More Water

The sixteen-inch iron pipe connecting the Case west pond with Cheney Brothers silk mill has been all set in position, the concrete pump house is completed and the finishing touches are being placed upon the concrete dam houses at the pond. The underground electric wires have been laid for conveying the electricity necessary to operate the pumping machinery and soon the pump will be installed. When sufficient water accumulates in the pond the machinery will be put into operation and this auxiliary supply to the Globe Hollow reservoir will be ready for use. It will be a most welcome addition to the water storage of this community and will make for better health and a more pure condition of the drinking water here. The present season has been the limit of our water supply severely but they have been so far equal to such demands as have been made upon them.

Site Purchased

Last week a representative of the United States Post Office Department was in town and brought with him a plan for $12,000. This was paid over to the representatives of Manchester Lodge No. 72, A. F. and A. M. for a site for a federal building at the junction of East Center and Main streets. The Masonic building will be moved off the site and the land will be left for such use as the postoffice department may see fit to put it to.

Another Hearing

The selection will give a hearing to property owners on West Center, Olcott and Adams streets at the Hall of records Tuesday evening September 5th at the streets named. Property owners on these streets have been notified of this hearing. The road superintendent has staked out the road along these streets in the case as was prepared. The case has also been at the town clerk's office.

Good Advice To Girls

Which is the wiser—for a young woman to spend her evenings upon the streets of the business section of the town to enjoy them at home with good books? There's a wealth of enjoyment in good books, and since we are blessed with a public library, they are within reach of all. The girl who is overindulging in her habits, or education, or moral worth, would do well to choose for her first book George Eliot's "Adam Bede."—Ez.

Pittsburg is Pittsburgh

The postoffice department has added Pittsburg to the city of Pittsburgh, Pa., so it will now read officially Pittsburgh. In consequence President Taft sent in the nomination of William H. Davis, postmaster at "Pittsburg." A recommendation always is required in cases where the names of postoffices are changed.—Ez.

DeForest—Grabbe

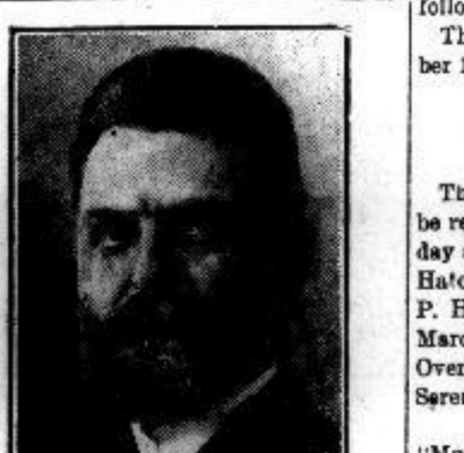

Arthur U. DeForest and Miss Augusta Grabbe, both of this place, without even the knowledge of immediate relatives, applied to Town Clerk Sanford M. Benton for a marriage license last week and Wednesday morning quietly took them to the North Methodist parsonage where they were Taylor, pastor. They were unattended. The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk messaline trimmed with silk lace and carried a bridal bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. They went to Vermont where they are enjoying their honeymoon at Mr. DeForest's country residence right in the heart of the maple sugar district—a fitting place to spend a honeymoon indeed.

The Huntsinger System The Best

The Huntsinger Business School stands for thorough training in modern methods for doing office work. Its teaching force is of the first water in thoroughness, and the nine teachers command the respect and the confidence of everybody. But Mr. Huntsinger himself is an important factor in his school, for he teaches daily, something no other business college principal in Central Connecticut can do. This is worth while to all pupils, and the school has for years stood in a class by itself in size and thoroughness.

E. M. HUNTSINGER, Principal

Its system of training is a short-cut from the public school to the office desk. Its teachers know how to help pupils over the rough places to win success. The faculty is chosen for its teaching ability and deep personal character. Remember, as the teachers so do the students.

