CURIOUS DOMESTIC PETS.

Musical insects and waiting mice. Among the many curious domestic pets of the Japanese are their musical insects and waiting mice.

In the verandas of Japanese houses may be seen small, exquisitely cut bamboo cages, from which in the hush of dawn and at the close of summer days proceed quaint little whistlings, tinklings and trills.

It is at evening that the Japanese sit at their ease to listen to the music of their imprisoned insects.

A Century's Lapse

What Was Accomplished Under an Indian Fakir's Instructions

By F. A. MITCHELL Copyright by American Press Association, Ill.

There are many singular processes known in the east that are not understood in the west.

The Japanese say that waiting seems to be as essential to the happiness of this mortal as the sprig of poppy for a convenient pivot round which the mouse can whirl.

It is narrated that on one occasion in his early manhood Washington came very near the settlement of a dispute, so common in the case of fighting a duel.

It was in the town of Alexandria, where the young Virginia colonel was quartered with his troops, that an election dispute occurred, and in the heat of the party excitement Washington was invited to the scene.

Record of the case of Mrs. Maud M. Maurer, who was to have been guillotined for the murder of her husband, is a story of a century's lapse.

Mr. Payne, of receiving a note from Washington the next morning asking him to call upon him at his residence.

FOR MORE POWER

Principal of High School

Since the tie-up of the East side lines by the blow-out of cables on June 13 and the expiration of the contract with the Hartford Electric Light Company for the furnishing of power for the interurbans nearly completed, the capacity of the plant is to be largely increased, as is that of the Commerce street power station in Hartford where the turbines have recently been installed at the West street station.

It is believed that sufficient power will be generated in these stations to increase the efficiency of the local lines, and also of the lines running out of Hartford and the interurbans.

USEFULNESS.

Nothing in this world is so good as usefulness. It binds you fellow creatures to you and you to them. It improves your own character, and it gives you a real importance in society beyond what any artificial station can bestow.

Spraying Elm Trees

Tree Warden Ulrich has a force of men spraying the elm trees about town for the elm bark beetle. Some of the trees are in bad condition as a result of these pests. On these trees the spraying will show little beneficial effect this year, but it will show the results of the spraying next year. Some of the trees have not been visited by the beetles as yet. The solution used in the spraying process is composed of kerosene and soap to which water is added. Two gallons of water to one of the solution make the proper mixture. The spraying of these trees should be done in the spring and it is probable that necessary measures will be taken so that it will be done next year.

Entertained Firemen

The members of Hose Company No. 2 held a drill last Monday evening. The firm started from the hose house and ran the apparatus to the corner of Main and Butler streets, where a coupling was made to a hydrant and the hose laid out. No water was turned on. This hose was then replaced in the wagon and returned to the hose house. The firemen then went to the home of Henry Morgan, secretary of the company where they were entertained. They were shown about the grounds which Mr. Morgan has made very attractive by building terraces and has laid out shrubs and hedges of various kinds. The grounds were much admired and demonstrated what can be done by a little skill and labor to transform a "rugged piece of land" into an attractive garden. The party returned to the hose house where music, card playing and social intercourse rounded out a very pleasant evening. Ben Parker followed the meeting and was the guest of the evening. Refreshments were served.

Another Hearing

The selection given notice in another column that they will give a public hearing in the hall of records next Monday evening at eight o'clock on the petition of The Connecticut Company for a change in the location of the tracks now extending their car barns and West Center street. They desire to have said tracks laid west of the present office on land belonging to the company. At present part of the track crossing the car barns is on land owned by the town. It would seem that there can be no objection to this request and it is not likely that any opposition will be brought out at the hearing. However, any party who is opposed to the granting of the petition they should present themselves at the hearing Monday evening and be heard.

The Baseball Corporation

The stockholders of the Manchester Baseball Corporation have received notice that they will give a public hearing in the hall of records next Monday evening at eight o'clock on the petition of The Connecticut Company for a change in the location of the tracks now extending their car barns and West Center street. They desire to have said tracks laid west of the present office on land belonging to the company. At present part of the track crossing the car barns is on land owned by the town. It would seem that there can be no objection to this request and it is not likely that any opposition will be brought out at the hearing. However, any party who is opposed to the granting of the petition they should present themselves at the hearing Monday evening and be heard.

PEAFOWL ETIQUETTE

The Hen's Formal Introduction of Her Brood to the World.

