A distinguished naturalist states that the hen cackles with unusual enthusiasm when she thinks she has laid an egg where it can't be found.

The editor of the Boston Herald has written an article for a magazine in which he says that "there are only eight thinking newspapers in America." We wonder where the other seven are.

Governor Pingree of Michigan says that he vetoed the curfew bill because it was paternal legislation. His idea is, in brief, that there is no reason why the state should act as a trustee officer for the children of its citizens.

By the provisions of a new Texas law, bond and investment companies doing business in the state must deposit with the state treasurer $5000 and ten per cent. of net premium receipts yearly until the amount to their credit shall reach to $100,000.

Venezuela has placed restrictions on hunting. The bird is much more after for its plumage, and like the egret of the United States, it is in danger of becoming extinct. Hunters in future, are to be licensed, and hunting with firearms is absolutely prohibited. No plumes can be exported without the license of the civil authorities.

The local branch of the Boston loan and trust company in Kansas City has received notice from its head office that hereafter loans may be taken on first-class properties in northeastern Kansas. This is said to be one of the first orders of the kind affecting Kansas property that has been given by a loan company in years.

The tomb of General Grant in New York city is now practically completed, there yet remains a few touches of ornamentation to be done. It is intended to place upon the cap of the pyramid top of the monument a colossal statue of peace. General Porter says that provision has been made for the erection of this statue, and that work upon it will soon begin.

The eager, panting aspirants for literary fame who are aching for an opportunity to astonish the world may find what they want in this advertisement from a recent issue of the London Daily News: "Writer wanted, who will write a history of California from the time of the discovery of gold to the reformation of 1810. Must be 400,000 words. Apply by letter only, to Elyastet, etc." As will be seen there is not only glory, but money in it. Just fancy what a gifted writer could do with £10 ($50), and as he might finish the work in less than a year his compensation would be at the rate of about a dollar a week.

Two hundred and three local authorities in Great Britain and Ireland own their own gas works. Of these 160 are in England and Wales, thirty-six in Scotland and seven in Ireland. Besides these, there are 437 private companies, of which two are in Scotland, nine in Ireland, and the rest in England and Wales. The total coal used in 11,987,446 tons. From this 121,421,752,691 cubic feet of gas is made, which 111,443,701,041 cubic feet was sold during the year ending March 26, 1896. There were at that time 23,857 miles of mains, supplying 2,629,771 consumers' premises and 526,888 public lamps.

One of the most important steps recently taken by the trustees and faculty of the state college of Pennsylvania, is the decision to establish several summer courses, for the purpose of making the laboratories and shops of the college available during a part of the summer vacation for the teachers of the state, and those who intend to become teachers, as well as those who wish to pursue special lines of research. A further purpose is to give courses that persons who are not quite fully prepared to enter college may have opportunity to take a six weeks' drill in the subjects in which they are deficient. These courses will not be confined to persons who propose to enter the state college, but will be open to students who expect to apply for admission to any college.

There are only about 1000 Germans in the whole of Mexico.

Chicago has a penny savings bank for school children, inaugurated by the Civic Federation.

The chemist of the agricultural department in Washington thinks that the oil made of sunflower seed, which he says is a perfect substitute for olive oil, is the coming salad oil.

Southern California has a population of about 320,000—comprising 64,000 families—and the railroad mileage is equal to one mile of road to about forty families. The population is increasing at the rate of from 16,000 to 20,000 families a year.

According to the government return just issued there are in Scotland 9237 agricultural holdings of one acre and over, 20,150 of from one to five acres, 33,921 of from five to fifty acres, 25,568 of above fifty acres and seventy-six of more than 1000 acres.

It will interest summer visitors to Maine to know that the fight between the guides and the law of that state is now after for its plumage, and like the egret of the United States, it is in danger of becoming extinct. Hunters in future, are to be licensed, and hunting with firearms is absolutely prohibited. No plumes can be exported without the license of the civil authorities.

"Within the last twenty-two years our southern iron product has increased ten per cent," declares the Atlanta Constitution, "while that of the north and east has increased less than 400 per cent. In 1880 the south produced only 3,700,000 tons of coal. Ten years later, however, the product of our mines reached 24,000,000 tons, and in 1896, 30,000,000 tons."

The school boards of Fredonia and Preston townships, in Plymouth county, Iowa, have arranged to build storm caves at each of the school-houses, and they have already advertised for bids. These storm caves are to be twelve feet long and six feet wide and six and a half feet deep. They will be lined with cement, have brick arches and be proof against rats and snakes, as well as cyclones. It is doubtless wise to provide places of refuge in such localities, but there is something gruesome about the necessity of such annexes to school-houses.

