The constant rains during the past two months have washed out the sidewalks to such an extent that the coarse gravel and pebbles are all left on the surface, and the consequent wear and tear on footwear is something unprecedented here.

Last mass will begin promptly at 10:30 a. m. in St. James' church next Sunday, as Rev. D. A. Haggerty intends to attend and assist at the dedication of the new parochial school of St. Patrick's church on Ann street, Hartford, Bishop Tierney will lead in the exercises. The dedicatory sermon will be preached by Rev. James H. O'Donnell of Waterbury.

The month of August 1897 has been on the whole very cool and wet, and it would not be at all surprising if the month of September gave us a good deal of dry and warm weather. Should that be the case, the chances are that the New England Railroad Company may give some more excursions to Boston and the beaches, as the one given by them last Saturday took out the largest crowd of the season from this place, as testing the popularity of these cheap outings.

Michael Maguire, our well known milkman and successful farmer, is visiting friends in New York City and getting in touch with the ways of the mighty metropolis. He has earned his money and shrewd business manager, and his many friends here hope he may find much enjoyment in his rambles in and about Greater New York, and the many attractive shore resorts that can be reached conveniently and inexpensively from the greatest American center of activity.

The Center church will unite with the South Methodist church in a union meeting at 7 o'clock next Sunday evening, which will take place of the regular monthly lecture by Rev. J. S. Wade, which Rev. Thomas Simms will preach a sermon entitled to Labor Day and Miss Frost will render music. As there will be no services in the Center church that evening, it is expected that all will attend the union meeting, to which everybody is cordially invited.

L. B. Leete of No 3 School street has laid in a stock of School supplies, and as school will open next Tuesday morning, and his place of business is directly across the way from the school house, he invites the 1,000 or more pupils that will enter there at that time to call at his store and get everything they may want, as he has the goods, will sell them right and will be glad to have all the young folks patronize him. Look in his old window and see some of the specimens there, and if you don't see what you want, step inside and ask or if.
