which are so much in vogue this season, and which, with a few deft touches of the fingers, can be bent in and out, and, in fact, moulded into almost any shape, which happens to be becoming to the face of the wearer. In this case, the shape is bent into a number of vandyke points, which have something the appearance of the petals of a flower. Carried out in a mixed pale green and white straw, this hat would be particularly pretty. The trimming should consist of three large rosettes of soft Louisine silk ribbon, in some shade of green, which should either match exactly or else harmonize with the green of the straw. In the center of each resette there is a tiny cluster of flowers. These flowers might show fairly short skirts and the muslins long trailing ones. Let us start, therefore, with the useful and inexpensive cottons, which have much charm of their own, and are delightfully becoming to any woman not oast her first youth. Now the majority of us certainly do not wish to go to a high price for the cotton frock, consequently the best plan is to get one dainty little zephyr stripe made by a good dressmaker and to have the others copied therefrom, for the skirt of the cotton frock is all-important. The bodice I donot consider nearly so difficult, indeed. I always give the same advice concerning it, and that is, have a nainscok or washing silk slip and arrange your dainty blouse bodice over it, being always careful to finish & with a tidy and smart waistband. There is little difference between the cotton bodice and the shirt for morning wear.

And now to consider the skirt. Here I advise a washing slik or nainsook petticoat, made plain over the hips and full at the hem, and of exactly the same length as the overskirt. To look neat and be practical the skirt must clear the ground all round. If you be slight you an wear the round, gauged skirt; if inelined to stoutness, let me advise you to have your skirt just eased in on the hips and at the back, but kept plain in the (Trimmed with Bands of Gathered Taffront, and finished with three plain tucks or a deep hem at the feet.
