

OF THE ANXIOUS PARENT

We have learned how to prepare just such a training for young people as is necessary to enable them to do the work required in a merchant's or manufacturer's office. Almost every day one or more calls come to us from insurance companies, banks, or stores, for a good bookkeeper, stenographer, sipping clerk or office assistant. The calls ask for certain qualifications. We have accordingly laid our plans and adapted our courses so as to give every requisite. Ours isn't a common business college. It is no more like the ordinary business college than it is like the public school. We don't recite business lessons. We get right into the real thing and practice business just as it is done in business. We use the genuine business and legal forms, carry out bona-fide transactions and learn by experience. One price covers all costs, tuition and supplies. It is $12.50 per month for day sessions. Careful individual instruction. New students can enter at any time. Open every day and evening to visitors. Large illustrated

Eight Years Ago

took the lead in numbers of pupils and teachers. Since that time it has each year surpassed its previous attendance. Of the twelve teachers in the four business schools in Hartford, eight are employed at Huntsinger's. Of the 750 people who attended the four business colleges last year, 500 attended Huntsinger's.

Mr. Huntsinger was especially educated for teaching, and has taught for twenty-six years; the principals of some of the other schools were trained for something else. Which principal, therefore, is best fitted to plan an educational course of training for young people? Surely the one with the preparation and teaching experience. Does not the school which places its claim upon painstaking thorough training given by capable teachers deserve your patronage, rather than the schools whose only claims to patronage are furniture? Does not the school deserve your consideration which has placed 820 of its trained people in paying situations in the fifty-seven months and three weeks ending September 6th, rather than those whose graduates are not in great demand and when they get situations frequently fail to hold them? At Huntsinger's no promises are made that are not fulfilled, no inducements offered that are not realized. Have you ever known of a school educating people by promises and fixtures?

Tuition $11. per month. No text books to buy. All supplies, stationery, etc., from the day of entrance to graduation need not cost more than from $8. to $10. The pupil buys his supplies wherever he chooses.

The South Manchester West Ends defeated the Hopewells last Saturday afternoon on the West street grounds in a very interesting game of base ball by the score of 2 to 1. The score was kept down owing to the inability of either team to hit the ball. Bronki of the West Ends struck out 15 men and Tuohey of the Hopewells struck out 7. Both teams played well in the field. Misplays were very scarce.
