There is a phenomenon near the northeast corner of the White House, which has attracted the attention of several people, notably the policemen who do duty on the grounds. It is a black elm tree, and stands on the side of the asphalted sidewalk which leads from the northeast gate to the White House. During the warm, clear days of the past few weeks it was noticed that the pavement under the tree was wet, as if it had been sprinkled. Investigation revealed that the water or whatever kind of fluid it is comes from the tree. It always falls in the dryest of weather, and keeps the pavement well sprinkled.

Various reasons have been given for the phenomenon, but so far none of a scientific nature. The humorists say that the tree is weeping in sympathy with the disappointed office seekers who stand under its sheltering boughs and look back at a wreck of ambitious hopes and blighted prosments - Washington Star.

The B. & O. and Two Other Railroads Make Important Changes.

The Baltimore & Ohio, the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Philadelphia & Reading railroad have completed arrangements for new ferry terminals in New York City. Commencing July 12 the ferry boats will leave the Jersey City station of the Jersey Central Railroad and will land passengers at the foot of Whitehall street, thus making direct connection under cover with all the Elevated Railroads, the Brooking ferries, the Broadway, Columbus and Ciub.

Wilbur F. Wakeman is Secretary of the Protective Tariff League. He was born in Illinois in 1857, and was graduated from the Northwestern University. His father was lawyer. Young Wakeman was a newspaper man in Chicago for a time. He then went to San Francisco, where he became manager of the Alta Californian. Later he was manager of a Kansas City paper. He came to New York in 1888 as Secretary of the Protective Tariff League and editor of the Republican Ciub. lyn ferries, the Broadway, Columbus and family near Tarpon Springs, Fla., when he He picked them up, but the mother catamount sprang on the buggy, seizing Mrs. Jenkins's dress. Jenkins struck the animal with a small club, and she secured a firm hold on his arm. He had his knife out by this time, and a furious fight began, the horse dashing madly along, the panther dragging back of the seat.

Mrs. Jenkins began striking the beast over the head with the club. It let go its hold on Jenkins, and pulled his wife half out of the vehicle. Jenkins fell out on top of the panther. They fought in the road, the animal drawing blood at every dig. Finally Jenkins cut its throat. He was badly clawed and bitten.
