MISTAKEN IDENTITY.

The Dialogue That Took Place After the Dance Ended. A well known and popular Los Angeles physician upon the occasion of a recent visit to a professional friend at Fresno (the physician in charge of the state institution for the deaf and dumb) was invited to attend one of the periodical "bops" given in the inmates. All the unfortunate and a goodly sprinkling of guests were present.

At the close of the last one a gentleman approached his charming partner and asked for the next dance. "I should be delighted to favor you, my friend," said she in a voice no less sweet than her face.

When Danger and Lanterns Were Made. When this 200 years ago the watchmen of London town, carrying long lanterns and banners, dressed in long coats and knee breeches, walked up and down the cobble streets of the world's largest city chanting the following words:

A Rattlesnake Story. "In 'Life and Sport on the Pacific Coast' Horace A. Vachell relates one of his narrow escapes from a friend's bullet. 'My cousin and I had been camping and hunting for several days in a sort of paradise in the mountains during a long ride on horseback we had seen a great many rattlesnakes and killed a few, an exceptional experience. That night my cousin and I were wakened by the light of the moon a big rattler crawling across my chest.

And They Didn't Exercise. William M. Everts, who lived until he was nearly ninety, said he kept his health by never taking exercise. The celebrated Dr. William George Mead, who lived to the surprising age of 148 years, spent nearly all of his time in the open air and a little riding.

He Didn't Know It. "What are you doing here?" "Waiting on property." "Why, properly passed this way two months ago."

Troubles must come to all men, but those who are always looking for them will have the largest share.

SUCCESSFUL AUCTION.

Every Lot at Fairview Sold—Large Attendance. E. J. Holl reports gratifying success at the auction sale of his fine lots held at the Holly Realty Company at Fairview this week. In the main pleasant weather prevailed. The people showed much interest in the matter of acquiring sites for homes, and he has been compensated from work by illness during the past week.

The automobile garage at the rear of the Waranoke Inn is now completed and in use. A number of the regular boarders at the Waranoke Inn own cars and will find the garage attached a great accommodation to them. It will also serve automobile parties who come from out of town to stop at the hotel for meals.

Michael Meyer the real estate dealer has returned from the Hartford hospital where he was in a special room for several weeks. Mr. Meyer is still very weak but is improving steadily and will be able to resume his usual life in a few days.

It will be good news for the men hereabouts to learn that Messrs. Title & Rich, the well known real estate men's furnishers at 148 Asylum street, Hartford, have taken adjoining space in the columns of The News and will week after week henceforth bring to their notice information regarding the many choice bargains which they are offering.

Will Build House. P. A. Brink of Chestnut street has the contract for a building to be erected on the south side of his residence at the corner of Garden street. It is to be of a superior grade of construction, have all modern conveniences, be equipped with electric lights as well as with gas, and admit of cooking by gas if need be and will in all ways be a very desirable home.

By vote of the Committee of the Ninth School District children will enter the Kindergarten during the first three weeks of the fall and spring terms. Children must therefore enter the kindergarten before May 10th, 1910.

Some Observations

Article of Reason: In the foregoing series there have been developed most of the tools for remedying effects temporarily, but that to the root of the disease...

These tools are to be used to restore the sovereignty to the people, and to take the control out of the category of private ownership...

I may here add two more tools not much advertised to before, viz.: woman suffrage and co-operation. The thing that is pushing woman suffrage to the front is, first, the conspicuous incompetency of men with the ballot, shown in the fact that they have unhorsed themselves therewith...

The other tool is co-operation. It is a long story, but let me give some advice to women. Form a neighborhood buying club, three, six or a dozen members...

