Think It Over
(Press Bristol)
Those publications that have been selling stock to their subscribers for the past year or two were more prolific in promises than in dividends. How the investments pan out is pretty well illustrated by Human Life of Boston. That was a good magazine of a popular character conducted by excellent writers, but financially it was not a success. It was sold in sections the other day for $3.00. Those who bought its stock can frame their certificates. This is all they are good for. Human Life has gone the way of several other well-known periodicals of late. Those failures emphasize the fact that the publication field is overcrowded and the rivalry is so keen that the newcomers have little chance of success.

Representative Johnson of Manchester's endorsement of persistence, aggressiveness and faith in an idea. These qualities we can commend without being enthusiastic over the results achieved in this particular instance. Mr. Johnson evolved the famous net weight package bill and pushed it with such vigor and determination that it has passed the Senate and House and will probably become a law. The strongest objection to the bill was that it sought to accomplish in state territory what should be done on a national scale. Under this law all packages must contain an honest statement of the net weight of contents. (Press, Bristol.)

SENATE AND HOUSE CLASH. One Favors Judson Measure, but Other Disapproves.

BANKS BILL GOES THROUGH.

Lower Branch Put It Up to Upper to Accept a Measure Without Constitutional Disabilities—Amendments to Constitution Pass Senate, and House Rejects Entire Measure—Session Dragging On.

[Special Correspondence.] Hartford, June 21.—Senator Judson would have liked yesterday afternoon to take up and dispose of the Banks public utilities bill right then, but he had agreed with Senator Mitchell before the latter left for New Haven that this should not be done and the matter go over till today, and there were other senators who weren't willing to spend yesterday afternoon on it. After getting in the order of the day for today, the income tax amendment, not over to next Tuesday, he moved that he do the order of the day for today at noon, but this raised strenuous objection on the part of Senators Woodruff, Marsden and Spauldry, and Senator Mahan moved to amend by making it tomorrow.

Senators Britanade and Fenn were inclined to come back to immediate consideration, and Senator Judson was willing, suggesting that he would secure Senator Mitchell's rights by a pair, but the Mahan amendment was finally carried, and the matter will come up as the order of the day tomorrow at noon and the position taken at the afternoon session, though the minority bill supporters are very confident of their ability to defeat the Banks bill.

Popular Election of Senators. The seven Democrats of the committee on federal relations presented a majority report in favor of the popular election of United States senators and the four Republicans a minority report against it. After considerable debate in the house yesterday that body passed the majority report, which was transmitted to the senate and the senate also passed a constitutional amendment providing for terms of four years for members of the house, two to be elected in 1912 and one every two years thereafter.

Hot Unofficial Debate. Wednesday was also signaled by a very hot though unofficial debate in the hall of the house before the opening of the session of that body between Benedict M. Holden of Hartford, who is active in support of the Banks bill, and Ralph O. Wells of Hartford, the attorney for the State Business Men's association, who is active in opposing the bill. It was on Wednesday that the railroad men's joint legislative demand circulated its cry of "denouncing the majority bill too."

Both houses did a little business on Wednesday, though the day was really by the bull before Thursday's house session over the public utilities question. In the senate there were passed two amendments to the Connecticut constitution which originated with the session of 1909. One provides that the lieutenant governor shall act as governor when the governor is incapacitated and supplies a lack in the constitution which became apparent and had to be remedied for the time by special legislation when Governor Elihu Root was in New York city. The other provides that legislative sessions shall terminate in June. The vote on the first was 24 to 0 and on the second 20 to 0.

There was some commotion in the upper branch over the measure which would provide for a state purveyor or purchasing agent and which the judiciary committee had reported unfavorably. Senator Judson, in reporting for the committee, remarked that he was in favor of the proposition, which had been deemed good enough by Governor Woodruff, Filly and Baldwin to merit recommendation in their inaugural messages, and it turned out that there were enough other senators who favored it to be recommended to the committee.

Governor's Salary Increased. The house passed two bills affecting the salaries of the governor and lieutenant governor, which are raised from $4,000 and $200 to $5,000 and $1,500 respectively, and took up, but later tabled, the measure removing the limit from the law which prohibits the damages recoverable after accidental death to $5,000. Mr. Huxford of Stamford moved that this go to the foot of the calendar, but the suggestion of Judge Tingler of Rockville it was passed over and retained its place on the calendar.

