

VISIT TO NEWGATE PRISON.

Some Account of What is to Be Seen There and How to Reach the Place by Wheel or Carriage.

The Tribune Wheel Club went to see the ruins of the Old Newgate Prison last Sunday. They were met by the way of Hartford, Windsor, Pogonoch, Balaun and Grandby. The roads were sandy and hilly from Windsor to the prison.

Returning they came by the way of Southfield, where they had dinner at the Hotel South and came through Windsor, Locks, Windsor and Hartford. The roads are nearly all macadam between Southfield and Hartford. The distance registered was 64 miles and the following riders were on the string: R. Shaly, R. Lavellette, D. Lamprecht, B. R. Hurley, M. Sears, W. Telford, F. Bentley, C. Frost, F. Hollister, W. McKinney, W. Goodrich, G. Merrick, A. Dumestoc (better known as "Red").

When the Wheel Club arrived at the prison the guide took them through, showed them around and explained all the points of interest. He first led them into the main room and showed them where the women prisoners used to work. Then into the store room where all the meal was made and where the bread was baked.

He first led them into the main room and showed them where the women prisoners used to work. Then into the store room where all the meal was made and where the bread was baked.

The next place visited was of the cell block, a small room where the prisoners had been kept. Another cell still smaller had held 33 prisoners. In the latter there were four bunks, two on a side, one above the other.

The prisoners had been served and soda water was sold for five cents per cup. One of the bars in this cell was filled three quarters through. This fact was discovered just one night before the prisoners were removed to Wetherfield prison. They did not know that the bars were painted white and the prisoners filled the cell with mortar and bread crumbs. A guard heard the filing while passing by the window. The mortar was removed and another cell immediately.

The doctor's office was next inspected and the shelves are still there where he kept his medicines, drugs, etc. The tower was the next point of interest. From its heights the distant towns and cities were observed. The wheelmen all wrote their names on one side of the tower. It was difficult to find space for our number of visitors and they all described all over the tower. The blacksmith shop in ruins is also the workshop.

The workshop is a stone 8 feet long by 4 feet wide. Its walls are rough and jagged. Our guide said that one prisoner who worked in the shop was an expert at making false keys. He made the keys by cutting a signal unlocked the fetters from the prisoners. They were about to make a dash for liberty when they were discovered by one of the guards and the signal was broken. As a warning to the other prisoners they fastened a dead body to the stone spoken of above and made the prisoners who tried to escape with him walk over it for four days.

A ton of the copper mine was next in order. This was reached through the cellar by means of ladders which descend 100 feet to the first landing. Here the guide furnished each man with a tallow candle. Stone steps led us down a distance of 75 feet more. We were then shown where the copper ore was mined in the mine. It was a deep shaft and the water is so clear that the bottom could be readily seen. The water is as cold as ice and excellent for drinking.

At one place our guide hung a stone ahead of the party to show them they could not farther owing to the presence of water. The shafting was also shown which which was used for bringing the copper ore from the mine to the surface. The shafting was done by horse power. Near the well there is a place where a negro was chained to the wall because he had been accused of stealing leather. He had fetters around his ankles, after a long time he became so weak in health that the fetters could not be pulled off his knees. In time his limbs rotted and he died. The body was found, poor man suffered he was found to be innocent and was liberated. He was treated from the prison a free man, a cripple for life. That was the only part of the visit to the ruins of Old Newgate Prison.

The guide said the party that the first night which is now in ruins. It is its place. The wall around the prison is two feet thick and is 30 or 40 feet high. The stone was laid by the prisoners and two of them laid it. The two prisoners who were on the wall at the time the stone in the year 1804 and completed it in 1806.

WEST END BASE BALL CLUB ENTERTAINMENT.

Hilldown was aroused from its quiet slumber last evening by an entertainment and dance which was held in the Grand Hall, under the auspices of the West End Base Ball Club.