J. B. OLCOTT

DISTINGUISHED EXPERT ON GRASSES DIED SATURDAY

Nearly Eighty Years Old

HIS EXPERT KNOWLEDGE OF GRASSES MADE HIM WIDELY KNOWN

Burial in West Cemetery

James Bradford Olcott, the distinguished expert on grasses, died at his home here last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Olcott's illness was due to dropsy and an affected heart which caused his family to fear that he would die for several years. Two years ago he became critically ill and it was thought for a time that he would not rally but an operation was successful and he partially recovered. Since then his health had been in an unimpaired condition and a declination had been marked for some time. Last week his physician realized that the end was not far distant and his death was not a surprise to his relatives and friends.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the late home of Mr. Olcott, the Rev. Dr. George W. Reynolds, pastor of the Congregational church officiating. Interment was in the West cemetery, where his father is buried, and also many other members of the family. His grave will be covered with turf from his grass garden, his favorite grass being used, while the entire plot will also be turfed with the grass to which he had given so much time and study. The following sketch is taken from the Hartford Times.

James B. Olcott was born near his late homestead in Hop Brook neighborhood, May 20, 1830, the son of Sidney Olcott and Edna Adams Olcott. He was one of a family of three children, one of whom a brother, died in infancy, and a sister, Mrs. Cynthia Vail who survives him.

His boyhood days were spent in this place and he was educated at the regular day school, then located near his home. When 16 years of age he went to Hartford and attended the Commercial printing office where he learned the printing trade. He remained there until 21 years of age and in 1851 when the gold fever epidemic spread over the east he went to San Francisco, Calif., making the trip around Cape Horn. Mr. Olcott remained in the west for several years although he never engaged in mining. He and a friend would charter sloops and make trips to various foreign countries where they would procure produce and other salable goods and return with them to California where they usually found a ready and profitable market.

In the early fifties, at the request of his mother, Mr. Olcott returned to this place and for a time attended the Central academy, which was in charge of Principal Dimmock. For a time after leaving school he assisted his father on the latter's farm. In 1866 he married Emeline A. Roberts, daughter of Isaac and Annie Ensign Roberts, the ceremony being performed at the home of his wife in East Hartford. Six children were born to them, three of them dying in infancy and the following three surviving: Harry Elwyn Olcott, who lives at home, and Mrs. Annie Falkner, who resides in Plymouth, R. I. About 1869, Mr. and Mrs. Olcott went to New Haven where Mr. Olcott secured employment on an Edgewood farm prominently known as the property of Donald G. Mitchell, the author.

In 1869 Mr. and Mrs. Olcott moved to Rhode Island, locating on a farm on Narragansett bay, where they remained for five years. At the expiration of five years they returned to South Manchester and located on a farm in a position with Cheney Brothers. He had charge of their outdoor work. In 1868 Mr. Olcott entered the farming business, he hired, paying particular attention to horticulture and asparagus. He continued in this business for many years, and some twenty years ago when he became intensely interested in grasses he turned his farming business over to his son, Walter, who has continued it since. Olcott's strawberrones being known in every store and household in this section.

Mr. Olcott thoroughly approved of the old adage "A grain that is worth doing at all is worth doing well," and it was not long after he had entered the grass business that the government, which was greatly interested in grasses, recognized his ability and secured his services. For some time after being secured by the state to experiment on grasses Mr. Olcott made frequent trips to and from the experimental station in New Haven but on these trips were of considerable value to him. He finally persuaded the state to allow him to conduct his experiments at his home in this place and his turf garden has long been the noted grass spot of the state.

During the summer Mr. Olcott would devote all of his time to his grasses and as soon as the first snow storm came he would leave for California, or some foreign country where he would exchange ideas on grasses. The government said the grasses entailed in these trips. During his career as a grass expert he visited many parts of the United States and Germany, England, France, Australia and Denmark. Because of his unexcelled knowledge of grasses many wealthy men throughout the country consulted him on laying out lawns which surrounded their residences and when it was decided to establish a grass garden at the rear of the Smithsonian institute, Washington, D. C., Mr. Olcott was given charge of the work. His keen interest in grasses was manifested twice during his fatal illness when he insisted upon being carried into the plot to see the effect of the warm weather. In addition to being a grass expert the deceased was possessed of considerable inventive genius. He was engaged for a number of years in newspaper work.

imately he was a genial, sociable man and he was sure to be a staunch friend to anyone who succeeded in correcting him or enlightening him. Mr. Olcott was a number of years wore a typical English suit with knee breeches. He invariably wore a piece of one of his grasses or a small branch of some of his favorite tree in his coat lapel and this custom, together with his peculiar attire generally made him conspicuous when he entered towns in which he was not known.