Mr. Easton of Simsbury moved an amendment to the bill as reported, making the limit $10,000, which was the amount suggested by Governor Woodruff in his inaugural message. This was tabled for printing and is regarded as indicative of the stand of the smaller towns when the matter comes to be fought out in the legislature. The towns do not feel willing to have all limits removed, fearing the possibility of them of a verdict which would bankrupt a county.

Thursday was the day of days in the house and the senate, and in recognition of this did little business. It did stay in session long enough, however, to listen to a long diatribe of Senator Donovan's, with Senator Spauldry for its object, when the latter moved that the petition of E. C. Terry and other officials of railroad brotherhoods against the minority public utilities bill, which Senator Judson had characterized as a screed when it was first presented to the senate by Senator Mahan, be taken from the table and transmitted to the house. Donovan gave even more abusive than his own, which is saying a good deal, and Spauldry replied in plain words. The senate finally decided by a vote of 15 to 10 to leave the petition on the table.

House Debate on Utilities. In the house nothing of moment was done previous to 11:20, when the public utilities matter became the order of the day. At that time the floor of the house was by resolution cleared of all but the members, newspaper men and senators, but from then till the body adjourned for the day the galleries were thronged with an attentive crowd. Judge Banks opened the fray by moving the substitution of the Banks bill for the majority report of the judiciary committee and followed this with the ablest speech he has ever made in legislative halls, in the opinion of many who heard it.

He pointed out the disabilities of the Judson bill, which he said had come to the committee only at the very last moment before the report was made, but which he had the same night sent a copy to Daniel DeLozier in Washington for his opinion of it. Mr. Davenport's condemnatory letter was the one he read to the house last week, and Judge Banks read Thursday's letter which he then wrote Davenport, which resulted in the so-called Banks bill. The house leader dwelt at some length on the question of the minority bill with the way the Judson bill jumbles the executive, legislative and judicial powers and insisted that when Governor Baldwin said he believed it to be a constitutional bill he was simply expressing his belief that the courts ought to decide it to be so.

In fact, however, Judge Baldwin's chief justice of the supreme court had four times been in opposition to the other four justices on just these points and was not a first rate authority concerning them. Judge Banks also referred to other bad features of the minority bill, notably the provision under which the attorney general must bring to trial any public service commissioner on complaint of 100 citizens.

REP. JOHNSON'S SPEECH. Local Legislator Cites Arguments Favoring Utility Bill. In the House of Representatives last week Thursday when the Utility bill was the order of the day, Representative Aaron Johnson was one of the spokesmen in favor of the minority report. In his argument, Mr. Johnson used some facts concerning the Manchester trolley fare question which we deem will be of interest to our readers. The speech in full follows:

"Mr. Speaker: 'In the beginning of time, the Creator of all things said, 'Let there be light and there was light.' Light has guided the inheritance of the earth through space of time till our present day. Here we are guided by the same light and in the bills before us a compromise of twelve cents and said he could guarantee that we would get that without trouble. I said to the lady who was shaving me at that time that I was afraid the report would be laid up matter how clear the facts are. It has been demonstrated right here this session that even though a committee has voted to give a favorable report, that report nevertheless has been held up by undue influence."

"The people of this state are entitled to a commission before which they can go with their grievances and receive proper attention and fair treatment and not have to be treated as now of us in the case before a committee. A committee whose first appearance is friendly to the people, but in the end no committee at all but consels for the public service corporations. The people of the State of Connecticut are entitled to a similar commission, for they have allowed the general assemblies in the past to grant away all their natural resources in form of franchises free of competition and free from compensation, but the people are no longer willing to allow this without ample protection in return, for the people must be protected, their rights protected and their interests protected for it is in the opinion of the people that it must be granted and no rails or barriers under heaven will stand against the forces of public opinion and public demand."

