A new bicycle chain of rawhide is attracting some attention. This chain is bound with steel plates on the side to prevent stretching, and it is said that it does not col-lect dust or need lubricating. It runs without noise and with less friction than a steel chain, and water will not injure it or cause rust. The material of the roller blocks is pighide, which looks and feels like box wood A new and simple device for puncturing tires was discovered on the Hudson Boulevard, Jersey City, N. J., lately. The police were notified, and the bicycle squad was instructed to look out for the offenders.

Bicycle screens are a recent device.
