'Now that the summer is again upon reporter, "people are asking as to how to prevent shoes from creaking, for, as you know, shoes rarely ever creak except during exceedingly dry weather or in the summer time. There are all kinds of cures for this trouble, but the simplest, I think, is to rub a few drops of coal oil in the soles, near the edges. If this doesn't stop it, the next best thing is to bave a shocmaker drive a few wooden pegs in the soles. The combination of both will surely keep them quiet. Some young girls just out of school have this last season included in the week's round an hour at a bookkeeping class. The course has been confined to the sort of accounts a mistress of a home " would keep, including careful instruction in writing up a checkbook. The opening of the many banks up town has had the effect of increasing the list of women depositors. Many fathers now put their daughfers on an allowance, starting a bank account for them, and letting them manage their money masters as a preliminary to the care of the property which will some day be their own. It seems a pity that the scheme has been so long delayed. What a saving it might have effected for the Amercan women now enrolled in the contiental peerage!-New York Letter.

A New York lumberman says that in o course of his business experience he known a number of women engaged well. One woman was a traveling saleswoman and another took her husband's position at the head of a yard at his death. Both were clever women, doing as well as men could do in similar positions. The Lumberman's Review now states in its personal column that there is "the latest thing in lumberdom" in Minnesota, a traveling saleswoman, an makes her headquarters at Minne-D. CHENEY.
