Glenwood Ranges

Have been tried, and tried again and have never been found wanting. You will find plenty of them among your neighbors. Ask their opinion of them. They will tell you they are the best they ever used.

GLENWOOD PARLOR HEATERS.

They cannot be made any better and the manufacturers would not do anything to lower their standard or value, as they take their position among the best in the land. They cannot be excelled in Beauty, Construction or Operation.

I have also those Handsomely Ornamented, Nickel Trimmed, Acorn Parlor Stoves.

If you are thinking of having your house heated, call and let me tell you something about what I have done, right here in this town, with the Glenwood Hot Air Furnaces.

TOWN NEWS.

F. A. Server and bride returned from their honeymoon last Monday and a number of their young friends gave them a surprise party at the residence of the bride's parents, Carl and Mrs. Gustafson, on Pine street near Park that same evening. Music, singing, games and a jolly good time followed.

CHARLES I. BALCH, P. M.

John McCaffrey, aged 29 years, died at his home on Woodland street last Monday morning after a lingering illness with consumption. His funeral was held at his late home on Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. E. P. Phelan officiating. Burial was at the Center cemetery. He leaves a mother and four sisters.

Last Sunday being the Harvest Festival concert which was to have been given in the North M E church was postponed one week. The Harvest festival was also postponed one week. These suppers have become famous, and no doubt a large number will be on hand the first to have a feast of the toothsome delicacies offered by the society.

About a year and a half ago Samuel E. Andrews came to town and opened a fruit and confectionery and restaurant in the Robertson building at 29 North Main street, conducting it under the name of E. M. Andrews, which was his wife's name. For a week past his creditors have been pressing him for the settlement and on Monday they were compelled to make an assignment, her brother-in-law, J. J. Trebert of West Hartford being named as trustee. A hearing will be had before Judge Olin R. Wood tomorrow at 10 o'clock upon the acceptance of a trustee.

In his card, which appears in another column, Cornelius Shaw gives notice that he is prepared to do all manner of work in the way of painting, decorating, paper hanging, sign writing, and the like and will be pleased to have a share of the public patronage. He has excellent workmen with him who are thoroughly competent to execute the finest kind of work in the decorator's art. He also sells wall papers of all kinds, moldings and other decorations at his residence, 78 Pine street.

FUN AT THE ARMOY.
"Niobe," the new fantastic comedy by Harry and Edward Paulson, authors of that most popular comic opera, "Ernie" will be seen at the Armoey, Friday evening, Oct. 25.

The piece has hit the public fancy and is nearly adjusted to the current of popular taste, which has rebounded from the extravagant variety, but is now known as Musical Farce Comedy into the direction of farcical plays of the Pink Domino order.

Miss Minerva Dorr, who assumes the title role, will be supported by Frank Norcross and a company of carefully selected comedians. Miss Dorr is the same lady who so successfully played "Jane" last season and received the highest praise for her comedy work wherever she appeared.

APPLES AND APPLE BLOSSOMS.
Captain A. B. Keeney gathered five Rhode Island Greenings, weighing four pounds from a single bush last Monday and also gathered a bunch of apple blossoms in full bloom from the same branch, the same day. It seemed that the recent frosts did not injure the pretty and unseasonable visitors.

A COPIOUS RAIN.
The best rain storm of the year set in last Saturday afternoon and continued through the night and all day Sunday and into Sunday night, almost without intermission. It was a steady but not a violent rain and sank well into the ground. It was much needed. About four inches of rain fell.

HENRY-TAYLOR.
William S. Henry, superintendent of the Glastonbury Knitting Company's mill at Manchester Green and Mrs. Gertrude Taylor of this place, were married in Hartford last Wednesday evening by Rev. F. W. Parkins, of the church of the Redeemer.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY.
Next Sunday will be observed as a special day of intercession for the Sunday school in all the Episcopal churches in the United States and Great Britain and at 8 a. m. Rev. J. A. Biddle will hold a special communion service for the Sunday school teachers, and preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion at the regular service.

The archdeaconry of Hartford offered a handsome banner this year to the Sunday school that displayed the best work in the catechism and it was won by the young people of St. Mary's church. This banner will be displayed for the first time next Sunday.
The Sunday school of St. Mary's is naturally quite happy to have the distinction of being the first to win the banner.

Fifty-one per cent of the foreigners in England live in London.

Great Britain is going to increase the pay of its Indian troops, in the hope of attracting a better class of men into the army.

It has been estimated that one million dollars to deep the America's cup on this side of the ocean in the last forty years.

They are now saying that Mexico may lead a band to the Cuban insurgents. Smallarity of race and language would indicate, the New Orleans Pleasants think, that Cuba would do better with Mexico than with the United States.

