SHEEPSKIN ROBES. I take three sheepskins (black ones), wash them thoroughly with soap, having soaked them over night to get the blood out of them, spread them out and sprinkle one-half to three-fourths of a pound of alum, well pulverized, on each one (a large buck with heavy pelt would require ne pound alum). Then sprinkle two-thirds of a tinful of salt uniformon the alum, double skin over dong the back, putting flesh to flesh, and fitting one side to the other and oll up. Let them lie 24 hours. It s well to turn them upside down, so that the alum and salt may all dissolve. Hang them up to dry. This young lady has many charms of person and mind. She is the daughter of the Princess Liki-Liki, who was the sister of Liliuokafani and of the late King Kalakaua. The Princess Liki-Liki is dead, and her daughter is therefore the heir apparent to the throne at Honolulu which was broken up by the revolutionists a few years ago. Her father, Mr. Cleghorn, an Englishman, whose home is in the charming little island of Jersey, near England, was once a resident in the beautiful islands of the Pacific and loved and married Liki-Liki. Hence, the young Princess is not a full-blooded Kanaka, but she possesses enough of the color and features of that race to make her much more interesting than a more white Princess. William E. Mason, of Chicago, was nominated by acclamation for the United States Senate from Illinois to succeed John M. Palmer, at the joint Republican caucus at Springfield, all other candidates withdrawing when it became apparent that Mason would have a majority. The Democrats voted for ex-Governor Altgeld.

William E. Mason was born in Franklin-ville, Cattaraugus County, N. V., in 1850. In 1858 he removed with his parents to Iowa. He studied law in Des Moines, and removed to Chicago in 1872. He was elected to the State House of Representatives in 1879, and to the State Senate in 1881. He was elected to the Fiftieth Congress and re-elected to the Fifty-first Congress, and was defeated for the Fifty-second Congress by Alien C. Dur-Vest Be-Elected.
