Cape Cod with his wife, Mrs. Lucille Sloan Smith. He was a pupil at the Ninth District School at the time of the fire, said to be "the most pectacular and destructive fire in Manchester's history." From his own account of the happening, published in Oct. 1963 on the 50th anniversary of the disaster, he said "I had been on an errand in another part of the building and while returning to my room I passed the library, which was really just a storage room for books. I saw flames in the room in back of the desk. I ran to my room and told my teacher. The alarm sounded soon after. We were all told to go home, and did, and I never saw the school burn down." A total of 1,000 children and teachers walked unharmed from the huge old wooden structure which stood on the site of what Walter Kita and John Kita is now known as Educational both of Rockville, Joseph Kita Square. cuss the pros and cons of another -The President's answer was this: "No, Ray (Sherer of N.B.C.) I don't think that I would like to discuss our strategy, the pros and cons. I would observe this, that we have had two pauses. We had, about the same people and the same atmosphere for your trip. Could you dis-sources suggested the second pause. "They asked for 12 days and then 20 and then went 37 days that our boys sat there and watched the enemy. He didn't pause. He kept up his bombing. He threw his hand grenades. He lobbed his mortars into our troop encampments and killed our Marines and our airmen and our Army soldiers, and I would be very interested at this moment in a that it would be reciprocated. And the

"I don't quite understand, though, why you want me to have our Marines hands behind their back while the other people don't pause and continue to shoot at them. After all, those are our men, and if they will pause, and the aggressor will pause, we'll pause immediately. If they will withdraw, we will withdraw immediately.

"We will lay out a schedule on the table tomorrow, a schedule to move out of South Vietnam, to come home, to leave no troops in that area, to give up our bases, provided they will lay on the table their schedule for withdrawal and their schedule to get their people to quit the killing and the murdering that's

'Now, if it develops that there's any hope that would flow from another pause, we always keep an open mind. We will make additional sacrifices if we need to, but I see nothing on the horizon at this moment that would justify my asking all three or four hundred thousand Americans to stand there with their hands in their pockets because someone here suggested they pause unless their enemy would pause." Thus President Johnson, in typical vein about Vietnam. He is quite right, obviously, in his expectation that all Americans would join with him in rejecting the piteous and ailly spectacle of "three or four hundred thousand Americans" standing "there with their hands in their pockets" while the enemy still "kept up his But he is totally wrong, of course, in implying that anybody has ever suggested any such situation. And no one would ever guess, from the language he uses, that he is equating the continuously heavy bombing operations against North Vietnam with the occasional foray of guerrillas in South Vietnam with a hand grenade, a plastic bomb, or a mortar shell. No responsible critic of the President's conduct of the war in Vietnam has ever demanded that "our Marines and our airmen pause and put their hands behind their back while the other people don't pause and continue to shoot at them." No responsible critic of the war has ever suggested, either, that the United States give up and pull out and Criticism has maintained that the American effort, to fulfill our own honorable policies and at the same time incur minimal sacrifice of life on all sides, should properly be directed toward containing rather than toward escalating and expanding the war. It is, we think, President Johnson's onfession of his weakness in his own position that he feels required, always, to move his critics over into positions they themselves have never taken before he undertakes to answer them. It is not a technique of policy discussion which adds to public confidence in the quality of his leadership, or to hope that a same peace will ever be given a real urselves some series of tests-taken at a very early age, or even in pre-natal stage-which, fed into the properly programmed set of computers, will outline a forthcoming life for us with such accuracy and detail there will be little point in having the holder of that life go through the routine of living it out. We may even, eventually, carry the predictive research analysis forward before the pre-natal stage, so that prospective parents can have the whole story of the life of offspring before them when they decide whether or not b For the present, however, we are merely progressing toward such a state -ticking off the mile posts, one by one, as some new triumph in research and analysis is achieved.

There has now been devised, for instance, a system of pre-school testing of children which can designate beforehand, instead of merely analyzing afterwards, those children who are going to be failures in school. As a result of these new tests, it will soon be possible to segregate the failures before instead of after they have become failures, give them premedial rather than remedial treatment, and thus save time and also make things more pleasant all around, since there will no longer be any failures in school. Even as we salute this great prospective advance, however, we find ourselves drawn toward one of those incidentals which are often more fascinating than great progress.

The same people who have designed the tests which may enable children to go through school failure-proof turned ip, in the course of their experimentation, the incidental finding that pure intelligence tests and I.Q. quotients have relatively little direct relationship to reading and writing success or failure. Specifically, the experts have concluded that there is "no correlation whatsoever between intelligence and

That's something we keep trying t tell the younger generation. "You don't have to be intelligent," we keep telling them, "in order to spell."

Happens In Baseball, Too

We overheard one of our area's good weathermen complaining, the other day; over the fact that the public does not seem to appreciate the realistic nature of odds. If the weatherman predicts nine out of ten chances that it will rain, that leaves one chance in ten that it will be fair. If the odds mean anything, some nine out of ten rain day has to prove to be fair, sooner or later.

