

Manchester Motors Dresses Up Its Lot

A unique concept in used car merchandising, and one of the first of its kind in the east, is the basis for a "City Beautiful Achievement" award made to the Manchester Motor Sales by the Chamber of Commerce. Accepting the award is Robert J. Schaller, right, president of the automobile agency. Next to him are his sons, Ralph, right center, and William. On the left is Dr. Douglas H. Smith, chairman of the Chamber's City Beautiful Committee, who presented the award. The entire used car area was redesigned to make it look less like a used car lot than the public is accustomed to. Islands of grass, shrubs and flowering trees give the cars an attractive background and bring out their beauty and grace. A curving driveway, running through the entire area, permits easy view of all of the cars on display. The model and plan was designed by last year's junior class of Industrial Design at the University of idgeport, as a class credit project. (Herald photo by Saternis.)

—The Gemini 7 pilots—assured that the power-producing fuel cells of thet space ship would not fail them—hurtled confidently onward today to the big goal of 14 days in space. After a night of worry over the power system, flight directors determined that it would hold up, and gave the world space endurance champi ons Frank Borman and Jame A. Lovell Jr. a "go" for the full listance of 5,149.400 miles. This would bring them to a landing in the Atlantic at 9:05 a.m. EST Saturday, in the same area where spacemen Walter M. Christmas morning. He can put up with being surprised by unexpected gifts he has no real need for. But what really rubs his spirit raw is to untie half a mile of ribbons and unwind two acres of paper-and find therein something that is precisely what he did not desire, or actively dislikes. "The trouble with Christmas," he groans in self-pity, "is that it is overcommercialized. But actually, it is largely his own fault. Many of us are too shy or bashful to tell Santa Claus what we want. It is too much like begging. There is nothing wrong, however, in writing Santa a letter ? "I don't care what you bring me, just so you don't bring me something that makes me blow my top. One Way To Stop Is To Stop? ame from one of the parties to the war in Vietnam with whom we refuse to "deal, there continue to be tantalizing cossibilities associated with the proposal or a Christmas Eve truce in the war. Presumably because the offer did ome from the National Liberation Front in South Vietnam, with which the United States refuses to deal, there will apparently be no formal reply from Washington.

. But latest dispatches from Washington say that the decision for any ceasefire will be with the local commanders on the scene, and then advance the possibility that there may develop, by tacit consent on both sides of the war, what as to be called a "de facto" truce. which would exist not by any formal agreement, but merely by a momentary harmony of action-in this case non-action-in the field, for a brief holiday

The reason this raises tantalizing possibilities is that it represents an experiment with one formula for ending the war in Vietnam which nobody has yet One way to stop the fighting is to stop the fighting. That sentence has a moronic sound. No one can believe that the answer to the problems of Vietnam could ever be that direct and simple.

What would the conditions be? Who uld guarantee that everybody on both sides would observe any such informal cease-fire? How would either side be sure that such a cease-fire would not be prependerantly to the military and strategic and morale advantage of the other? There are, obviously, a thousand reasons why any such "de facto" ceasefire would be impractical, why neither side could risk it.

Yet all this is, now that we recall it, essentially what happened in Korea in 1952, between two military forces which had blooded each other into some mutual respect and into the realization that their next escalation would have to be world war. They stopped the fighting by stopping the fighting, and then spent many months negotiating the conditions of the truce which still exists, not as a satisfactory solution of the problem of Korea, but as something better than World War III.

Industry And Pollution (For comment on this speech see Phineas Fiske's "Reflections" on this page today.)

Pollution control, regrettably, is a subject few businessmen care to talk about in public. I am afraid that I see sides being "chosen up," and that a radical change of viewpoint will have to take place before we as an industrialized country can get on the right We as industry people have a problem, and it is a problem we share with every citizen of this country. We can solve it, not by fighting, but by working together. Furthermore, it is, to me clearly the responsibility of industry leaders to see that right solutions are

While I believe that some progress has been made toward improvement of the problems of pollution in America, I also feel that much, much more must be done. In fact, I feel that we must take a fresh look at the entire problem. Very few people have fully recognized an extremely important factor in the pollution problem. It is, above all, a mpetitive problem.

It comes as no surprise that we live in a competitive economy. Competition is the essence of our economy. To a company, the desire to compete is akin to the will to survive in individual human beings. As a nation, we have encouraged competition, and upon this principle we have built the greatest industrial force in existence. But we must not, as a nation, fail to recognize the fact that certain vital rights must not sacrificed to retain the competitive tegrity of our economy.

The past gives many examples of how ndustry must on occasion, when the public interest is at stake modify the aatural competitive fabric. It cost a lot of money and decades of squabbling to ure that the best safety equipment would be installed in our plants, on our trains, and elsewhere. Industry gradualy accepted the fact that safety had to looked on as a cost of doing business. The problem was ultimately solved, but it could have been solved better and much faster with a truly cooperative It is frightening to see how the com-petitive structure of our economy has played the devil with pollution. There are now many communities in the nation which scarcely try to disguise the fact that they will wink at pollution violations, that they will require little or no expenditure for this non-produc-

Some companies have been extremely slow o install even minimum controls. Not because they like pollutingassure you they don't-but because the cost is so great that it could impair or destroy their ability to compete, to survive. A final part of this dilemma is that our anti-pollution technology has not yet caught up with our processing technology. Much more effort has to be exerted to find adequate ways to pre-tive equipment in order to attract new

I don't for one second want my words to be misunderstood. I do not want to see our competitive economy weakened It is one of our great strengths. What I do want to see is a superstructureone built from cooperation, leadership, foresight and intelligent legislationthat will make it possible for American business to remain competitive, yet operate within the strictest standards of the public interest.