A bicyclist in Vienna, Austria, roared after a runaway horse, overtaking it easily. The horse seemed surprised at the New York man's performance, and his pace a moment and was at once seized and conquered by the intrepid man in knickerbockers.

If women continue to increase their activity and influence in English politics, the New York Mail suggests, it may be necessary before long to supplement the House of Lords with a House of Ladies, to prevent the tight little island from tipping up.

Says the Springfield (Mass.) Republican: Recently published vital statistics of all the New England States for 1892 show that almost exactly as many people live in cities of 10,000 or more population in this section as in the villages and rural districts, the urban population being 2,441,410 and the rural 2,442,987. Making the vital statistics for these two groups it is found that the city population has a marriage rate of 20.6 against 16.4 for the country; a birth rate of 29.7 against 20 for the country, though the real difference is not so great, there being a deficiency in the birth registration in Maine and New Hampshire, while the cities have an average death rate of 21, against 18.7 for the country.

It appears that the problem of color photography has at last been satisfactorily solved. At any rate, a process patented in England gives results which an American has considered good enough to justify him in paying a round sum for it. Spencer C. Schuyler, of New York, has bought the American rights for the process from Professor John J.oly, of Dublin. The consideration is $30,000. Professor Joly's discovery involves the color principle known as composite heliography. It includes the use of a transparent screen bearing a pattern in dyes or pigments having different selective light absorption properties. The screen is closely related with lines in several tints, so that the composite color sensations desired are produced by the transmission through it of light.

It is not so many years ago, within the memory of many living persons, that London, like too many of the cities of this country, was absolutely treeless. There was nothing to be seen anywhere but brick and stone. Of late years a great deal of care has been taken to plant trees, experts being employed expressly for the purpose. Not long ago the city council ordered a census taken of the number of trees in the city, and they were figured up to the number of 14,700. These are the trees growing in the public streets alone, and do not include the trees of the parks. This shows progress in the right direction, and it is a direction, too, in which New Orleans, in the opinion of the Pleasants, might well move. Every borough in the city ought to be shaded by a row of Pleasants trees.

It is believed that a continent 8,000,000 square miles in extent and peopled with wondrous beings surrounds the South Pole, and scientists are unnecessarily sollicitous in exploring this vast and unexplored region. They consider these appointments to be of the spoils of office, and give them to some of men who help them in their campaigns. The country is entitled to the best class of young men in its military and naval academies, and it would be a good idea to provide by law for competitive examinations in the congressional districts. It seems to be impossible to obtain the full quota at Annapolis under the present system. Instead of 350 cadets, including the two classes at sea, the full battalion of 450 men is provided for, and the flying whale and sea serpents and the wonderful man-eating canaries which are sought to abound in that region.

Pennsylvania produces 100,000,000 tons of coal every year—more than half the output of the entire country.

A Washington correspondent thinks that rich people seek a home in that city, because their property will be protected the guns of the government.

Australian teachers must have varied accomplishments. In a Sydney paper recently appeared: "Wanted, a man able to teach French and the piano, and to look after a stud bull."

A novel way of illustrating a novel is shown in Scribner's. A certain story having been written persons were selected to take the parts of the characters, and these were photographed in the text.

A late statistician asserts that the wealth of the United States averages at least $1,000 to one inhabitant. "This average business may be all right," remarks the New Orleans Pleasants, "but it doesn't help some of us to pay our debts."

Statistics from the United States railway service show that one passenger is killed for every 2,900,000 passengers carried, or every 443,103,228 miles traveled. One is injured for every 4,709,771 miles traveled, or one out of every 204,248 passengers carried.

The Sultan of Turkey opposes electricity, it is said, chiefly because it "disrupts some connection between the dynamo and dynamite." Neither is Queen Victoria a friend of electricity. She will not even suffer electric lights in her apartments. But her opposition is prompted by the desire to prevent as much as possible the use of appliances which are labor-saving, directly or indirectly.

Nature's prodigality in the Great Banana Belt is a matter of common knowledge, and every one knows how year after year the crops increase in variety, quality and quantity. A few weeks ago there was a hail storm at Brainerd, Minn., and hailstones "as large as baseballs" fell in great profusion. "Human life would have been a sacrifice before them, for they were solid ice," but there was any human life outside the cyclone cellar "while the bombardment lasted."

One of the most common forms of vandalism now rampant is that which assumes sensational advertisements in the face of nature, remarks the New York Mail. Every state should have a statute to protect scenery from the advertising agent.

The Railway Age says that six tons of steel rails are annually required for renewals per mile of road, which on the United States would amount to 1,080,000 tons. "Adding to this estimate," says the Age, "which is probably within bounds—notwithstanding the increase in mileage—of the requirements for some thousands of miles of new construction yearly, at the low average of one hundred tons to the mile, it is evident that the rail mills will continue to find occupation."

