(Special).-Reports of disasters to gold unters bound for the Klondike, on the Jakes, are coming thick and fast. Of those actually verified one is the disaster to what is known as the Kelly expedition. Kelly started to cross Shallow Lake, which is near the summit with his two companions, Adams and Conrad, of Scattle, They were in a canvas boat, and near the end of the lake the boat capsized. There are about thirty tents at the Lake Bennett camp at this writing. Some of the Klondikers will push on as far as they can and again make camp, but the majority will winter there. None of them now hopes to reach the Yukon River until it is frozen up. The saw mill has stopped and boat building is therefore at an enduntil spring. At Lake Lindermann there are about twenty-five estmps, and the building of log cabins is being pushed rapidly forward. On Thursday, Oct. 14th., a gentleman from one of the adjoining towns of Hartford came to this city in search of the best business school for his son. He had received an abundance of catalogues from the various schools, but he had decided to take the opinion of business men first. On Asylum Street he inquired of four prominent merchants, one insurance company and a bank. On Main street he inquired of six merchants two insurance companies and at the office of a prominent Hartford Daily Newspaper. Without exception the business men at these places advised the visitor that if he had a son to be educated he should by all means attend