He leaves a wife and three children, Mr. Olcott leaves a sister, Mrs. Cynthia Vail of this place.

Main Street Property Owners Seeking Redress.

The suits of Michael J. Moriarty and thirteen other property owners of Manchester against Horace B. Cheney and others, constituting the board of selectmen, was argued before Judge Lucien F. Burpee in the short circuit session of the superior court on motion of Judge Heriot O. Jones, certain matters be stricken from the record. The board of selectmen is the plaintiff in the instant matter. The defendants are the interests of the town. The fourteen property owners have property located on Main street in Manchester and located between what is known as the Middle turnpike and the main line of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company. The board of selectmen recently laid out the act and part of the highway, and part of the frontage which the plaintiffs claimed to be a part of the highway. Being aggrieved by the layout which the selectmen made, they appealed to the superior court. Judge Howers claimed that the new lines as laid out by the plaintiffs were arbitrary, lines and sections were laid out outside the record which gives them authority to re-establish in an uncertain boundary. He said the selectmen laid out the record boundaries, without any regard to the original bounds. He further claimed that certain matters set out in the special defense was evidential and he asked that they be stricken from all of the answers so that he would not be called upon to plead to the matters. William M. Maloney, Judge Olin R. Wood, who appeared for the town, claimed that the matters set up in the special defenses should remain in the case.

Judge Lucien F. Burpee of the superior court recently denied the matters set up by fourteen property owners of Manchester to have certain matters stricken from the special defenses of the selectmen of Manchester in the appeals which they took from the action of the selectmen in establishing the street lines on Main street in Manchester. In overruling the motions Judge Burpee says: "Although the allegations do not appear to be strictly necessary to the defense, as to set up anything not already set up, still they may be that they state the defense more fully, and it is not plain that it is not the defendant's right so to state their defenses."

There are fourteen appeals from the layout of the highway as made by the selectmen. The appellants are: Thomas P. Aikin, William Brink, Alvin Brown, and Leonard M. Carter; Helen Comstock, John E. Gleason, Minnie McCarthy, Michael Moriarty, William Poliman, Annie A. Reid and others, Hannah Sheridan and others, Julius J. Strickland, Flora A. A. Vilharts and Wealthy A. White.

Tuesday evening was marked as past masters night at Mascoe hall, and proved to be a gala occasion. The master mason degree was conferred in an impressive manner, a beautiful repast was enjoyed, and Grand Master Frederick A. Verplanck of Manchester lodge was presented with a past master's jewel as a testimonial from Manchester Lodge, No. 23 F. & A. M. At the post-grand exercises following the evening Grand Verplanck served as toastmaster. Impromptu remarks were made by leading officers, the positions of honor were occupied as follows:

Most Worshipful: Frederick A. Verplanck, worshipful master; Most Worshipful James McCormick, senior warden; Most Worshipful Frank W. Havens, junior warden; Past Master James W. Cheney, treasurer; Past Master Aaron Cook, secretary; Past Master Charles W. Fitch, senior deacon; Past Master Wesley B. Porter, junior deacon; Past Master M. Barber, senior steward; Past Master Bethune J. Bartlett, junior steward; Past Master George W. Ferris, chaplain; Past Master John D. Henderson, marshal; Past Master J. Burdette Hubbard, tyler; Past Master William Ferguson, first craftsman; Past Master Charles M. Murphy, second craftsman; Past Master Jasper Fitch, third craftsman.

The folding seats which have done service at the Apels opera house for a number of years have been purchased by Messrs. Cushing & Brannick of The Circle and are now in use there. This does not necessarily indicate that the Apels opera house shall be closed permanently to the public, it is only without having so many seats as were used for seating audiences at entertainments, theatrical productions or such like. People at the North end are in need of a building for public amusements and the Apels opera house is the only public building available for such purposes there at the present time.

Messrs. Cushing & Brannick opened their new amusement house (The Circle) Tuesday evening in the midst of a downpour of rain and attracted an audience large enough to occupy all the fittings they had, and even some stood up to see the pictures. The house will seat 70 persons.

