch and Indonesia

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP)—U.N. Acting Secretary-General U. Thant's appeal to the Netherlands and Indonesia to cease negotiations over West New Guinea got nowhere today. Each government stuck to a position which the other has called unacceptable.

Attempting to avert a full-scale war for the jungle territory, Thant appealed to the Dutch and Indonesians Wednesday to return to the conference table on the basis of proposals put forth by U. S. diplomat Ellsworth Bunker. Although neither side has yet made a formal reply to Thant, both showed no sign of modifying the positions that ruptured Bunker's mediation efforts in March.

Both countries expressed willingness to talk. But Dutch Premier Jan de Quay declared the Netherlands will not bow to an Indonesian demand that the Dutch pledge in advance to transfer administration of West New Guinea to President Sukarno's government as Indonesia has done.

The Bunker proposal, as published here Thursday, called for the transfer of West New Guinea to Indonesia, but with a 10-year U.N.-appointed period of control after two years. They also call for an eventual plebiscite for the territory's future. Fighting has broken out in several areas in westernmost New Guinea.