It's the same way with the odds on such a thing are a million to one. Accordingly, we take that for an assurance of practical impossibility. But if the odds are really a million to one, the one time that makes up the other part of the equation has to happen some time, early or late. And that it has already happened, quite early in the game, was what

American space engineers reported over at the International Astronautical Congress held in Madrid the other day. Two Navy communications satellites, supposed to be in a 400 mile high orbit, but also supposed to be at least 100 miles apart, somehow managed a rendezvous of their own, locked antennae gently, and then separated again, no

From such occasional fair days in oul, and needle finding needle in celestial stack, one can predicate the one inclusive conclusive prognostication, which is that even the impossible always happens at least once.

Howe's Ordeal

Being U.S. commissioner of educaion, and hence responsible for carrying federal school desegregation policies, Harold Howe 2nd was subjected to a public whipping by Southern congressmen who regard any desegregation at

Howe caught it front and rear. While he was being acidly questioned by the vrong House committee (rules instead of judiciary), he was being vilified on House floor by L. Mendel Rivers,

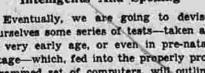

Rivers is not to be confused with Old Man River, which, as the song tells us, must know somethin' but don't say nothin'. With Rivers, it seems to work He said plenty about Howe, calling him an ignorant misfit and idiot who talks like a Communist and acts like a commissar of education. were strictly an outlet for the pique of Southern congressmen. When Howe disarmed his inquisitors with straightforward answers and documentary evidence, in the form of departmental guidelines, to refute accusations of zealotry, the lawgivers lost interest and folded the hearings. With that foolishness out of the way the judiciary committee promises to do the job right. Chairman Emanuel Celler says the committee will consider the operation of federal civil rights laws and policies, including school desegregation, in "an atmosphere of quiet deliberation and calm judgment"-with no emotional outbursts."

That's as it should be. It's disgrace ful that a man of Howe's stature had to put up with Rivers' abuse and the hostile questions of a pointless investigation by the wrong committee. Howe will have to consider that ordeal as part of his education-primitive to be sure, but not unusual in the underdeveloped areas of congressional be-havior.—WORLD JOURNAL TRIBUNE

Asking Life's Basic Questices 5. When Should I Start? All life is involvement and risk. To choose a course of action that would avoid all risk and danger is a denial of the purpose of our existence. Therefore, to be effectively involved in life is to accept risks, to take a stand and to commit ourselves

There is also risk and danger n rejecting God. Ezekiel stressed the grave responsibility of this necessary when he said: "Son of Man, 1 have made thee a Watchman unto the House of Israel, when I say unto the wicked thou shalt surely die, and thou givest him not warning to save his life." It is never too early to begin, nor too late to stop thinking about life's basic questions. The present struggle for civil rights; which are, after all, God-given rights, shows the need for legal coercion to guarantee these rights to people. But, in an ultimate sense, human rights are not made human by laws; they are made human by people accepting the person of another big mattress

Discard all your old ideas about luxurious sleep. There has never been anything like King Size bedding, nor a value like this! With over 50% more space than a regular double bed, a King Size Outfit allows you to sprawl and turn to your sleep's content without disturbing your mate. Where an ordinary double bed is 54 inches wide (allowing each sleeper the width of a baby's crib), a King Size is 78 inches wide and 80 inches. long. Plenty long for those tall fellows you girls are marrying nowadays! Holman-Baker designed this bedding with innerspring units that hold you in an orthopedically correct position. No deep sags where your body is heaviest. All the fine cotton felt used is quilted to the handsome ticking. You get two boxsprings (we couldn't get a 78x80-inch boxspring into your home!) and one big expanse of innerspring matress luxury! Come in and a try King Size 92nd Anniversary Bedding for size.

We're "moving ahead" so fast that our state colleges can accommodate only one-third of their applicants!

The Dempsey Administration is flunking in education. This year more than 24,500 students applied to our state university and colleges. We had room for less than 8,000! Too many Connecticut kids are being denied the higher education they need to compete for better job opportunities. Will anyone in your family be left out?

Blob of Clay Yields Bold Creation

Tom Farr, '67, is shown working with a pot-ter's wheel in Mrs. Kelson's art class. The entire process of making a bowl or pot is called, "throw-ing a pot." The first picture shows Tom throwing the clay, making sure it is centered on the wheel. In the second, the process of raising the clay is exhibited. While the potter's wheel turns, the clay naturally rises into the shape of a cone, as the clay rises one must press the clay down again into a mound and repeat this process to gain more complete control of the clay. The process of "knuckling up" is displayed in the third picture. This involves indenting the center of the clay mound and beginning to hollow it out until a low cylinder is formed. Then, the potter must slowly begin to raise and thin out the walls of the pot

In the final picture Tom puts the finishing touches on the bowl using a triangular shaped blade on the end of a stick. The finishing process, which will produce an attractive piece, involves removing all bits of loose clay from inside the bowl, and smoothing both the inside and outside

How did our serviceman earn all these gold stars?

KEEPING HEATING COSTS DOWN

We have our own servicemen. Not everyone loes. Our men are interested in making your iurnace perform at its highest efficiency and lowest cost because then you'll keep buying oil from us. Remember, three out of four furnaces waste fuel. Thanks to Mobil Technical Research our men have the latest facts on how to make your furnace the one-in-four that keeps heating costs at a minimum. There's a big difference in distributors. Let one of our servicemen earn another gold star by showing you how big that difference can be.