One hundred and seven young men were prepared for examinations at Annapolis recently, and only 45 were admitted. This large percentage failure is due partly to the fact that a very high standard of excellence is maintained at the Naval Academy, but the method of appointment has much to do with it. While many congressmen have adopted the sensible and just competitive examinations for nomination to West Point and Annapolis, many others still practice favoritism in the bestowal of these honors. They consider these appointments to be of the spoils of office, and give them to some of men who help them in their campaigns. The country is entitled to the best class of young men in its military and naval academies, and it would be a good idea to provide by law for competitive examinations in the congressional districts. It seems to be impossible to obtain the full quota at Annapolis under the present system. Instead of 350 cadets, including the two classes at sea, the full battalion of 450 men is provided for, and the flying whale and sea serpents and the wonderful man-eating canaries which are sought to abound in that region.

Harvest Song.
Now the summer days are over,
And the bees have left the clover,
And the wheat is in its bin,
Thankfulness may well begin.
For the summer, fair and pleasant,
For the good gifts of the present
Time, and happiness therein.

Where the lake still and deep is,
Still give forth their creamy glow,
There the rovers trially row,
Others stroll along the shore.
For the summer fall is now,
And this day we work they know.

To the orchard trees are bending
Where the apple blossoms are bending
With their yellow fruit and red;
In the apple-tree's deep shade,
Pick the golden fair and blue;
But her lover, dear to know,
He should have the pretty flower;
And at such a fairer show,
He shall have the maiden too.
—Joel Benton.

A CRUEL KINDNESS.
BY MR. M. L. BAYNE.
The town had grown up to them and almost crowded them into their front door, but they still lived on in the same old-fashioned methods of the past half-century, clinging to the chairs and tables that had when they were married, even retaining the little wicker chairs that had been Ann Maria's before she married a rich foreigner and changed to Anna Maria. The cradle she was rocked in when a baby, manufactured out of a barrel by her adoring father, and covered skillfully with rose-colored chintz, had been sent up to the attic, for it offended her fine sense of esthetics when she came home to visit. The rag carpet in the living room was the work of leisure hours and had been in service twenty odd years, and the old man himself used to say lovingly, while he regarded it with admiring eyes: "You'll never make another carpet like that, mother!" It was like the last painting of a great artist to him.

And now the old people had taken an outing that was to last a whole week, the result of a conspiracy in which Ann Maria was chief mover, aided and abetted by her sisters who were married and settled in the same town, and whom she was then visiting.

While the old couple were gone the conspirators possessed themselves of the key of the homestead, entered it stealthily and began what they considered a work of reform, which was also expected to be a delightful surprise to their interested mother.

"We'll get that dreary old piano out of the way first," said the former owner, who had one now that cost a thousand dollars, "and the old rag carpet; it gives me a chill to see it; and all those dreadful framed photographs and chromes—I have a few old paintings that I brought down with me, and I'll get them replaced; they are on purpose to replace them; and that red tablecloth—Sophie, do you remember when we used to learn our lessons on that flaming thing? It looks as awfully red as ever, doesn't it?"

"Yes," answered Sophie, with a slight sigh; "I wonder if we are as happy now as we were then, or if our conditions depend so much on surroundings—the furniture, for instance?"

"Let's look at the outside," said the girls, who were watching at their own windows, saw a glimmering light dancing like an ignis fatuus before the old house, and could discern the unmounted spectacles of their father and mother inspecting the outside of their home by candle light. It struck them as very funny.

Meanwhile the truth had revealed itself in part to the old people, and holding aloft the faring wax candle, the old man and woman looked at the furniture, from the carpet on the floor to the paintings on the walls. It was well the conspirators were not there to hear them. It might have given them a shock.

"Even the piany's gone," said Manly, wringing her hands, "the dear old piano where Ann Maria learned to play 'Hang up the Baby's Stocking'—she was 10 years old! I couldn't have believed it; and my his-miss carpet that I made with my own hands—and the red tablecloth, the cheerfulness thing—you could see it for a mile when the new was open and we were lighted up; and my pictures of the children taken every year of their lives—its worse than robbery. I don't doubt they meant well, but it's broke my heart!"

"They've left the clock," said Manly, "I'm thankful for that! I don't know what it seems like an old friend, and holding father's hand she stood long before the venerable timepiece, regarding it with loving eyes."

It was near daylight when the two old people had seen the last of their new possessions, and arranged them to their entire satisfaction. The fancy candle had burned down to a mound of green and yellow wax, and been replaced by a straight, uncompromisingly tall hollow-made, that shed a serene light on two old faces that looked very tired, but were a conscious expression of peace and triumph. And even in their dreams they smiled.

