of Henry Northey, whose grandmother married the poet's father. Mr. and Mrs. Northey are exceedingly kind to strangers, although they confess, when questioned that there are disadvantages in having a renowned place for one's dwelling. Through all the long summer they are besieged by visitors, who ask exactly the same questions as those who came before. Sometimes as many as a hundred persons have crossed the smooth green lawn to the well in one day; frequently there is an array of fashionable equipages before he low stone wall that borde s the road, and it is sometimes quite perplexing to satisfy such a number of uninvited guests.

The poet was born in Scituate, but not on this farm. He lived there from infancy until he was 14, when he entered the family of Rev. Nehemiah Thomas to study. He began to write verses when very young, and always signed them "Selim," a name that he used throughout his lite. He became a printer in Boston, an editor in New Haven, and later lived in Baltimore and New York, where he was associated with George P. Morris in establishing the New York Mirror, His life was full of interest, and every page of his printed poems speaks of a refined, cultured nature. THE LAUNDRY CLASS.

In many of the schools of Domestic Science, Laundry work is now taught in a thorough and scientific manner. In the Laundry class-room Ivory Soap is always used to wash the articles that require special care and it is frequently used to the exclusion of all other soaps.

It is as important to know the best materials for domestic use as to know the best methods for using them, and Ivory Soap is very generally recognized, by those who have carefully investigated the subject, as the safest and purest soap.
