Wilhelmina's Love For Dolls

Wilhelmina, queen and idol of Holland, now the happy mother of her own baby, was a mother in her infancy when she was a child. Then she had dolls of all nations. A doll house was established for her, a house so large that she could walk in it.

The Kaiser's Only Daughter

Princess Victoria Louise is the only daughter of Kaiser Wilhelm. But she is known to all Germans as Victoria. She will be seventeen the 13th of next September.

AT HOME AND BY THE SEA

Materials and Designs to Delight Women Wherever They May Be.

We are in for a period of seasons, draperies and blouses. Some of the newest designs have kilts, side and box pleats, and they are laid from the neck to the feet.

Silks are produced in patterns, so that a part can be used as a border to the foot of the skirt, a narrow band for the waist, sometimes called a pleatum. All pleated gowns are cut low in the back and draped with either with lace sleeves reaching to the wrist or else sleeves fashioned of the dress material and richly bordered.

Many fine crepe de chine patterns are worth more than they cost. Fringe is finished like the finest wool. There are also striped and figured gauzes in delicate tints and colors and in black and white.

Just now there is a tentative plan for founded skirts with an overdress which suggests the ancient panther. The waist is made of the same material and they had just begun to eat when the music began.

"GEE! WASN'T THAT 'A BEAUTY!"

A NORWEGIAN FOURTH.

By ARTHUR J. WEZES

"A NOBLE CLAYTON, isn't it?" said Mrs. Clayton to her husband as they took their places at the long table in the dining room of the Hotel du Wood in Christiania.

"Yes, it is the Fourth of July," said Clayton, looking at the clock on the wall. "The first course was set before them, and they had just begun to eat when the music began."

"The first course was set before them, and they had just begun to eat when the music began. Suddenly Mrs. Clayton looked up from her plate and became unconsciously aware that they were the only guests sitting. All the others had risen. Of course they could not afford to be singular, so they rose."

"The fish course had just been served, and they were prepared to enjoy it when—boom—a note on the brass drum announced another selection. Once again the diners arose en masse."

"The air rattled of Finland, madame," quoth the Frenchman deprecatingly. "Finland be"— "Edith," warned his wife in a whisper. "So it went on, their dinner a series of risings and fallings. Russia came next, coincident with the waiter. When the 'Marmelade' came they jumped quickly to their feet and smiled at the Frenchman, who bowed lower than usual as he sat down."

"By this time Mr. Clayton was looking desperate. 'If they'll only let up on one of the meat courses,' he groaned, 'the dessert can go to the devil.' Clayton saw him slip two gold pieces into the waiter's hand as he murmured some inaudible instructions to the waiter. Every eye in Norway seemed to know a little English. 'I don't know,' she said, 'I'm afraid it will not do,' hesitated the waiter. When the 'Marmelade' came they jumped quickly to their feet and smiled at the Frenchman, who bowed lower than usual as he sat down."

FAMOUS BULLS.

Gems From the House of Commons and From the Pulpit. The house of commons, as might have been expected, has contributed a fair share to a very amusing collection of "bulls".

Generally, head-ache comes from a disturbed stomach or irregular bowels, and almost invariably returns. The biography of Dean Hook recalls a certain minor canon who used to preach at the cathedral when Hook was a boy at Winchester school.

"The biography of Dean Hook recalls a certain minor canon who used to preach at the cathedral when Hook was a boy at Winchester school. In Clayton's remarks on the subject of the striking belief that 'what is impossible can never be and very seldom comes to pass'."

"The servants were bribed and sworn to secrecy, and the conspirators on the day after the night upon which Crockett died had his body placed in a chair at a window, so that people returning from the track could see the gambler sitting there. He was so natural that his return to the bank of the Crockett river in East Hartford. He had worked for Mr. O'Leary for the past five weeks up to the next day as far as observed he was everything except to be satisfied."

STILL THERE IS HOPE. Whenever we see a fool by home from college with cuffs on his pants, a shabby little white coat on his head, and a look of despair on his face, we are inclined to say "1910" in his weather, as it indicates he still has three years in which to get educated.

Who does object?

Such a Commission is NOT DANGEROUS. Why is it that the people of Massachusetts never think of abolishing similar commissions there after their own? Who ever heard of any serious proposal to abolish them?

Why do promoters ever capitalize those corporations if not to make money under the protection of the State?

Connecticut Legislative Review

Some Observations Regarding Lack of Leadership in the House—Important Matters Still Pending and Not Reported—Prospects of Adjournment Beyond August First and Reasons Why—Public Utilities.

HARTFORD, June 18.—It is very doubtful if the majority of members of the legislature, especially in the House, realize what the situation is with regard to the business of the session really is, though reports from dispatches ought to have shown them something if they were carefully read. The writer, who is fairly in touch with the general situation, was surprised to find that some of the important business which still awaits the two houses on looking over the business of the session is a bill for the amendment of the judicial code. When Leader Barnes visited the House this morning, the Judiciary Committee had but about twenty matters still to report, he was somewhat near the truth so far as the committee itself is concerned, though he didn't explain that these matters are not yet reported to the committee, but he was nowhere near the truth if he meant to say that there are not about a dozen more matters to come from the Judiciary committee.

