Hibernians

The regular meeting of the local division of Hibernians will be held at Chesley Hall next Tuesday evening. The Hibernians have engaged Chesley Hall for their annual St. Patrick's Day ball, Friday evening, March 17, and have appointed the following committee to make the necessary arrangements: George Coleman, chairman; John F. Miner, secretary; John F. Egan, Timothy P. Halloran, William E. Unsworth, Arthur E. Keating and James F. Touhey.

Royal Neighbors

The regular meeting of the Royal Neighbors will be held at Masonic hall next Monday evening. Officers for the ensuing term will be: John F. Egan, president; William E. Unsworth, vice-president; Arthur E. Keating, secretary; John F. Miner, treasurer; John F. Egan, chaplain; William E. Unsworth, organist; Arthur E. Keating, reader; James F. Touhey, poet.

The members of the choir of St. Mary's Episcopal church presented Organist A. W. Driggs with a music calendar for New Year's Eve. A collection was also served and a joyous social season followed at the close of the regular rehearsal.

The brick walls of the garage being constructed for Smith Brothers on Bissell street are completed and it is expected that the roof will be up by tomorrow evening. They hope to discontinue business there during the latter part of February.

BEGINS TO-DAY

The first installment of that gripping story "ALIAS JIMMY VALENTINE" is published in these columns today. It appears on Page Four. Do not miss a single issue. You will be glad if you take up with our suggestion in this matter.

Died This Morning

James E. O'Brien, proprietor of the Warranoke Inn died of Bright's disease and other complications at a private hospital in Hartford about two o'clock this morning. A solemn requiem high mass for the repose of his soul will be sung at St. James church Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Burial will be at St. Bridget's cemetery.

Mr. O'Brien was a native of County Kerry, Ireland, was in his forty ninth year. His parents came from Ireland in 1864 and settled in Wapping where they remained for five years. They removed to Ellington and for a period of 15 years were located there. The latter established his home in Bolton. Mr. O'Brien bought the Orford Inn 14 years ago and operated it for 7 years when he sold it to W. C. Tucker. Soon after he had bought the Warranoke Inn which he sold to the late Michael Boyle 5 years ago. Mr. Boyle lived but about 2 years after becoming proprietor of the Warranoke and some two years ago Mr. O'Brien again secured control of the property which he held up to the date of his death.

Besides his widow he leaves his mother, one brother, Timothy and one sister, Mrs. Mary McKinnon, all of this place.

Mr. O'Brien went to Florida one year ago and since that time his health has been steadily declining. He has been under treatment during practically all of that period. He was recently moved to a private hospital in Hartford last Monday. While it was known that he was feeble it was not thought that the end was so near. During his illness the Warranoke Inn been capably and successfully managed by his good wife, who has developed considerable executive ability in that line of work.

Interesting Lecture

Mr. A. Radcliffe Dugmore, F. R. G. S., delivered an illustrated lecture at High School last evening the subject of which was "Photographing Africa's Live Game on the Roosevelt Hunting Trail." The lecture last evening was attended by the pupils of the High School and of the grammar grades as well as by a goodly gathering of persons interested in educational matters. These latter were treated on invitation. No admission fee was charged. The lecture was furnished free by kindly disposed persons here, primarily for the benefit of the pupils and secondarily for the enlightenment of the management of those who received cards of invitation. The lecture was delivered in the afternoon for the children of the primary grades and of the kindergarten.

The manager of the lecture describes it very well indeed. It showed the wild animals at close range.

Mr. Dugmore is an entertaining speaker and added much to the enjoyment of the evening by his wit and his charming handling of the subject in general. All were delighted with the evening's entertainment.

Invading Hartford

James Trotter of Summit street this place made a purchase of real estate in Hartford yesterday, including seven acres of land on Garden street near Mathers. The property has a frontage of 600 feet on Garden street and includes a dwelling. It is located in a residential section and is near May's street, north end. Mr. Trotter intends to cut it up into building lots and place it on the market for sale. He has had considerable success in developing real estate in this place and has now invaded Hartford and will try to do likewise there.