"The last finishing touches being accomplished, the sisters went to their respective homes, and at nightfall the two old folks walked into the domestic that had sheltered them for forty years—the deserted spot on earth to them—home!"

It had been planned by their knowledge children that they were to enter the house alone to intensify the surprise in store for them and enjoy each other's delight over the occasion without witnesses.

But they, not knowing this, felt with the sensitiveness of age a little hurt and sting closer together as they entered the dark and silent dwelling, every step of which was like hallowed ground to their tired feet.

"I most wonder the girls ain't left a light a barnin' for us; this time they forgot," said the old man as he stumbled over a chair.

"You know, father, Ann Maria's before she married a rich foreigner and changed to Anna Maria. The cradle she was rocked in when a baby, manufactured out of a barrel by her adoring father, and covered skillfully with rose-colored chintz, had been sent up to the attic, for it offended her fine sense of esthetics when she came home to visit. The rag carpet in the living room was the work of leisure hours and had been in service twenty odd years, and the old man himself used to say lovingly, while he regarded it with admiring eyes: "You'll never make another carpet like that, mother!" It was like the last painting of a great artist to him.

Because I Love You.
Because I love you,
I cannot sorrow do I bear,
Yet joyfully those sorrows meet,
And with my heart I hold them sweet—
Because I love you dear!
Because I love you,
No weeping comes upon me,
But crowns of roses thorns to me,
Are soft as rosiest wreath could be—
Because I love you, dear!
Because I love you,
I tread the darkness here,
But sweet flowers blossom in the snow
And loveliest lights in darkness glow,
Because I love you, dear!
—FRANK L. STANTON.

HUMOROUS.
Jazlin—"Whose make is your watch?"
Brazil—"The fellow who sold it to me, I guess. He made about $20 on the transaction."

Bixby—"What idiots girls are when they imitate me!" Marie (flattered)—
"Do you think so? That proves how excellent the imitation is!"

"This famous 'new woman' still charms me,"
She's 'advanced' in ideas,
But never in years.

"They must be having electrical shocks at home," said Mrs. Harley, reading a letter from her sister, "Just says they are having shocking weather."

Yeast—"Never saw such a man as Jumpy. He seems to get a new trunk every month. Crimmon-break—Yes; he changes his boarding place every thirty days."

They set out on a bicycle built for two. Also, one of the year was sad, but true—On a salary built for one.

"Is that performer familiar with your music?" she asked at the concert.
"He must be," replied the composer, who was writing; "he takes such liberties with it."

Mrs. Brown—"You really must join our sewing circle."
"My dear sister—My dear, I haven't time to spare. I have to do much mending for the children."

Once more upon the play goes she, serenely conscious that the man behind her cannot see.
A maid writes: "Can you tell me how to change the color of my hair, which all the young men tell me is red?" Certainly we can. Get rich; they will then call it golden or amber.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE.
A young housekeeper, just back from England, says she has added several new dishes to her menu, and one of the most distinctive English is the vegetable marrow.

STUFFED CABBAGE.
An excellent way in which to cook a cabbage is to stuff it. Cut out the heart stem and the root of a medium-sized head and remove the outer green leaves. Plunge the head into an abundance of boiling water for ten minutes and then take it up very carefully so as not to break it. Let it cool. Prepare a forced meat, using a pound of sausage meat with a quarter of a pound of lean veal, ground and pounded to a paste. Stuff the inside of the cabbage and tie it up securely. Put the cabbage into a braising kettle, with a small carrot, a small white onion and a cup of stock. Let the cabbage simmer in the oven for a couple of hours, well covered, for an hour, basting it occasionally. Serve it with a rich brown sauce.—New York World.

QUINCE JELLY.
Slice a half dozen large quinces. To the parings and cores add eight or ten fine tart apples, cut into small pieces without paring or coring. Boil these fragments in sufficient water until they are very soft and the juice is thick and rich. Then pour into a thick jelly bag to drain. At the same time, in another kettle, boil three quinces having been covered with cold water and soaked till very soft. They are now drained and the juice added to that from the first kettle, while the pulp may be saved for marmalade. Having measured the juice, boil it rapidly for twenty minutes, then add each such fruit as rises to the surface, but refraining from stirring the mixture. Then set the kettle where it will just simmer, and for each quart of the syrup add a pound and a half of granulated sugar, which has previously been heated in the oven. Stir the contents of the kettle through a strainer, then let it boil up for one minute, and hallo into cold jelly glasses that have been dipped in cold water. These should stand in a cool place for a day or two before being sealed.