"I stated in the beginning of my argument that it is difficult under present conditions for the people to get fair treatment. This is based on my own experience in the Manchester trolley fare question and others. Three years ago we came to the legislature and asked for justice. The House stood by us but we were beaten in the Senate by one vote. Since then we have tried Mr. Mallen direct but failed. We are here again asking for justice and whom I have the honor to represent, that I would work and vote for a public utility commission, a commission with full supervision over all public service corporations, a commission with power to regulate rates, and I did not fulfill my promise to my constituents I would be a traitor to my trust. 'The people of the state have called

Given Loving Cup. The Class Day exercises of the class of 1912 which were held at the Assembly hall of the local high school last Tuesday afternoon and its program as carried in these columns last week was printed out. An interesting part of the days exercises was on the program, was the presentation of a loving cup to Joseph T. Madde. It was presented by William Buckle, in behalf of the Manchester Club of Yale. This club is composed of members of the university from this town and for the past three years they have presented similar cups to members of the senior class. The cup is given to the member excelling in athletics. Madde, the recipient of this year's cup captured last season's basketball team and was unanimously selected to captain the team again next season. He has also been doing good work on the firing line of the high school base ball team. The cup came as a surprise to him, but is nevertheless highly prized. It bears the following inscription: 'Manchester Club Cup presented to Joseph T. Madde, Best All Around Athlete 1910-1911.' Philip Carney was given a cup last year and John Martin was honored in a like manner the year before.

Firemen To Have Outing

Fair weather is all that How Co. No. 2 asks for tomorrow for it is on that day the fire laddies will hold their annual outing at Lake Wanganunga. They will be up with the birds tomorrow morning and will make an early start, so that they may enjoy as much of the day as possible at the lake. They will go out in a bus. At the lake they will make their headquarters at Clark's grove. They will amuse themselves with boating and fishing and at noon will sit down to a shore dinner, with all the fixings that the season affords. The committee having the outing in charge is composed of George H. Howe, John P. Shaw and Michael Holman Jr.

Parsons Theater

THE CHRISTIAN
Halt Calne's gripping drama, The Christian, is engaging the attention of the Hunter-Bradford Players at Parsons theater, this week, and so careful and studied has been the preparation for the work that one of the finest productions of the present season is the result. First made famous on the stage by Viola Allen, The Christian has long held the record of being one of the most powerful as well as popular dramas of this generation, and it has long been the ambition of the Hunter-Bradford to present it during the stock season. There will be performances of The Christian tonight and twice tomorrow.

Odd Fellows Memorial Day

Next Sunday will be Odd Fellows Memorial Day and the members of King David Lodge will observe the day by decorating the graves of their deceased members and by attending services in the Center Congregational church. They will meet at the Masonic hall at nine o'clock in the morning and march to the East cemetery, where they will decorate the graves of the deceased members. At the close of the decoration services they will march to the Center church where they will have a sermon by Rev. Dr. George W. Reynolds. B. J. Bendersen will be marshal. Members are requested to bring flowers and to wear the regulation cap and white gloves.

Connecticut Guide

The summer edition of The Connecticut Guide, containing the revised time tables, has just come from the press, and examination shows it to be up to the usual high order of excellence and also that it includes some additional features. For the purpose of facilitating the use of the Guide, separate indexes for the steam and trolley tables have been added, which prove valuable in quickly locating the desired table, as the tables are alphabetically arranged. Steamboat time of sailing are given, and the tide tables are included in the issue. The Connecticut League Boat ball schedule is printed in the volume. An important addition is the publication of the Springfield steam and trolley time tables.

The War Fifty Years Ago

Tennessee Ratifies Secession--First War Balloon Appears--Battle of Big Bethel, First Engagement Between Organized Land Forces, Results in Union Defeat. Federal Generalship in This Fight Severely Criticized. Lieutenant Colonel Greble and Major Winthrop Killed. Johnston Evacuates Harpers Ferry Because of Approach of Three Union Armies--McClellan Busy in West Virginia Preparing to Follow Confederates Routed at Philippi--Beauregard Takes Charge at Manassas.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.
(Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.)

PREPARING for war is a grim and a business. Perhaps those engaged in making ready for the great civil war in 1861 were too busy to think much of the tragic end, but at this distance it is apparent. For to our children of peace it is difficult to understand how millions of men and women can become so wrought up by the fighting fever as to risk life and all for a cause, though doubtless we would do the same thing if the call should come. Yet we look with a certain awe and wonder at the spectacle.