Absent Friends

If you have absent friends in any part of the United States send them The News for one year. It will cost you no more to have us send to them than it does to send it to you here. Think what a joy it will bring them each week with its message from home. We save you that trouble of putting on the wrapper, writing the address, putting on the postage stamp and carrying it to the postoffice each week without one cent of additional cost to you. There is no good reason why you should be put to all this trouble. We are at your service. Your friends would joyfully welcome The News wherever they are. They like to hear from South Manchester.

A Point of Interest

To all members of lodges in Manchester is to see that their officers holding funds of the order are properly bonded. There are over forty different societies in town and of this number less than half bond their treasurer or secretary. Is this business? I can offer through the Empire State Surety Co. a bond that will protect the society at a very small cost. Better see me about this.

Five and Ten Cent Store

F. W. Woodworth & Co. of New York are looking for a suitable building here where they may conduct a branch of their enormous variety five and ten cent business. They have many stores of that sort in New York and New England generally and are desirous of locating one here. They have a large five and ten cent store in Hartford and do a very large business there. A branch of their great business would be a very desirable addition to the business interests of South Manchester. They are specialists in these lines. Who will build a store for them in South Manchester?

Piano Recital

A piano recital by advanced pupils of Miss Wilma Yurgens was given at her home on Bissell street yesterday afternoon. Fourteen pupils took part and gave a very good account of themselves. A goodly number of relatives assembled and enjoyed the music. The several numbers were enthusiastically received. At the conclusion of the work refreshments were served and a pleasant social hour enjoyed. Miss Yurgens was well pleased with the proficiency shown by the class.

Salvation Army

The Christmas tree exercises at the Salvation Army Citadel Friday evening were well attended and proved highly pleasing to those present. A nice program was well presented and the efforts of the children were enthusiastically received by admiring relatives and friends. The distribution of gifts to the children by Santa Claus was to them the one crowning feature of the celebration.

Lieut. Col. Damon of the Salvation Army will deliver his illustrated lecture in Darkest America at the Salvation Army Citadel in this place on Saturday evening, beginning at eight o'clock. It will be illustrated by 100 views and will be well worth attending.

Watch Night services will be held at the Salvation Army Citadel tomorrow evening beginning at 10:30 o'clock and continuing until 12:15 o'clock New Year's morning. Suitable addresses will be given. New Year's resolutions made and appropriate music and singing. The old year will be retired with prayer and the new year welcomed with song, and shout and praise to Almighty God, asking his blessings during the period dawning upon the world.

Card of Thanks

We wish to hereby most heartily thank Court, Manchester, Port of America, the members of the Center Congregational church and the good neighbors who so kindly assisted us during the illness of our five children with diphtheria; all of whom have now happily recovered. GOV. BALDWIN'S MESSAGE

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the General Assembly: The recent census of the United States shows that Connecticut has a population of over seven hundred thousand.

By that of 1880 it was less than 700,000 and by that of 1900 but a little over 900,000. Our growth in numbers during the first decade of the twentieth century has therefore been over 200,000, which is substantially the same as our growth during the first six decades of the nineteenth.

Public Economy. Seventy years ago, in the inaugural speech of Governor Ellsworth, he observed, and with much reason, that the people of this state resembled "an industrious, economical and well regulated family, presenting a republic which secures more good and avoids more evil than any other political community of ancient or modern times." Since he uttered these words, though our numbers have nearly quadrupled and our population has increased, in words, at least, our frame of government has proved equal to the strain thus put upon it. Another fact which he proceeded to mention, however, is worth repeating, and that is that the state was when he spoke not only out of debt, but possessed besides the school fund of over $2,000,000 an invested capital the interest on which met a third of the annual expenses of the commonwealth.

Since that time our invested capital outside of the school fund has been used by the state has contracted a debt of over $3,000,000 and our annual expenses apart from the payments on our current debt have risen from $80,000 to $3,700,000. In other words, our population has grown fourfold, our current expenses have grown not fourfold, which would be only to $320,000, but to nearly twelve times fourfold.

The Connecticut of today is no doubt a commonwealth of far more diversified activities and far more accumulated wealth than the Connecticut of Governor Ellsworth's time. It does far more and ought to do far more for the general welfare and uplift of its people. But whatever is thus done must be done with economy. It is not as efficient, and I am satisfied that our people are of opinion that the economy has not always been maintained during the last two years it is secured, cut where it will.