For bringing up their families peafowls are a model to every other feathered fowl in existence. The nest is usually made of a quantity of dry sticks, and when fairly set and on the difficulty is to find out where the hen is. So beautifully does she hide her young from the eyes of the intruder that it is often possible to tumble over the nest before recognizing it. In this nest are laid from three to four large white eggs about the size of those laid by the common domestic goose.

When the chicks are hatched out they are the most delightful little brown birds imaginable. The color is a rich deep brown, and they much resemble young pheasants both in size and in coloring. Many people have often laughed at the curious etiquette noticeable in the behavior of these toward their parent. But the peafowl etiquette in introducing young chicks to their parent is at least as curious. As soon as the chicks are able to walk the mother marshals them in a procession, and leading herself, she stalks to the place where she and the others are generally fed. Having been introduced to the nest, she takes them back to the nest, and they are not seen any more for some weeks. The hen will come and be fed, but the chicks are supposed to remain in retreat till they are grown to the size of spring chickens, when they come out and join the rest of the fowl and learn to feed for themselves.—Country Home.

ELECTRIC MILK.

That is the Name That Was Once Given to Rubber.

M. de la Coudanise, a French savant, was traveling in 1713 in Ecuador with an expedition sent out to measure a degree of the meridian for scientific purposes. He kept a journal, and the following entry is dated July 11.

In the forest of Quito there flows a kind of resin which is called "cauchou." When it is cut it can be molded into any form. It is impervious to rain. He further describes how the natives used it for making a special kind of springs, and in April, 1745, when he had returned from his journey, he presented a sample of "cauchou" to the Academy of Sciences in Paris. The French word for rubber—"cauchou"—is simply a corruption of this Indian name.

La Coudanise treated the product as a mere vegetable curiosity. It was presented to a French engineer, who first studied and utilized the substance. He embarked for Guiana with a model of the fruit and a sketch of the leaf. He carried along the rivers, offered the natives drink and music and when he had assured himself of their friendship he took them to the river and showed his patterns and asked them to indicate the plant. His efforts were finally successful, and he obtained good rubber. He presented to M. de Maurepas, who went to court in them. The "electric milk" as it was termed, was the first to be used in the world. It was first used in the year 1790.

A Friendly Penguin

I outdid a friend for a penguin, which became an interesting pet. The friend wanted the bird for its skin. On his ship the bird soon got accustomed to its surroundings and found that the cook was one to keep on good terms with, and he haunted the galley getting many tidbits. It was always in attendance when the market boat came alongside in the morning and he boarded the steamer as he carried the day's provisions aft. Strange to say, it developed a great liking for lettuce, although its natural food is fish, and another curious trait was that it would never pick up food from the deck or out of water, but would always take it ravenously from the hand. It behaved like a child and would make a whining sound as if begging to be lifted up and would cuddle down and appear to be quite happy when being carried.—Scotsman.

Mosaic Work

The origin of Mosaic work is unknown. We may be sure, however, that it began among some oriental people. It had attained to great excellence in Greece in the time of Alexander and his successors. The Romans also excelled in Mosaic work, as is shown by the many preserved specimens today to be seen in the museums. The art was revived in Italy by Giotto, Cimabue and others and from Italy made its way into the other European countries. The finest of the Mosaic work of the last Italian period are little less than miracles.—New York American.

Grim Recollections

"Now that you are famous, Mr. Him, we propose to place a tablet on your former home." "What?" "What would you wish us to say?" "You ought say that it was ejected for payment of rent," replied the somewhat embittered bard.—Washington Herald.

The Voice of Mary Etta

It Proves a Safeguard in Time of Need

By CLARISSA MACKIE Copyright by American Press Association 1911.

"Never mind, Ben," encouraged Mary Etta as her husband shrugged into his overcoat and picked up his hat. "Everything will come out all right in the end. All the other farmers in the county have met with the same failure that we have, only you're getting the best of most of them. You've got your trade to fall back on."

The Miller expressed deepened on Ben Madison's handsome face. "It isn't so easy going back to work under a foreman after being my own boss for six years," he said bitterly. "Mary Etta winced. 'I know it, dear. But suppose you didn't have a trade and couldn't make out for a year, besides paying all our living expenses and giving you a splendid start for the spring. You might be able to buy another cow in a few...'"

