How to the singer comes the song?

Or the violet perfumed breeze;

At times of joy, alone; A wordless tone Caught from the crystal gleam of ice-boun

Or the salt smell of seas In sublight weltering many Or the keen memory of a lovelit smile.

Thus to the singer comes the song : Gazing at crimson skies Where burns and dies

One day's wide hearth the calm celestia The poet with a wild desire Strikes the impassioned lyre, Takes into tuned sound the flaming sight, And ushers with new song the ancient night.

How to the singer comes the song? Bowed down by ill and sorrow On every morrow, The unworded pain breaks forth in heavenly singing:

Not all too late sharp solace bringing To broken spirits winging Through mortal anguish to the unknown A lyric balm for every wounded breast.

How to the singer comes the song? How to the summer fields Come flowers? How yields Darkness to the happy morn? How doth the Bring stars? Oh; how do love and light