Our annual expenditures in 1909 were less than $1,800,000. From 1896 to 1907 they outran $2,000,000. During the last four years they have outrun $2,000,000 and steadily increased at the rate of about $300,000 a year. These figures do not include payments on contracts for the construction of state roads, though in my judgment these should be added to ascertain what is costing us to support our government, since such a provision would do us credit for permanent asset, but something that demands frequent renewal.

Now do they include anything laid out in lands, buildings or other permanent improvements. The investments of the state of that nature, according to the table prepared at the request by the comptroller, have increased from about $200,000 in 1860 to over two millions and a half in 1910. Among the larger items of ordinary expenditures during the last twenty years which have reached a point where some reduction is possible are mentioned humane institutions, agricultural affairs, the Connecticut national guard, printing, the state board of education, the fish and game commission, the factory inspector, bridges and ferries and state roads.

For current expenses of those of our humane institutions, classified by the comptroller under that head, we now lay out more than four times as much as we did in 1860 and nearly double as much as we did in 1900. For other humane institutions, classified by him separately, we laid out last year over $75,000, many of which went for current expenses.

State Purveyor. It seems to me that there is a lack of proper unity or coordination in the general mode of managing our state charities, into which we have fallen. They are under the charge of a number of distinct boards, each with a separate office and office force, each making purchases on its own lines and each proceeding on its own lines. The state board of charities has a very limited jurisdiction, and there is no state official having general power to purchase such supplies for all state institutions, whether charitable, penal, may require in the best market or on advertised proposals.

It seems to me that such an office, charged with the duty of making all large purchases of such supplies, should be created in the interest of economy. I consider therefore the recommendations of Governor Woodruff, made in 1907, that a purchasing agent, or as he might be termed, state purveyor, should be appointed to serve under the direction of the comptroller.

Removal of Salaries Officers. The general session of the state has been to consider the bill which proposes a commission on board whose members are to be selected by the governor and the public, and whose duty is to be to recommend to the governor the removal of any officer or employee who is inefficient or whose removal is in the interest of the state.

the. The board of commission has appointed a salaried official with such name as secretary or superintendent who under its orders and supervision has excluded the main purposes of direct management. There has never been any serious trouble under this system in procuring competent men to serve upon such boards or commissions or as secretaries or superintendents.

I call your attention to a recent departure from this policy, w. c. secus me now. In 1906 public acts of 1906, page 1023 the general assembly provided for the appointment of a board of directors to establish county homes for the care and treatment of persons suffering from tuberculosis, such board to consist of three members, each receiving a salary of $2,500 a year and his traveling expenses. They were authorized to appoint a secretary, to be paid $1,500 for his salary and expenses.

Our whole system of departmental administration seems to me, and I believe to the people of the state generally, to be marked by an unnecessary multiplication of public agencies and of positions carrying salaries of $2,500 a year and more. It is to be made them eagerly sought for as rewards for party service.

We have nine single commissioners or heads of departments and more than forty boards of commissioners or directors to manage other departments and institutions or to deal with some particular subject. In some cases the fields of these various agencies overlap. In others one could readily and better perform the work now committed to several.

The governor here recommends that the office of factory inspector be abolished and that the duties be performed by the commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics; that the office of building and loan commissioner outside of the school fund be done by the bank commissioner; that the office of dairy and food commissioner and the commissioner of public and animal industry be done by the board of examiners of barbers and the performing of such duties as are deemed essential by the board of health.

I also recommend to your consideration the propriety of broadening the powers of the state board of health, the public trust and the state board of agriculture and making some of the present commissionerships and minor boards, and of independent agencies, bureaus or other state boards deemed most appropriate.

The state board of health could, had it the means, co-operate efficiently with the United States in preventing the bringing into this state of cattle infected with tuberculosis or other contagious disease.

Not Many New Laws Needed. Connecticut has long been known as a state of steady habits, its controlling industry is manufacturing. Its people are making laws for themselves for nearly three centuries, but our general statutes are still contained in a single volume. In such a community there can be comparatively few general laws, and the government is by a well settled public sentiment, and no statute not supported by that sentiment will be likely to have any substantial benefit.

