information that the soldiers there are very much dissatisfied with the rations they are receiving and that Company A of the First Connecticut Volunteers refused to do drill duty, until better food was served. This information they imparted to their captain and refused to execute his orders on drill. It is hoped that this action on the part of Company A will bring the officials in charge of the commissary department to a sense of their duty in this matter, as the same feeling exists in all the other com panies, and rightly so, as there is no good reason why the boys should not receive an abundance of proper food and if any of the officers are to blame for witholding suitable provisions let the facts in the case be known and corrected. American soldiers must certainly be well fed, at least while on American soil and within convenient reach of a base of supplies, as they are at Fort Knox. We say all honor to Company A for their plucky stand.