Let's face a few unpleasant facts. The cost of correcting the problem in industry as well as in municipalities is so staggering as to take your breath away. It is so high that many people have understandably, simply shrugged their shoulders and turned away. But that is not getting problems solved. We are a nation of infinite resources. I for one cannot believe that our minds are inadequate to the task. While I am not an expert either in pollution control or in government affairs, some possibilities seem so prom-

Ising to me that I would like to present them as one man's proposal for solving the problem of pollution in America. First, we must look to industrialists for leadership. If they do not provide it they must face the inevitable fact that the vacuum will be filled by othersby government agencies or by an outraged public. The result would be unfortunate. I have little doubt that unrealistic measures would be proposed and that compliance would be difficult to obtain. It could happen, however. Second, we must, as a nation and a individual industries, be willing to pay the cost. The major share should obvi ously be paid by industry, but I am entirely in favor of tax incentives and other measures of government encouragement and support. Third, we must form a cooperative attack. No more conferences where industry people are excluded. No more closed-door industry meetings where the possibilities of cooperative effort are overlooked. Let's all get in it together, and then I know we can solve

Fourth, we must recognize that it will take time. As I said, I believe the public will be patient if tangible progress is being made every year, every month, every day. As matters stand now, few organizations have complete plans for and certainly in municipalities where adequate sewage aystems are so expensive to construct, the plans will have to be over a 10 or 15 years span. In some cases, it may even be necessary to phase out facilities that should never have been located in an area where waste disposal is expensive or impossible. In many industries, plans for twothree- or five-year corrections can be developed within a reasonable annual cost. The important thing is that serious plans must be developed. Fifth, a share of the cost must be borne by local, state and Federal governments. We have already established the patterns. We simply need to amplify methods that have already been proved out in other areas and apply them to the pollution problem. I have some specific recommendations: -Many of you know about the 7% investment credit. This was a tax benefit established by the Federal Government to encourage industry spending for capital improvement. Some economists feel it helped ward off a recession. An investment credit of a larger order, perhaps 20% or more, should be allowed on all anti-pollution equipment. This would not cost the government anything out-of-pocket., it would simply reduce tax collections by a small portion of the amount spent for anti-pollution equipment. I happen to believe that it would not only not cost the government money out-of-pocket, but that it would spur spending to such a degree that new tax revenues would more than

-Accelerated depreciation for such equipment. This is a fairly technical matter, but it would also spur spending without costing a cent in tax revenue over a period of years.

-Exemption of anti-pollution equipment from the property tax duplicate. Ohlo has been foresighted enough to provide this benefit for water pollution equipment: I feel all states should provide it for both water and air pollution equipment. It does not make products; on the contrary, it adds to costs. Clearly, anti-pollution equipment is in the public interest, not in the selfish interest of the manufacturer. This should be

-Stepped-up research. Private industry as well as government agencies need only to exert a fraction of the effort being used in the man-on-the-moon program and we will achieve, I feel sure. stunning results.

I can assure you that if these measures were adopted that we would see a vast increase in spending for pollution control on the part of industry. Hand in hand with such a program we would have to have uniform strict legislation—the same, basically, from state to state, from city to city. It would be patently unfair to encourage the "black market" polluter, be it a city or a company. Only in this way could we assure that the conscientious company would not be sorely penalized in an effort to be a good corporate citizen. -W. G. Rep. Harris May Return To House After Farewells

WASHINGTON (AP) - Col- did not receive a majority of the es of Rep. Oren Harris votes, joined in farewell sulogies to a departing member before Congress adjourned in October. Cal expert said. "We don't know that was considered a farewell address.

But Harris now plans to be in his seat when the House reconvenes Jan. 10.

"About 15 people already have indicated that they would like to run," an Arkansas political expert said. "We don't know who would win in a race like that. A Republican, or a Negro, could come out on top if the Democrats split their majority of votes among a dozen or more candidates."

The reason: President Johnson, who nominated the Arkansas Democrat in July to be a governed the formal commission although the Senate confirmed the nomination in August. And Harris doesn't plan to give up his House seat until his new judicial possible in the regular election next November.

Day dawns, you may not see any ships, but you need not be disappointed. This year you will be able to see and hear the Round Table Singers perform a televised program of Christguest on Channel 3's Frank Atwood Show, Round Table will offer you a chance to brighten miliar carols and novel holiday melodies. Beginning at 12:30 p.m., the program will offer hirty minutes of musical festivity and enjoyment. Highlighting the program will be selections from the opera "Amahl and the Night Visitors," and a musical arrangement of "T'was the Night Before Christmas." The traditional favorite "Jingle Bella" will be done up in a new style characterized by a foreign flair, while "Ave Maria" and the folk song "Child of God" will deliver the religious message of the Christmas season. In strumental accompaniment will also lend an impressive note to the program. Adding to the enjoyment of
