Dolla played, and it was borne home to me that perhaps Dolly couldn't carry a tune either. She sharped where she should have flatted and flatted where she should have sharped, and her ideas of time were truly eccentric. As a special treat Sally, Dolly and lit tle Milly united in rendering a vocal selection accompanied by the piano. It almost brought tears to my eyestears of auguish.

Deaf to Their Deficiency.

"They just love to sing, and we like to hear them. It makes home cheer ful. Don't you think so?" cooed Mrs Flat, beaming with pride, as the three voices trailed off at the finish and Dolly brought the plane accompaniment to a close with a bang. Of course I never would have dared to tell Mrs. Flat what I really did think, but I mildly suggested that music would take up a good deal of the time that Dolly otherwise might devote to drawing, for which she had a real gift, but Mrs. Flat was not to be discour

"Oh, Dolly isn't neglecting her draw ing lessons, but of course sketching comes so easy to her that she doesn't need to devote much time to art."

Making Lessons Interesting.

A sadder but not a wiser woman. I left the musical family and wended my way bomeward. Of course a musical education is nowadays considered a part of every child's education, and a good deal of time and energy are wasted by very unpromising material as well as needless suffering inflicted on unfortunate victims who must listen to the musician in the making. If a boy or girl has no ear for music, it is absolutely useless to waste money or time on lessons. A

When a teacher is selected care should be taken to engage some one that understands child nature as well as music. If the youngster does not like the teacher, the lesson hour is certain to be a hateful time. While the teacher is likely to understand his or her business before then the process of the purce of the sternomastoid behind fellow workers. At the recent water fellow workers. The pupil can learn to read music and be taught to distinguish between good and bad playing. While simple compositions should be selected for the first year, these should be of a good class. There is no need of interminable strumming of exercises. When the child begins to "learn a piece" he is encouraged to think he is making progress. So even from the first one part of the lesson might be devoted to learning a few bars of some simple but pretty air. Begin with the works of the good camposers—lively works of the good composers-lively ments of the little player.