The entertainment took place in the upper hall, and was given by the West End Base Ball Club. Following was the program: Vocal solo, Convent Balls, E. Monti Vocal solo, My Crooze Solo. (With variations of voice.)

Barrett's Duet, violin and mandolin, H. Dickinson, J. Hainsworth, H. Monti, E. Behrend. Duet, violin and mandolin, W. Conock. Comic monologue, John Hadgort Sentimental songs, John Haggart Comic sketches, Joseph Hainsworth.

The program was well received and each acted heartily applauded. Joe Hainsworth made the bit of the evening with some of his original comic songs and responded to several ecrocs. The crowd was highly amused and the evening closed with a grand march.

THE STRIKE AND THE PUBLIC.

Interests of the Public Not Considered.

The strike in the anthracite coal region is the most complete ever inaugurated there, not excepting that of two years ago. Prior to that time, or to the extension of the United Mine Workers' union from the bituminous coal field to include the anthracite miners, the latter had never been thoroughly organized, and a strike in one district would usually be accompanied by continued work in the other districts of the anthracite region, and in consequence would result in failure.

Now the operators are confronted by a compact union of all the mine workers throughout the coal region, and so comprehensive is this control of the labor situation apparently that the companies are to make no effort to contest it. They are adopting a passive policy. They will wait until the men get tired of idleness and are starved back to work, and so the strike begins in great quiet with preparation going on for a long siege on both sides.

It is very much the public's business, and if the public had been as deeply alive to possibilities such as are at present being realized it would now be in a position to enforce a judgment respecting its superior concern in the case.

At it is the country and its government will stand helplessly while the storm of industrial sweeps devastatingly through it. But the disturbance will compel thought among the people, and at the end two questions will come to be asked more frequently than they are now: (1) Why should labor and capital be permitted to engage in destructive wars of this kind when there are ways to prevent them, as through compulsory arbitration—voluntary arbitration having again conspicuously proved its fatality; and (2) why should exclusive private monopoly of natural resources so essential to the life and industry of the people as coal be suffered to exist?

Another food sale. The ladies of the Central Congregational church had such fine success with their recent food sale, that they are resolved to hold another at Cook's on Saturday, June 13. The public will be welcomed.

SELLING OFF INDIAN GIRLS.

It is well known that Indians are among the most superstitious of the civilized tribes of the world, and in a great many instances, they are like so many children.

These young Pawnee Bill girls will be in charge of his Wild West exhibition a lot of Creek Indians a time worth to appear in his show. All went well for a time, but at length trouble came.

It seems that there still exists among the Creek Indians a time worth to appear in his show. All went well for a time, but at length trouble came.

There was a spontaneous cry of assent. The prisoner sank back in terror. A new judge was selected, that is, in consequence of the conflict between the jury and committee plans, and the jury was sworn in anew. All seemed to be in a state of confusion.

"You, Bill Jones," said the judge to the first witness, "did you see that girl about both Skinner?"

"Yes, he do. You, Tom Murphy—you seen the shooting?"

"You, Jerry, what he you got to say?"

"The foreman then and there called the jury and announced the result, which differed from the legal form in that it both convicted and passed sentence.

"Judge," said the foreman, "we have found the culprit's verdict. We've got to take that run out of this court and make him dance about the grass in the middle of the street."

"Hold on," said the judge. "While we're here suppose we settle another matter. It's my impression that the majority of the jury is a good thing, and should be always supported under all circumstances, every man having an equal chance under it before being tried."

HYGIENE OF PERFUMES.

In Olden Times Medical Perfumes of Vast Power Were Ascribed to Various Herbs.

Science at present shows a tendency to turn back to some of the ancient remedies regarding scents. Centuries ago scents were accounted more than luxuries. Many remedies are derived from odorous roots and herbs.

The flower scents are obtained by three ways: first by spreading fresh petals over a thickly smeared surface.

Secondly, by infusing the petals in oil, and thirdly, by distilling them in ether.