Ben watched breathlessly and cheered as he sat at the piano. He had already admitted he was mistaken in his estimate of the value of the piano. He had been looking for the piano on the curtain a scene that took his breath away and left him sitting in stunned silence while he watched the piano player play. In a few moments he had produced the pictures of a thrilling scene from flames as a tall tenement house burned.

Ben listened, seeming to hear the broken truth in the words of the piano player. He had heard the old time Mary Etta had sung that last Scotch hymn "My An Comfort."

"Hurray!" cried Ben joyously. "I got the job all right, Mary Etta. I'm going to work tomorrow morning. You got something for my lunch?" "Lots," said Mary Etta, smiling through her tears. "Do you mind going back to the bank? I don't care. I'll go with you. I'll be there at ten o'clock."

Ben and Mary Etta were both smiling as they walked down the street. Ben was holding a large bundle under his arm. Mary Etta was carrying a basket on her head. They were both looking at each other with a sense of relief and joy.

LIABILITY BILL TAKES TWO DAYS

Governor Baldwin Has Doubts of Its Constitutionality.

NEW LONDON GETS $1,000,000

Senate Passes Advisory Initiative and Referendum Bill—Great Commotion in House Over Sending Trolley Fare Bills to New Public Utilities Commission—Governor Appoints Railroad Commissioners to New Commission. All Cities Coming into Connection to Be Specified.

Hartford, Conn., July 19.—The Connecticut senate did a day's work of considerable size yesterday on its four orders of the day and other matters. The first of these orders of the day was a number of trolley and railway fare bills which had come over from the house after being adversely reported by the railroad committee in order that the matters they contained might be taken up with the new public utilities commission. These were rejected, though after a long discussion of one which provided for but one five cent fare between any two points within the city of Waterbury, which Senator Lawlor wanted treated differently from the rest.

Then after a short discussion, participated in by Senators McNeil, Judson and Donovan, the senate passed its second order of the day, a bill providing for the advisory initiative and referendum on legislation, greatly to the surprise of the senate itself. The vote was 27 to 6. The third order of the day, the bill providing for a state purveyor, once reported unfavorably by the judiciary committee, recommended again reported in the same way, received little discussion, but was passed by the senate, the report of the committee notwithstanding.

Liability Compensation Measure. Then came the employers' liability workmen's compensation bill. Senator Judson was the first speaker on this and offered the first lot of seven or eight amendments which were offered during the day. He eliminated the limit of compensation, namely, from the second part of the bill, exempted employers of four or less persons from the provisions of either section, struck out the exemption of agriculturists (as at Governor Baldwin's suggestion) and struck out the assumption of risk provision. Senator Judson spoke for three-quarters of an hour in favor of the bill with these amendments in it.

Senator Brinsmade then took up the burden in favor of the bill, but offered a couple of amendments, one to reduce the compensation from 80 to 50 percent of the wages of the victim of an accident and the other reducing the duration of time for payment of compensation from eight to six years. At 1:22 the senate recessed to 2:15, and when it reassembled, Senator Packer, who is a manufacturer, spoke at some length in favor of the bill, which was followed by others both pro and con. Senator Spelacy was one who defended the bill as reported at length, arguing for one amendment, that reducing the 60 per cent to 50. The senate was unable to finish the discussion and got to a vote about midnight. The recess set the subject over to this afternoon for final settlement.

New London's Million Dollars. Meanwhile the house had not been idle. For an hour and a half it discussed the matter of appropriating $1,000,000 for the improvement of New London harbor and at length passed it which it would have done with but five minutes' discussion just as well. There was but little opposition. A very long time was spent on the enactment of a part of the town of Ellington, lying just outside the borders of the city of Rockville, to that city, which had been reported unfavorably by the committee on new towns and probate districts so long that this and the New London matter were the only subjects actually decided during the day's session, which lasted from 11:35 to 2:30 without a recess, and in the end voted to accept the report and give the petitioners leave to withdraw. Last week Wednesday brought up in the senate one of the sharpest exchanges of personalities which have come this session, when the senate committee on senate appointments reported the names of five gentlemen for trustees of the Connecticut School For Boys at Meriden, sometimes known as the reform school. There was no connection with the names of John T. Walsh of Middletown, who reached, when Senator Frisbie of that district offered an amendment naming George I. Allen, clerk of the state in the penitentiary commission, in place of Mr. Walsh. Senator Judson then joined Senator Donovan who got on one of his characteristic rambles, in saying some very unpretty things about Mr. Allen's supposed activities in connection with the recent public utilities legislation, to which he was said to have been opposed. There was also witnessed the significant spectacle of Senator Spelacy's favoring Mr. Allen against Mr. Walsh as