Vaccination against typhoid fever seems to be an assured resource in the war on disease. Two professors connected with the Army Medical school at Netley, England, have elaborated a process of antityphoid vaccination. Cultures of the bacilli are used in the process. Observations were made upon a number of persons, mostly medical students, who were vaccinated. A medical journal says the vaccination can be practiced without risk, and their advocacy, also, can be easily controlled by examinations of the blood. Persons exposed to the risk of typhoid infection may secure immunity, through this process, if the present degree of success is maintained.

Barton F. Powell of Albany, Ga., a colored man thirty-two years old, is one of the most successful farmers in the state. Twelve years ago he had saved up $2000, with which he bought 500 acres of land. He went to work on it and cleared $2500 the first year. He has continued to add to his landed possessions, paying spot cash for every farm purchased, and is now the owner of 2100 acres of land, from which he markets 400 bales of cotton annually. Besides his success on the farm he has developed the country-store idea, and thus makes in thousands of dollars a year. He also owns a comfortable residence in Bainbridge. His profits last year were over $7000. He says that the question of social recognition doesn't trouble him so long as he can get financial recognition at the bank.

On a railroad siding four miles above Hollidaysburg, Penn., stand thirty-two Pullman palace cars, closely guarded day and night by watchmen whose only duty it is to see that no one interferes with the process of decay and despoliation which the elements have inaugurated. The cars are the property of the Pennsylvania railroad company, and represent an outlay of $400,000. These handsome coaches have been dragged through the slow and tortuous processes of litigation for over five years. Both the railroad and the Pullman company have claims on the cars, and until a final decision is rendered in the courts these magnificent vehicles of travel by rail are left to rot and decay. The cars were built to last for 15 or 16 years, and are now, blacked, black-eyed boys, whose expert I did not like. The plaster work was the best of a grinning Penn. I must have done for some time, for suddenly I saw the first sign of heaviness and oppression. The black

The House of the Ink Spot.

BY CHARLES W. FARR.

I was lying stretched at full length on the long sofa in the library, and I had been asleep. Even after I awoke, the sweet drowsiness of slumber was on me, and for some time with closed lids in that thoughtless, dreamless state between sleep and waking. Suddenly I became aware of a presence in the room and opened my eyes expecting to see my aunt. Instead I saw a flash of black before my eyes, and that I had seen so often now, which darted and disappeared while I was blinking my eyes to see what it all meant, but I was too late. The thing was gone, and I was left staring after it. "What is the thing that has just happened?" I asked myself. "I found the little maid watering the flowers down the paved court. I leaned over the railing, and in my palms, lazily watching her swab the dusty sole, her deft little hands glancing like copper whisks, the sun touched their wet brown fingers. "Do you believe in ghosts, Amelia?" I asked, warily.

"Oh, yes, mamelle," said the little maid in her pretty French, as she turned her scared, brown face up to look at me. "Don't you?" "Of course not," I answered, "but I'm thirsty, Amelia."

Then she flicked the water from her copper fingers and went away to mix me the cool drink of lemon and lime juice which no one could make so well. When the little maid was gone, Aunt Cilly poked her big white kerchiefed head from her kitchen door, nodded at me a moment and then came toiling up the steps.

"You been sleep in de library, an' you honey?" she said when she had waddled quite close to me. "Yes, I answered, wondering. "Das a mighty po' place to sleep, child," she said.

"Why, Aunt Cilly?" I asked. "Case his," she answered, laughingly, nodding her head back and forth toward Amelia, who was coming up the steps behind her. "I jes' tellin' ma'zelle she letter mek you git de feather duster and brush de dust off de bananas and de table, 'n' you sprinkle 'em, 'n' she said the old woman, as she waddled away.

"All right, Aunt Cilly," said the little maid, as she left me. I was left alone, and I was wondering what the old woman meant. I had told my aunt upon the first day of possession, that the house was not worth to be haunted. I have always wondered why my aunt selected it. It was, in many respects, the least promising of any that the agent showed us, yet to be sure it had a grandeur about it, a sort of stately, Creole grandeur, which was altogether charming to my eyes. The beheld New Orleans for the first time. But the house was plain and tall and straight and square; there were no gables and cranks about its appearance on the outside, though the interior was all that the most fanciful heart could wish. There was an open court with a rusty-throated fountain in the center, and a seragay, scaly palm that clambered against one of the brick pillars quite to the upper gallery; there were narrow corridors, winding stairways and sliding panels which let upon niches and closets which were empty enough in reality, but which, to my awakened fancy, became teeming with suggestions of ghosts and romances.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.

I am the sea. When I draw back, I draw you with me.