Joseph Herron, formerly of this place but now employed as a chauffeur at Paterson, N. J., was the guest of his parents, James and Mrs. Herron, of Eldridge street this week.

CALL YOU AFFORD TO MISS THIS? SPECIAL FOR OUR LARGE MANCHESTER TRADE

Friday and Saturday will be Manchester Days at the Square Deal Store of Title & Rich. To show our appreciation of the support and success you have given this firm from the start, we will give you something better than was ever given you before. A new shipment of 500 High Grade Sample Suits from the High Art Manufacturing Co., 830 Broadway, New York City. This is a new firm with new goods, new styles and new ideas. We want you to see these suits even if you don't buy. It will prove to you what we think of your patronage by giving you double the values for the same money that you pay at high retail stores.

Notice the four prices on the right. They represent the best 500 suits for men and youths that were ever offered you. The highest priced store never had as good. That's saying a good deal. They must be seen to be appreciated. College styles for the young fellows. The latest for the older ones. The goods are strictly all wool worsteds and cashmeres, hand tailored from top to bottom; blues, grays, browns and any color your heart desires. $12.50 to $22.50 ARE THE REAL VALUES OF THESE SUITS

5,000 PAIRS of ODD TROUSERS 85c 1.29 1.45 2.3.35

Have you ever seen 5,000 pairs of trousers at one time? If you haven't come here and you will see them. We bought them cheap enough. You will too when you come here. Mostly all wool worsteds. The 85c grade are good enough for Sunday wear. The $3.35 are fit for a king. All sizes of course—up to $8 waist-

Home Course In Domestic Science
XV.—Use of Color In House Decoration.
By EDITH G. CHARLTON. In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.
Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.
HAVE you ever considered how much environment has to do with the good or bad health of the individual or family? If you have thought about it at all you know that cheerful, pleasant and suitable surroundings in the home are their aid in maintaining good health. These also assist in character building. The influence of such things may be incalculable to persons who have given little or no thought to the subject but without doubt the influence exists to some degree.
The choice of color, the style and arrangement of furniture, even the pictures which adorn the walls, all have their part in developing the men and women who inhabit the home. Conspicuously few persons have given much thought to the study of color, and as a result its selection for house furnishings has been more the result of chance or impulse than of good judgment. Often gives atmosphere to our homes, and richly compensates for a sense of comfort and satisfaction with our abode. If these are lacking the house has failed to be a home in the fullest sense of the word.
For one who has never studied color the best advice is to choose points taken and copy nature as far as possible. If one has a favorite color it should surround one in either house furnishing or personal adornment whenever suitable. Why not choose colors according to personal tastes?
We select our friends from sympathy in thought and feeling. We do not always philosophize about it, but stop to analyze why we find greater pleasure in the society of some people than in others. We recognize certain principles in our liking and know that we are happier and enjoy our friends better when we find those principles and charms have a place in their temperaments. Just as it is with color. We cannot always give a reason for our preferences, but we are sure they exist, and most people are sensitive to color to a greater or less degree. One's favorite color brings repose and enjoyment, is conducive to health and exercises an actual influence on our life. The influence of red is its gratifying preference wisdom must be shown, for there are many colors of which a little is enjoyable when a mass would be insupportable. Constantly surrounded by a glow of vivid scarlet would be like close companionship with a brass band, but a touch of scarlet in the surroundings is a pleasing sensation.
As far as effect is concerned, the color of a room makes its atmosphere. It may be cheerful or sad, cozy or disturbing, according to its quality and force. Without color a room is much like a bare canvas, which might, but does not, give a vivid picture of some phase of life. The colorless room has nothing to tell of the character of its occupants.
Color in a house includes much that is classed as furniture. It applies to carpets, draperies and ornaments, but is first and foremost applied to wall treatment. In selecting color for a single room or for an entire house certain points must be borne in mind. The first is that one person does not make a home. It takes the combined influence and personality of every person living under the roof to give its true character. Every book, every picture, every carefully selected piece of furniture, brought into the home makes it a part of a household, and no house can be absolutely perfect without all these evidences of family life.
Good rules to follow in selecting colors for any room are to make the choice on this basis:
With reference to the light in the room.
With reference to other colors in adjoining rooms.
With reference to the general character of the furnishing.
Interiors with a southern exposure should be treated with cool, light colors, such as blue and greens in various shades, white green, emerald green, and blue green; also the all-

