Oh, can you answer, stranger, And tell the reason why The worthless pass through danger When the useful often die? Why yonder drunkard reeling Along the crowded street.

Devoid of hope or feeling. Peath's reaper cannot meet? Why is it, stranger, tell me. eath loves a shining mark, When he could just as well be extinguishing the spark That burns within some creatures Whose lives with evils teem, Engraved upon whose features The brand of Cain is seen?

Why does death seek the bowers Where choicest blossoms grow.

And pluck from thence the flowers

That do most beauty show? Is it that his dread portals More cheerful may appear? That we poor, trembling mortals passing may not fear?

WHY IS IT?

Why are young men taken,
The aged left behind?
Some weary and forsaken,
Some wretched, halt, and blind! Why should our young men perish Ere they have reached their prime Why those whom most we cherish To whom we most incline?
