

A KISS

He Was Forgiven Only Because She Was Equally Culpable.

The night was dark as Erebus. It rained, the wind blew, and the streets were flooded.

There are two suburban towns—Bloomington and Rosedale—near the city in which I have an office, my residence being in one of these.

I found nothing in the way of a vehicle on the streets and, reaching the town limits, left street lamps behind me, pushing on into the darkness.

I thought it better for me to remain beside him till he became fully awake, feeling his guilt because fully awake.

There was a curious odor inside which I had smelled before, but could not remember what it was.

I thought I would smoke, but remembered that I had just smoked a cigarette. The jolting of the carriage was such that I braced myself in my corner.

Inductively I put out my hands for protection and encountered a man on my neck and arms, and I felt her warm breath on my cheek.

"Do you know my fiancée?" I asked. "No, I don't," she said. "Do you admire her?" "No, especially."

"Where am I? What is this?" "Don't be frightened," I said. "Has he gone?" "Who?"

"The man who got up beside me and had a cloth against my face." "Oh! That's the explanation, is it? My brooch—it is gone!"

A WINNING TRICK.

He Lost All His Bets and Made Money.

The captain of one rather old and slow steamer of years ago, finding that he would have to be a long time in China before he received his cargo of tea and would have probably to return in ballast, began, to every one's astonishment, to say that, owing to the repairs that had been done to his engine, he hoped to make a racing passage back to England.

In such very considerable sums of money did he wager that people began to think there was something in it, and the merchants seated themselves almost entirely to his ship, arguing that as the captain stood to lose £250 the repairs to his steamer's engine had probably put him in a position to bet almost to a certainty.

"Of course the steamer, whose greatest speed was eight knots an hour, arrived in England weeks after the others, and the captain lost £250, but instead of having to be in China waiting his cargo, he was in a position to bet almost to a certainty.

"I am disappointed," she said. "I was sure I knew you, and I would have felt so pleased if you had turned out to be one of my friends."

"I am considered the homeliest man in my set," she said. "I have been to a musical in Bloomington."

"And I have been to a dance there," she said. "At the Springs?" "Yes, I do you know them?" "I do. I was invited to their dance, but had previously accepted an invitation to the 'bees'."

"You are not the person you claim to be," she said. "I had done so since."

"I don't know that I am," she said. "Are you really engaged?" "Certainly not."

"Do you know my fiancée?" I asked. "No, I don't," she said. "Do you admire her?" "No, especially."

"Where am I? What is this?" "Don't be frightened," I said. "Has he gone?" "Who?"

"The man who got up beside me and had a cloth against my face." "Oh! That's the explanation, is it? My brooch—it is gone!"

"Anything else missing?" "I had nothing else with me. But how did you come to be here?"

"I was kissed you, sweetheart, not as the water you see it, but as the water you see it and stand still. In trouble, I was kissing you."