THE CUCUMBER

One Way to Dress It and a Good Way to Grow It. If ever an anthology of the fables of the earth comes to be written quite an entertaining chapter could be made out of the cucumber. And some of the extracts would provide material for a manual exercise to decide whether they are humorous or serious. For example, what did the Greek poet mean when he said of a certain woman:

More tender than a cucumber? Only one meaning would have been taken from that equivocal statement by that famous doctor who used to declare that the only way to dress a cucumber is to cut it into very thin slices, sprinkle it with the finest oil, pepper it plentifully, cover it with vinegar—and then throw it out of the window! On the other hand, Thackeray tells how he had delicate cucumbers stuffed with forcemeat while his cousin, that lady, "with white supper early and was passing out of the dining room when he happened to walk behind this cucumber, who was devouring his evening meal with gusto and eating the cucumber with relish. He passed his hands over his backstop's head, feeling for the bump which he thought would surely be there, and he said to himself, "What a bump! Your head is solid bone."

FOX HUNTING IN ENGLAND

It is More Than a Sport; It is a Sort of Religion. In England sport is not only a religion; it is the religion. If a man is a good sportsman, he need not be a good citizen. It may seem hypocritical to describe fox hunting as a religion and the fox as a deity, but it is a bare, bald, unadorned fact. The true fox hunting sportsman exhibits all the attributes of the devotee, the fanatic, the martyr. He is ready to die for his faith. It is not because he would cheerfully allow himself to be burned alive rather than hunt a fox, but because he would die for the fox. He would die for the fox. He would die for the fox. He would die for the fox.

Learned His Own Value. A husband and wife combination in vaudeville, with the husband as the feeder and the wife as the real attraction, were the stars of a new show. The husband was a comedian, and the wife was a singer. They were very popular and got much newspaper space; also they had $1,000 a week. The husband was a comedian, and the wife was a singer. They were very popular and got much newspaper space; also they had $1,000 a week.

Artificial Eyes. The earliest record of artificial eyes occurs in a very rare work by the French surgeon Ambrose Pare, entitled "The Art and Mystery of the Playes et Pratiques de la Teste Humaine." Paris, 1561. Pare gives a description and figures of artificial eyes to be worn in cases where the eyeball has given way and all the humors have escaped. They are to be supported by a hollow sphere, made of gold, coated with enamel painted in natural colors. With the exception of the gold they are exactly like the eyes in use at the present time, which are made wholly of glass—London Notes and Queries.

Character in Handwriting. I show a professional how to write a letter I had received. He took a very unfavorable view of the handwriting. "It is the handwriting of a man who is a man of letters," he said. "It is the handwriting of a man who is a man of letters," he said. "It is the handwriting of a man who is a man of letters," he said.

Sarcasms. Spartacus was a Thracian of noble birth. While serving as an officer in an auxiliary corps of the Roman army he distinguished himself by his valor. He was reduced to slavery and made a gladiator. Escaping, he collected a body of slaves and gladiators, 70 B. C. He was defeated by the Roman general Crassus. Spartacus was a Thracian of noble birth. HAD A HARD SKULL

The Escalator Catcher Who Was the Original Bonehead. Ed Ashenback, for many years a manager of minor league teams, in his book, "Humor Among the Minors," writes of the origin of the expression "bonehead," which is now used by its synonymous terms of "solid ivory," "mushroom head," "crazy dome" and "cement skull," so common in baseball.

An American Wife in Berlin Shows Ability to Take Care of Herself. By SARAH EHRLICH. Copyright by American Press Association, Inc.

When Commander Haverlaugh, U. S. N., went to Berlin as naval attaché at the imperial court his daughter, Louise, was just thirteen years old. Though so young, she had been a heart's content of the emperor's court in Augsburg, where her father had been stationed for three years, besides having gone through several campaigns in West Prussia. She could not be said to be a flirt—no, that she went out of her way to find any one to flirt with; indeed, there was nothing aggressive about her. The first serious love affair young Louise met with in Berlin was something that acted as an incentive for him to make love to her.

It was not long after the marriage that Baron von Hilderschof was ordered away from Berlin on some temporary duty. There was one man in Berlin, Count Gethart, who had been very kind to Louise before her marriage. This man the Baron disliked and detested. Before leaving the capital he said to his intimate friend, Captain Manteloff:

WASP WAIS! CONTESTS.

