The Religion of Lincoln

"Madam, I have formed a high opin-son of your Christian character, and now, as we are alone, I have a mind to ask you to give me, in brief, your idea of what constitutes a Christian." Her reply was at some length, but, in

tance, she said that it consisted of a conviction of one's own sinfulness and weakness and the personal need of Christ as a Saviour. She said that views in regard to doctrine might and did differ, but when one was really brought to feel his need of Divine help, and to seek the aid of the Holy Spirit for strength and guidance, it was satisfactory evidence of his having been born again. Mr. Lincoln listened to her with deep attention and visible signs of emotion, and when she had concluded said: "If what you have told me is really a correct view of this great subject, I think I can say, with sincerity, that I hope that I am a Christian. kafirs by their work in the diamond fields and on the railway gained the means to obtain an immense number of guns. These turned the heads of a number of the young warriors, and it needed only a spark to cause the outbreak of war. It came about as follows: The Fingoes, a native people despised by the Kafirs (perhaps as much because of jealousy as anything else, for the Fingoes were prosperous), furnished the occasion. At a Fingoe war was finally brought to a close. In wedding two inferior Kafir chiefs, although uninvited, helped themselves freely at the beer-drinking festivities.
