TO WASH CRINA SILK.

In these days, when wash silks are n common use, a few words in regard to washing them may be of interest. As silk is an animal fiber, like wool, it cannot be treated in the same way as cotton, which can be subjected to waters of all temperatures without injury. Silk should be washed as rapidly as possible. Examine the articles to be washed, and if there are any parts especially soiled, clean with with a flannel cloth. Then prepare a soapsuds of lukewarm water, and plunge the garments in it, sousing them up and down, and rubbing them thoroughly in this suds. Rinse them into water a little cooler, and then into a third water still a little cooler, and so on until the final rinsing water is perfectly cold. Do-not blue them. Sixty Mil of Locusts.

'The African Steamship Company's steamer Winnebah has had a most unusual experience when steaming be tween the latitudes of Cape Verd and St. Louis, Senegal. For sixty miles the vessel steamed through locusts, which were so thickly packed to tenstone and olive oil thinned with oil gether on top of the water that they completely covered the surface for miles around: indeed, they appeared to be lying on the sea as far as the eye doubt, been blown from the Morocco coast into the sea. They resembled gigantic grasshoppers, and one which was secured was five inches in length. Of course, all the locusts had been drowned, but those on board the Winnebah did not see any on the

There is in our English language a small conjunction which, I propose, by God's help, to haul out of its present insignificancy and set upon the throne where it belongs, and set upon the throne where it belongs, and that is the conjunction "if." Though made of only two letters, it is the pivot on which everything turns. All time and all eternity are at its disposal. We slur it in our utterance, we ignore it in our appreciation, and none of us recognize it as the most tremendous word in all the vocabulary outside of the werbal inspiration of the Scriptures and adopt the idea that they were all generally supervised by the Lord. Second, "If." Why, that word we take as a tramp