Few laws and short legislative sessions go together. Long legislative days go with short sessions. I believe that the general assembly, by proper effort and systematization, could accomplish its business and adjourn before the end of April. This can only be attained by the prompt action of committees upon all matters referred to them, and that, in turn, must rest largely on the ability of the members of the assembly, and in particular of the chairman of the board of railroad commissioners and a business man of large experience constituted this commission.

Public Utilities Commission. In 1907 a special commission was appointed by the general assembly to consider the laws with respect to public service corporations and to recommend any legislation regarding them which it might think expedient. The attorney general and comptroller, a former attorney, and a former chairman of the board of railroad commissioners and a business man of large experience constituted this commission.

Several election contests have already arisen turning on the construction to be given to the act of 1909 "concerning the preparation, form and use of ballots," on several points as to which its meaning is somewhat obscure. To avoid future doubts it is desirable to repeal the present act and to substitute a new one.

At party primaries, it occurred in 1907 and again in 1908. This bill which it recommended had been the subject of long investigation and study by competent men, and the measure so recommended merit your careful consideration.

Their adoption would seriously increase the expenses of candidates for office unless the state were to limit narrowly the kinds of outlay to be deemed legitimate and perhaps itself to assume the main burden.

Prevention of County Prisons. Our current practice at sessions to need amendment in several particulars. I recommend the following changes: First—It should require a sworn return of every candidate for public office, whether he does or does not constitute himself his "political agent."

Second—This return should cover all expenditures since the preceding November election made or liabilities incurred, together with a list of the names of the persons to whom such expenditures were made or liabilities incurred.

Third—The act should provide for the appointment of a board of examiners of barbers and the performing of such duties as are deemed essential by the board of health.

Fourth—The provision should be amended so as to set a limit of expenditures which no candidate could exceed. Such a limit might be determined by the number of electors in the office in question or by the amount of the salary attached to it.

Fifth—The provision should be amended so as to set a limit of expenditures which no candidate could exceed. Such a limit might be determined by the number of electors in the office in question or by the amount of the salary attached to it.

Sixth—The provision should be amended so as to set a limit of expenditures which no candidate could exceed. Such a limit might be determined by the number of electors in the office in question or by the amount of the salary attached to it.

Seventh—The provision should be amended so as to set a limit of expenditures which no candidate could exceed. Such a limit might be determined by the number of electors in the office in question or by the amount of the salary attached to it.

Eighth—The provision should be amended so as to set a limit of expenditures which no candidate could exceed. Such a limit might be determined by the number of electors in the office in question or by the amount of the salary attached to it.

Ninth—The provision should be amended so as to set a limit of expenditures which no candidate could exceed. Such a limit might be determined by the number of electors in the office in question or by the amount of the salary attached to it.

other prominently connected with labor organizations. The constitution of this state and the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States make it difficult if not impossible to work on an efficient system of regulation which has been given in some form or other by statute laws or workmen's compensation acts.

Right of trial by jury if he makes or if he demands against a claim of liability for damages due to accident or to any other cause. Our courts are to be kept open to all, and no one's property can be taken without due process of law—a phrase implying at least conformity to the maxim that every one of whom redress is demanded under authority of law is entitled to his "day in court."

But as respects employments involving great and special hazards to the employer it is my opinion that a statute casting certain new liabilities in the future on the employer would not be maintained by an efficient and rational system. It may be that it would be supported if even as regards certain lines of employment it limited the liability to a certain amount.

In drafting any project for such a statute, if made compulsory upon those whom it concerns, it would be well to consider the possibility of no kinds of employment not in fact involving great and special hazards. It would also be indispensable to guard against the possibility of a statute which would be a mere device to shift the burden of liability from the employer to the employee.

The special committee in this state to which this subject was referred by the general assembly in 1907, and which reported to the general assembly in 1908, recommended that the office of the town clerk in each town in which one is owned, forbidding the sale of real estate within this state unless in charge of some one approved by competent authority as capable of directing their course with due skill and care and making the owner responsible for all damages resulting from any voyage in one without proof of negligence or fault in the person or vessel.

The present system of the election of the general assembly has been from time to time the subject of complaint by inhabitants of the larger towns. The constitution of 1875, which provided for the election of 1902 was an outgrowth of such complaints, but accomplished nothing toward allaying them.

