When He Is Gone. When he is gone, how dark the night! Nor does the day seem very bright, When he is gone. The birds do not pause on the wing And 'round the old porch doorway eling, Their sweetest songs of joy to sing, When he is gone.

The roses do not seem as sweet, Somehow, as when we used to meet But he is gone. At evening as I sit and gaze Into the heavens with stars ablaze I only think of other days, Now he is gone.

The world at large seems far less gay, The kitten, even, will not play, When he is gone, Within my heart there is no song. But saddest thoughts the hours prolong Which seem to me as cent'ries long,

When he is gone. I wonder if he thinks of me Today, wherever he may be, For he is gone. I wonder shall I ope my eyes Some morning, and with glad surprise Tell him how soon my poor heart dies,

When he is gone? -Thomas F. Porter, in Boston Globe.

Subject: "Autumn Thoughts." TEXT: "The stork in the heaven knoweth her appointed time, and the turtle, and the erane, and the swallow observe the time of their coming, but my people know not the judgment of the Lord." -Jeremiah viti., 7. When God would set fast a beautiful thought. He plants it in a tree. When He would put it affoat, He fashions it into a fish. When He would have it glide the air, He molds it into a bird. My text speaks of tour strong affection that it is allowed familiarly o come in Holland and Germany and build fis nest over the doorway: ditioned turtledove, mingling in color white and black and brown and ashen and hestnut; the crane, with voice like the dang of a trumpet ; the swallow, swift as a dert abot out of the how of heaven, falling parted by the prophet twenty-five centuries ago, yet flying on through the ages, with susing truth under glossy wing and in the been in this very season of the year-autumn and the prophet out of doors, thinking of the impenstence of the people of his day, Now, you know it is no easy thing for one with ordinary delicacy of eve-sight to look

d storks and turtledoves and cranes and wallows drawn out in long lines for flight onthward. As is their habit, the cranes had arranged themselves in two lines roo ag an angle, a wedge splitting the air with ild velocity, the old crane, with comman call, bidding them onward while s towns, and the cities, and the ontinents slid under them. The cophet, almost blinded from looking into dazziing heavens, stoops down and begins to think how much superior the birds ere in sagacity about their safety than men re about theirs, and he puts his hand upon he pen and begins to write, "The stork in the heaven knoweth his appointed times, and the turtle, and the crane, and the swallow berrye the time of their coming, but my seeple know not the judgment of the Lord clump of trees at the corner of the field, you could see a convention of birds, noisy as the American Congress the last night before dicurnment or as the English Parliament then some unfortunate member proposes more economy in the Queen's household. convention of birds all talking at once, moving and passing resolutions on the sub set of migration, some proposing to go tomorrow, some moving that they go to-day soon, for they have marching orders