Curious Cause of Contesting in Old Time Girls' Schools. A letter recently received from a trunk shows that in the sixties of the last century plain girls' schools thought they were fitting the girls for society by trying to train them to retain small waists. Accordingly they offered prizes to the girls having the smallest waists. The girls were put through a course of training for retaining their waists measure. The conditions of the contest were that the contest should not be removed on resting at night and that each pupil must be inspected every morning to make sure she had not loosened her corset. One of the persons who engaged in the contest afterward wrote of it:

"Some of us tried hard to be permitted to retire from the contest, but we were rebuffed for stultifying ourselves and accused of making fools of our principals. On the following morning the undergoverness, with her maid, came as usual to superintend the toilers, and after satisfying herself that each lady was drawn in to the utmost she fastened it in a knot at the top and passing the cord through a piece of card, placed her own seal on them, so that any attempt to loosen the corset during the night would be infallibly detected in the morning."—Detroit Free Press.

WHITE DEER SKINS.

They Passed About as Banknotes at One Time in China. In China, the first currency in the world credited with using banknotes, and which were as valuable as the notes we are accustomed to use, were made of animal skins. The skins were made of animal skins, and were made of animal skins. The skins were made of animal skins, and were made of animal skins.

Stenographer's Stumble. A Judge in one of our middle west states advertised for a stenographer with experience in legal work. A number of applicants called at his office for the purpose of making application for the position. Each applicant was given a list to test her speed, accuracy, etc. Among the applicants was a young lady whose anxiety to make good showed in her nervousness. The judge dictated to her a few sentences in legal language, one of which was, "That would give him time to complete the devil's statute with a hatchet." Although much amused at her ludicrous blunder, the judge permitted her to go away without telling her of her mistake.—Case and Comment.

Madrid's Fearful Climate. Madrid is afflicted with the most changeable climate of any European capital. The temperature varies from as much as 107 degrees in the summer to as low as 10 degrees in the winter, and at all seasons of the year it indulges in violent fluctuations. It is by no means uncommon in December to wake up with the thermometer registering about 20 degrees and to find it more than 60 degrees in the afternoon. In one case some years ago an old man, 77 degrees was registered in the morning, and in the afternoon it was 107 degrees in St. Petersburg.

A Rug From Mazandaran

It is said to have belonged to one of the favorites of an ancient ruler, and its principal virtue is that whoever sits upon it is compelled to tell the truth while he sits thereon.

There was Alexander Felton, tall and lean and clever looking and very glad to be with Madeline Gray once more. There were James Hanford and his general manager after his recreation.

Professor Trayle and his pretty daughter Madeline were joined by several other persons who had found congenial during the tour. At times they had been separated for a few days, as each party followed its own particular itinerary beyond the principal stopping places.

"I was thinking of you," said Felton quietly. "Now that I have told you about my recent trip to the coast of the rest of you relate what is the greatest treasure you have discovered in your travels."

"I had to leave Constantinople, and I was sure to sit on the carpet of truth while you're telling it," advised Felton, with a laugh.

"I'm willing to try it," agreed his aunt. "I want to test the verity of the rug which you have brought back."

"I'll be sure to sit on the carpet of truth while you're telling it," advised Felton, with a laugh.

"I'll be sure to sit on the carpet of truth while you're telling it," advised Felton, with a laugh.

25 YEARS IN BUSINESS

Frank Goetz To Celebrate Successful Business Career

Next Tuesday, August first will mark the twenty-fifth anniversary of the business life of Frank Goetz, the well known baker of New Haven.

Mr. Goetz was born in Germany and came to the United States when he was eighteen years of age. He arrived here January 1, 1886. He started to learn the trade of a baker and after four years apprenticeship decided on Manchester as a location for his future ventures.

Mr. Goetz entered into the manufacture of crackers and established the Eastern Biscuit Company at Manchester. Selling out that business he organized the Frank Goetz Bakery Company of New Haven of which he is president and general manager.

Another company in which Mr. Goetz is interested is the East Shore Amusement Company of New Haven. This corporation owns and operates the Lighthouse Point shore resort at New Haven which is well known to hundreds of our townpeople.

Although his principal business interests are now located in the Elm City, Mr. Goetz is in no way interested in all that pertains to the town of Manchester, where he got his first start in a business way.