The present system of the election of the general assembly has been from time to time the subject of complaint by inhabitants of the larger towns. The constitution of 1875, which provided for the election of 1902 was an outgrowth of such complaints, but accomplished nothing toward allaying them.

the making of certain nominations and the passing of certain declaratory resolutions respecting political questions. That done, all is done which the constitution calls for. The result of general election of a legislature is not only to secure the election of a certain man as senator, but to influence the entire course of the session, most of which will have no relation whatever to the results of that election.

The Income Tax Amendment. The amendment to the constitution of the United States proposed to the states by congress regarding an income tax is one of the most important changes which have been made in our history. It is in my opinion a change which will be favorable to the interests of Connecticut. It is proper to remember that our own system of taxation for the first two centuries of our history was in purpose and effect that of taxing incomes rather than property. It is by no means impossible that we may in the future wish to revert to this ancient plan to supplement our present revenues, and that such a change would be a desirable one to the taxpayer to pay a tax which would be a direct rather than an indirect tax.

It is unfortunate that the wording of the proposed amendment is such as to raise upon its face a doubt as to its meaning in respect to a national poll tax. In the view of some lawyers it would authorize congress to tax the holders of state securities upon the income derived therefrom. If that would be possible for congress then it would be possible for congress to tax the holders of state securities upon the income derived therefrom. If that would be possible for congress then it would be possible for congress to tax the holders of state securities upon the income derived therefrom.

Before acting on this proposition of congress I recommend that the attorney general be given the opportunity to present his views on this question of its legal constitution. Election of State Senators on a General Ticket. The present system of the election of the general assembly has been from time to time the subject of complaint by inhabitants of the larger towns.

able cause, after giving an opportunity for a hearing before him, any executive officer or not chosen by a popular election, including such as an appointive county or town officer, a casual member, of course, be filled by those in whom was vested the original power of appointment.

The state now employs in its different departments, bureaus, offices and institutions a very large number of clerks and other subordinate agents and helpers. In the case of many of these positions it would be a safeguard to the public interests if appointments were conditioned on merit. To attain this end civil service examinations would be necessary.

To secure the proper introduction of this system into the state I recommend the establishment of a state civil service commission to serve without political bias and to be independent of the executive branch of the government. It should have the power to employ a salaried secretary, who shall also be a chief examiner.

Authorizing Municipal Bonds by General and Special Acts. In my opinion the general assembly would be saved much unnecessary trouble and the interest of our own and municipal corporations promoted were they allowed by a general statute to borrow money by the issue of bonds for the purpose of raising within the limit of a certain percentage of their respective grand lists.

The rapid progress of the art of aviation during the last few years calls for new legislation. Flying machines and, though to a less extent, dirigible balloons, have become a part of our life. The force of gravity against which they must always be contending makes them a constant source of danger to the public.

It is not improbable that they will be used before long as a regular mode of transportation between distant places, and already they are frequently directed through the air in connection with public exhibitions or by way of experiment.

I recommend the passage of a statute providing for their registry in the office of the town clerk in each town in which one is owned, forbidding the sale of real estate within this state unless in charge of some one approved by competent authority as capable of directing their course with due skill and care and making the owner responsible for all damages resulting from any voyage in one without proof of negligence or fault in the person or vessel.

Home Course In Health Culture. XI.—Hygiene of the Nose and Throat. By EUGENE L. FISK, M. D. Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

TO the artist or sculptor the nose is an architectural affair, adding beauty and distinction to the countenance according as it conforms to his ideals of line and harmony. To the physician the nose is one of the most important organs of the body. When in a healthy condition it is a veritable "guardian of the threshold," warning us against tainted food, lifting out our air and destroying microbes of disease, protecting the delicate throat and lung tissue from cold, dust, dirt by filtering, warming and moistening it, and finally exerting a most important influence in regulating the body heat.

Importance of Proper Breathing. The nose is a very complicated and important apparatus, and any disturbance of its functions, if allowed to continue, is likely to have serious effects. The most frequent cause of nasal obstruction is the growth of adenoid tissue in the roof of the throat.