Measured by the number of battles fought and the amount of blood shed 1861 was the least important year of the conflict between the states, but we cannot so estimate it. There are other factors in the reckoning. Both the north and the south were going into untried fields. For the most part they had no precedents. They were facing novel problems and had to decide new issues, the hardest task men ever undertake. They were at the parting of the ways and were required to choose the direction they would go, carve out the tools for the work in hand. It is difficult to organize a war as to conduct it when organized. It is as great a feat to call an army into being as to win battles with that army when it becomes a fighting entity. We his cooped up forces. Then on June 10 came the battle, ill starred for the north, resulting not only in defeat, but in the loss of two gallant officers.

Battle of Big Bethel.

Big Bethel is about ten miles from Fortress Monroe and is on the road from Hampton to Newport News. Nearer the fortress is Little Bethel, and the Confederates had forces at both points. These troops had annoyed the Union outposts and had even taken a few prisoners. They had also improved the negroes of nearby plantations and compelled them to help dig intrenchments. General Butler ordered an offensive movement, putting General Pierce in charge. On the night of June 9 General Pierce ordered two regiments under Colonels Duryea and Townsend from Fortress Monroe and one regiment from Newport News under Colonel Bendix to meet near Little Bethel and take the enemy by surprise in the early morning. That the troops might distinguish each other from the enemy in the darkness they were told to wear white cloths about their arms. Colonel Bendix afterward claimed he had never been informed of this arrangement.

With Colonel Duryea's regiment in the lead and Colonel Townsend's following about two hours apart, a rapid march was made. In passing through a wood Colonel Townsend's should not undertake 1861. To those on the inside the labor was a colossal and the anxiety perhaps as great as in the later years of actual conflict. The great battles were but the visible manifestation of the forces evoked in 1861. Then was laid the groundwork for Vicksburg and Gettysburg, for Atlanta and Appomattox. Then were sown the dragon's teeth that sprang up in millions of armed men.

Small Naval Engagements.

Yet 1861 saw actual fighting, and the week ending June 10 chronicled the first battle of the war between organized land troops. Up to this time there had been naval bombardments and skirmishes between the land forces, but no battle worthy of the name. At the battle of Big Bethel--there were no events of particular importance during the week. On June 4 the United States steamer Susquehanna arrived from abroad to serve in the war. On June 6 the Harriet Lane engaged a battery at Big Point, opposite Newport News. The vessel had but one gun that would reach the fort, while she was hit several times. On June 7 the forces under General Patterson resumed their march from Chambersburg toward Harpers Ferry, and fresh troops from Washington also started toward the same objective. On June 8 the people of Tennessee ratified the secession of their state. On June 9 a war balloon, then a new thing in America, was inflated at Washington. On the same day word came that Fort Pickens was in danger. This fort was threatened at the same time as Sumter, and Lincoln started a movement for its relief even before he did that for the moor of Major Anderson and command was fired on from ambush, one man being killed and several wounded. The fire was returned and the regiment literally took to the woods on the other side of the river, contemning the firing, bearing the flag, and marching to the rear only to discover that two Union troops by mistake had fired on each other. Colonel Bendix, arriving ahead of Colonel Townsend, had concealed himself in the woods. When the other appeared Bendix, believing Townsend's troops to be the enemy, had ordered an attack. This unfortunate blunder not only resulted in the killing and wounding of several Union officers in both regiments, but warned the Confederates at Little Bethel, who beat a hasty retreat and joined the other force at Big Bethel. Thus the federals were compelled to attack an army twice the size of that originally contemplated and to do so by daylight with the foe alert and prepared.

GENERAL BENJAMIN F. RETZER, COMMANDING TROOPS AT FORTRESS MONROE FIFTY YEARS AGO

more and Ohio followed for a part of the way. Patterson with his Pennsylvania troops was approaching rapidly, and to his support several regiments from the mountains were hurrying. It was expected that any day would witness the first great battle of the war. General Joseph E. Johnston was in command of the Confederates, however, and he was ever a cautious commander. He did not wait for the Union troops to strike, but on June 15 evacuated, thus saving his army to decide the day at Bull Run.

In the meantime General McClellan was busy in West Virginia. After the rout of the Confederates at Philippi he was preparing to follow them and engage in another engagement. This did not transpire for a month, however, when there was another small battle at Laurel Hill. Before this time General Beauregard had taken charge at Manassas.