There are many more matters than that which have not yet been reported, though some of them ceased to be subjects of committee deliberation a long time since. These are mostly in the hands of the stenographers of the committee, whose work is not so exact as for some reason he is not yet got ready for the clerk of bills. Most of these are unfavorable reports, and will not get a great time for the House to get them over the way and less for the Senate, which is the more likely some chap who introduced one or more of them insists on sending them to the feet of the cabinet members in the way of legislative action taken some time.

Leaving out of consideration the unimportant matters which the Judiciary Committee has yet to do, there are from a dozen to twenty measures of the first importance, every one of which will be the subject of prolonged debate in one House or the other and most of them in both. Among these are the employer's liability bill, which has been amended, extending Section 961 of the General Statutes (the electricity law), which raises the rate for the prevention of prostitution, the Australian ballot law, the Sunday law, the contract statute which would reduce the $5,000 limit on death damages. There are others, but these are perhaps the most important.

It doesn't need profound knowledge of legislative affairs to make it plain that in just this group of matters there are lights enough on the floor of the House and Senate to last the week or three or four weeks. There is by no means the likelihood of prolonged debate in Senate this session that there was in the last session, but the House is without organization of any kind whatsoever, and that disorganizational work in the House within memory, and nobody knows what will happen from day to day. One of the men in the leadership or over might be destroyed and quite another man taken to bed, so that there is no such thing as leading matters in any successful degree. A dozen men have come together and they are taking advantage of the only chance they may ever have to do a thing, and that is the fact that they have each talked themselves out of any personal influence or weight at all; they don't sense that.

These matters referred to which the Judiciary committee has yet to report, are fair samples of business in the hands of other committees with the exception of the Judiciary committee, and Safety committees only one or two pieces of it to a committee, but that's all. There are some matters which are forty years old and in this I have got right down to hard pan conversation—prime importance yet they have not been reported, and every one of these certain to be the subject of debate at least to the extent of the entire session. After scrutinizing the officer for a few seconds the animal snarled and snarled. Officer Madson followed it through the garden of Edward Stratton, back of the house of Fred Brown and George E. Peirce, over to Wesley Hollister's barn. When the animal got near the barn a horse made a noise in the air which was a snarl. The officer crossed the street and went over into the woods back of Fred Par-son's residence on Charter Oak Street. Here the officer gave up the chase. Monday afternoon the deer was seen again by the witness and children in the vicinity of the sand barn on Charter Oak Street. He didn't seem to be much at all. The animal was back to get 'a' her number, then he took to his heels and was soon out of sight.

HARTFORD THEATER

THE ROSE OF THE RANCHO
Hartford and vicinity will be very much interested in being able to witness the performance of the play, "The Rose of the Rancho," which was made so popular in New York, that it has never been performed elsewhere. The play is the story of the life of a young man who is left behind for his mother's sake, and who through the kindness of a friend, makes his way to the west and becomes a successful actor. The play is being presented this week at the Court Street Theater, by the company headed by Robert T. Halpern as "Carter," and George E. Peirce as "Tommy." The play is being presented in the Spanish language, and will give ample occasion for striking scenic effects.

SPRING AND ROMANCE

By M. QUAD.

Miss Jenks, a native of Missouri, at twenty years of age lost his father and gained thereby a farm. Not finding the state big enough for him, he sold his farm and went to Texas, where he invested the proceeds in oil territory, of which the Octopus Oil Company kindly relieved him for a consideration. Zerk took the consideration to New York, where he became a great stock and cotton speculator and by the time he was thirty was worth some millions that he didn't know what to do with them.

Meanwhile Zerk, having determined to see something beside his own country, went to London, where he kept on the stock exchange, making the acquaintance of several impetuous noblemen who gave him introductions (for consideration), it was not long before he found himself a member of the celebrated smart set headed by the king of England. Certain professional beatitudes of the "Hottentots" were not stopping to consider the origin of his accumulations, proceeded to lay plans to transfer as much of them as possible to America, and with preliminary efforts in the way of moderate amounts were so successful as to encourage them to strike for something higher.

Among the reigning belles of this season—married belles, not young ladies; the belle of London usually are numbered with husbands—was the Arabella Richmond. Twenty years before her mother had been so favorably noticed by the king as to be "retired" by the dowager from a parthenical families of England. Lady Arabella had inherited a number of splendid jewels and when she wished to risk rising into the world, she sold all on some aristocratic function.