Artistic Dining Room.
Some colors are much better suited to one room than another. If one's favorite color is pink it should not be used in the dining room or hall. Light blues, pinks, lavender and other dainty shades are more suitable for sleeping rooms occupied by young people, though for the average person there is no better color than a soft, unobtrusive green for a bedroom.
Red has for years been the favorite color for dining room, and yet there are certain reasons why it is entirely inadvisable for one reason, the color soon becomes monotonous and has an irritating effect upon nervous or highly strung persons. Although a warm color, it is inclined to absorb light. It is very rich and warm in sunlight or artificial light, but in ordinary daylight it makes a room seem dark and gloomy. If red is to be used at all in wall covering it should be confined to a hall or den, some room which is not in constant use. When yellow happens to be a favorite color it is a good one to use in the dining room, particularly when the dining room has a north or northern exposure. Golden browns and tans are satisfactory in living rooms when conditions are right for a warm color, when there is not too much sunlight in the room.
Living rooms should be decorated not only with neutral colors, but those which suggest cheerfulness as well. Sleeping rooms should be soothing, and the colors which produce this effect are supposed to be quiet greens, soft grays and dull blues.
The paneled wall and beamed ceiling of dark wood with color showing between under a splendid finish for living and dining rooms and hall, especially in a country house. One particularly attractive color is a rich, warm brown, which is combined with birch logs on which the white bark has been retained to gleam in the firelight. A tinting of soft green on ceiling, and a contrasting color on the walls, such as a country brown, than some artificial arrangement copied from a city house.

Home Course In Domestic Science
The number, size and placing of the windows also greatly affect the intensity of the color. It must always be remembered that any interior is dark compared with out of doors, and in the lightest room there will be dark corners or spaces where the color will seem much darker than it really is. This explains why wall paper which appeared perfectly satisfactory in the dealer's show room, had a different effect when it was brought to the store where it was displayed in a different light. The main line of color in the room should always govern the proper use of color in house decoration—first, that of color in relation to light; second, the color in relation to the color in masses. These principles are not difficult to master, but they are as important and as impossible to escape as the laws of arithmetic. The color of the walls prescribes the color that must be used in floor coverings, curtains, and upholstery. The most and purest tones of the color are naturally and almost by instinct put at the base—that is, the four corners should carry the darkest color. It is not often advisable to use what is known as an eye color decoration—that is, combining the entire color in a single color. Such a plan is much like trying to make a melody on one note of the scale. The best effects in both sounds and color are produced by the careful variations of tones. The gradation and combination of even opposing tints give the greatest satisfaction to the eye. The color of the walls, the floor, the ceiling and the ceiling the last. These gradations, too, should be distinct and separate enough in tone to be perfectly apparent. The connecting grades may appear in furniture covering, in the carpeting, or in the drapery principle, using color in masses, means that whatever color is used should be given space enough to establish itself freely in the room, and it should not be broken into patches and neutralized by divisions. Nature does not put a single red leaf on a tree and then change the color to blue. The whole forest will have its various colors so arranged that one is perfectly conscious of every one of them. The human red in its quantity sufficient to make itself felt, yet it does not interfere with the glow of the yellow or the restfulness of the blue. The general tone of the room may be what you will—green or blue or a division of each—but to be perfect every detail in the room must be related to one or both of these colors. If this rule is disregarded every piece of furniture unrelated to the whole becomes a spot which has no real connection with and ruins the entire room out of harmony.

Quaker RANGES
The Quaker Cabinet, with Gas Stove attached, is the most complete, convenient and efficient range ever built. It is actually two ranges combined in the space of one. You can bake equally well with the coal or gas oven, broil over the coals, or use the gas broiler, and when there's a rush double your cooking and baking capacity by using both. This is the ideal range for all the year around, and like all Quakers, its original construction makes it easily superior to all other ranges of this type on the market. The Cabinet is sold with or without the gas attachment.