Importance of Ventilation. The sleeping room should be well ventilated, but the sleeper should be protected from draughts. The temperature of the living room should never rise above 70 degrees F.; 66 to 68 degrees is the most comfortable. The fresh air should be avoided by supplying moisture. A pan of water placed on the stove or cloths hung near the fire will answer the purpose.

Tetis of Nose and Throat. Great caution must be exercised in interfering with the natural processes in the nose. Frequent douching and the use of irritant ointments is often very irritating and injurious. In some old standing cases of catarrh of the nose, the removal of the adenoid tissue is necessary, but it should be directed by a physician.

Danger of Ear Disease. The eustachian tube, which connects the middle ear with the throat, opens just behind the outer margin of the nasal opening into the throat. These orifices are often prevented by adenoid tissues, and proper ventilation and drainage of the ears are prevented. This leads to deafness and sometimes to abscesses of the ear and brain.

Prevention of "Cold". The most serious diseases of the throat and lungs, including consumption, often have their inception in a common cold. While nearly all diseases of the air passages are directly caused by germs, there must usually be present a lack of resistance, either general or local, before germs can give rise to disease.

Dangers of Pampering. Overfeeding of cold weather and over-dressing in warm weather are responsible for frequent colds. Medium weight underwear should be worn and the outer clothing adapted to changes in the weather. This does not mean that we should leave overcoats in the winter time and be uncomfortably warm in an endeavor to handle the system. Old people especially should dress for comfort in cold weather, but comfort can be had without wearing heavy furs.

Value of Bathing. The morning bath is a valuable measure for cultivating a resistance to colds. This should be taken in a warm room and if the bath is not in a room which should stand in a tub of water and sponge or spray the body with water sufficiently cold to cause an immediate reaction, but not cold enough to cause chills or shivering. The reaction following the bath will hasten the reaction and improve the circulation. When the cold has not been borne, cold bathing is likely to have serious effects.

Value of Exercise. The morning bath is a valuable measure for cultivating a resistance to colds. This should be taken in a warm room and if the bath is not in a room which should stand in a tub of water and sponge or spray the body with water sufficiently cold to cause an immediate reaction, but not cold enough to cause chills or shivering.

SINCERE FRIENDS, AND THE OTHERS. Be Wise Enough to Have Fomer Kind or Go Without Any.

If you cannot have sincere friends, best have none at all. You who are starting out to make your little social circles should realize this. It will take you longer to make a lot of really sincere friends, but they will be worth while. You will have them all your life. The others will make you live beyond your means, dress beyond your means and act in a superficial way which will bring you no good.

Value of Friendship. The morning bath is a valuable measure for cultivating a resistance to colds. Point of Interest
To all members of lodges in Manchester is to see that their officers holding funds of the order are properly bonded. There are over forty different societies in town and of this number less than half bond their treasurer or secretary. Is this business? It can be done through the Empire State Surety Co. a bond which will protect the society at a very small cost. Better see me about this.

House Messenger
Alvin W. Greene of this place was a candidate for House Messenger for Hartford County the contest for which was decided by the Republican county caucus Tuesday evening, who made his home at the Hotel Hartford, 100 Parkville for the position. It took five ballots to decide the contest. Mr. Greene standing up well in the running until the last ballot when he dropped to a better place. Frank E. Adams of Farmington finishing second. Representative Aaron Johnson nominated Mr. Greene and urged his selection. He pointed out the fact that this is the largest republican stronghold in the county and that a messenger for the House had never been chosen from this place. That was the only contest in the caucus in which a Manchester man sought appointment. It was also the first time Mr. Greene sought legislative favor. The result of the ballot was as follows:

Mrs. Bobb of Maple street was taken ill with scarlet fever Wednesday.

At Hospital
Patrick R. Hayes of Highland Park was taken to the St. Francis Hospital Monday. He is suffering with ulcers of the stomach and it is said to be critical. The surgeons had to use a stomach pump upon him yesterday. He rebelled against this treatment but finally had to yield. Mr. Hayes is a married man, 62 years old and has been through his share of vicissitudes and strong man. He has never been employed as a member of a strong, stony family and always has had excellent health. He is not disposed to submit to medical or surgical treatment. His robust and plucky nature rebels against it.