But unfortunately, the beauty's expenditures being greater than her income, she was obliged now and again to sacrifice a gem, and at the time Zerk Jenks appeared on the London scene she had reached a point where her stock of jewels needed replenishing. Indeed, without certain additional her supremacy was in danger. She was among the best of her kind. The date suited the young woman, and next morning both got up to act the part of bridesmaids.

But I do, I want folks to have something to talk about, and I want something to think of afterward.

"I'm willing to do all I can for you," said the girl, "but if you look at it to 'other way' it's all right. It's to what they call an elopement."

"All right, I never eloped, but I guess you can manage it somehow. This is Thursday. Shall we bring it next Tuesday night?"

TEN-CENT TROLLEY FARE BETWEEN MANCHESTER AND HARTFORD NOT DEAD BUT SLEEPING UNDER VEXATIOUS DELAYS. Figures Promised by Connecticut Company Not Forthcoming—Hearing on Matter Set for Last Wednesday But No One Present to Represent Connecticut Company Before Committee.

Some heat was shown Wednesday by Senator E. Hart Penn of the Fourth District when for a second time a hearing on the bill for a ten-cent fare between Hartford and South Manchester was continued, and Representative Aaron Johnson of South Manchester also made a speech. Notice of this particular hearing appeared for the first time in the "Legislative Bulletin." Wednesday afternoon the railroad company was not represented when the time for the hearing came. It was announced that the company had not sufficient notice. Only three members of the committee were present, and they included the two chairmen.

People are large in this town and deeply interested in securing a ten-cent trolley fare between this place and Hartford. They are appearing strongly and persistently for a fair and fair concession. Our senator and representatives are being urged about the demands of their constituents. The railroad company has been asked to give a representative of the company a hearing on the matter. It is believed that the railroad company will give a hearing on the matter. It is believed that the railroad company will give a hearing on the matter.

SENIOR CLASSES The class day exercises of the senior class of the South Manchester High School were held in the gymnasium yesterday afternoon and were witnessed by a large and enthusiastic assembly. The address was made by Rev. Dr. W. J. McErick, president of the class. The class poem was written and read by Ruth Kibben and was entitled "The Golden Apple," and the remainder of the program as published in these columns needs no further comment. The exercises were most interesting and enthusiastically received. The young people acquitted themselves creditably and the closing exercises were very enjoyable throughout.

ORANGEMEN ATTENTION Rev. J. F. Johnson of Hartford, pastor of the Capitol Avenue Presbyterian church will preach at Orange Hall next Sunday afternoon, beginning at 8:15. His subject will be "The Octave of the Moral and the Spiritual Life." Washington Local Lodge No. 1048, bearing their colors, will attend the meeting and hear the sermon of Rev. Dr. Johnson. The speaker is well known in this place as he has appeared before audiences in South Manchester several times. He is a quarterly speaker and is a near relative of Mr. Johnson of Delhi, N. Y., who is a member of the British parliament and is very influential and distinguished in that body. The public are cordially invited to attend the meeting.

SWEDISH CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH Rev. Mr. Molin of Hartford will preach at the Swedish Congregational church on Spruce street next Sunday. Services will be held at 10:45 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. It was expected that a missionary would occupy the pulpit next Sunday but word had been received that he couldn't come, hence Mr. Molin was secured to supply. Local Paragraphs INTERESTING ITEMS BOILED DOWN FOR BUSY READERS. Joseph O'Gorman of Charter Oak street is home from Holy Cross College for the summer vacation. The Fourth of July is only a little more than two weeks away, but we have heard nothing whatever hereabouts of a suitable celebration of the day for this place. There was an out of town peddler's wagon here advertising fireworks for the Fourth, however. It is much held local dealers in the noise makers that delight the hearts of Young America at the glorious Fourth.

SCHOOLS CLOSED The Ninth District schools closed yesterday afternoon for the summer vacation and the youth of this place are now at liberty to enjoy that freedom from restraint which the long summer period offers, and which is always looked forward to with so much genuine pleasure by the average pupil. To many of the boys and girls it means great opportunity to romp and play in field and forest and stream to five close to nature, to store up energy for coming efforts in the class room, to develop their bodies and let their minds rest. To many others it opens a vista in which they seek opportunities for earning a living by picking strawberries, running errands, mowing lawns, doing chores, acting as nurse, girls, doing light housework, or in many instances seeking and securing employment in the silk mills, and to say a long farewell to books and studies.

CIRCUS NEXT WEEK All roads will lead to Hartford next Tuesday, June 22, when Ringling Brothers' greatest circus on earth will be the attraction. The big parade is booked to start at ten o'clock and present one of the greatest spectacles of the kind ever witnessed. The railroads and trolley lines for miles around about Hartford in every direction will pour thousands of people into the city to witness the greatest pageant of the year. It is the only large circus to visit this vicinity during the present year.

CHURCH OF NAZARENE The revival meetings at the Pentecostal church of the Nazarenes are being held each evening at 7:30 and will continue over the week. Evangelist S. W.