Laurel Park

Mr. Charles P. Hatch, manager of Laurel Park has completed arrangements to entertain a big crowd at this park on Labor Day. He will have an enlarged orchestra for dancing, both afternoon and evening, and the young people and all those who dance know that the name of Hatch is a guarantee of the very best in the service line. Laurel Park has always attracted only the best class of people as Mr. Hatch insists on correct dancing and deportment at all times. There are thousands of people who wish to take an outing on Labor Day who do not enjoy the noise and crush of a promiscuous throng and to those people, Laurel Park is the place they will seek. There is ample entertainment for all tastes and amusements to be exclusive. The housing is

Circus Tomorrow

One of the prominent features with the Big Sautelle's new big shows this season is the highly sensational exhibitions given in steel barbed arenas by George W. Rollins' trained and untrained animals and forest bred carnivore animals and their lady and gentleman teachers. This far famed and marvellous attraction is entirely different and away from any similar entertainment. It is of inestimable value to all parents and children and of especial interest to students of natural history. This statement does not mean that the sets are too parties and during the time the trainers are in the arena there are enough thrills to satisfy the most bloodthirsty. Lions, leopards, jaguars, panthers and crows comprise the line featured performers in this department and as such has the good and

The line is being laid across Hamlin street to connect with the sewer already laid in that vicinity. The work started on Spruce between Birch and Oak streets and extended in a northerly direction. The residents of that section view with great pleasure the coming of this storm sewer. It means an avoidance of much annoyance from waste water during storm periods. It means drier cellars and dooryards and more important than all it means better sanitation as well as much more comfortable getting about.

markdown prices are ridiculously low,

not even covering the cost of materials, you'll find the dresses, suits and other garments will serve not only the balance of the season but all fall and winter, for the majority of the garments are not of extreme style, especially the beautiful street and evening gowns and dresses now selling at less than half their true value and desirable in style for a year to come. The woman with an eye to good taste and economy can save a substantial sum of money by investigating the final mark down prices at Wise, Smith & Co.'s department, where the entire stock of suits, coats, dresses, skirts and silk and woolen now make their exit at unprecedented low price.

Crawford Parlor Stoves

"Crawford Parlor." A genuine indirect draft stove with full return flue; the smoke passes down between the firepot and the outside casing of the stove to a flue beneath the ashpans, thence up and out through the back smoke pipe to the chimney, giving more heat and burning less coal. The grate center slides forward for dumping. Large clinker door; wide, deep ashpans; dust damper; nickel rails removable. Four sizes.

"Tropic Crawford." With or without down draft back pipe. Draw center grate. Best stove made at the price. Nickel rails removable.

Crawford "Wood Parlor." In this new heating stove for wood the front door swings open to give the effect of a fire-place. By moving a slide in this door the fire can be seen without opening the door itself. The slide openings are protected by wire gauze. The main top swings to one side and underneath it is a large plate that lifts to admit large pieces of wood. This stove is made in both direct and indirect draft styles. It is strongly made and very handsome. Three sizes, to burn 19, 22 or 25 inch lengths.

$10,000 LIMIT OF DEATH DAMAGES

Conference Committee Brings Two Houses Together.

GOVERNOR'S VETO REJECTED.

Senate Refuses to Repeal Personal Tax—House Finally Refuses to Pass Any Legislation on Employers' Liability and Workmen's Compensation. Final Adjournment Delayed.

[Special Correspondence.] Hartford, Aug. 30.—The session of the Connecticut legislature dragged along. Both houses have passed a resolution providing for final adjournment tomorrow, but there is no hope of that, and adjournment may not come until week after next. Certainly it won't come until the latter part of next week, for the members wish to have their state mileage good to attend the state fair in Hartford next week.

Yesterday was a big day in both houses, however. The senate accepted the report of the conference committee on the $10,000 limit of death damages law, which was in favor of raising the limit to $10,000 and placing a minimum of $2,000. Some of the senators, especially Senator Johnson, in a long speech made a strenuous effort to have the senate recall party pledges, but the body believed its own judgment superior to any hasty expression in a party platform.

The vote on the bill was as follows: Yeas—Senators Spedden, Bailey, Marlowe, Dickerman, Mitchell, Marsden, Parker, Woodruff, Platt, Lonsbury, Mahan, Avery, Park, Hammond, Elliott, Barrum, Friele and Wright—eighteen. Nays—Senators Hooker, Penn, Alsop, Hallock, Shalley, Lawlor, Bartlett, McNeil, Jr., Paddock, Peck, Johnson, Donovan, Meers, Hrinemede and Leonard—eight.

Present or not voting—Senators Piers and Foster.

Senators Donovan and Lawlor joined hands in the effort to have the senate turn down the unfavorable report of the judiciary committee on a bill which would repeal the personal tax law of Connecticut, but their efforts were not attended by any success. Of the thirty members in the chamber but thirteen were willing to support the committee, and it was accepted on the votes of the other seventeen.

Governor Baldwin Overruled. Mentioning the house was busy yesterday with many things, some consequential and some not, the former was the veto of the governor on the bill which provides for a state pension of $30 a year for every veteran of the civil and Spanish wars and takes away the exemption of $1,000 which property owning veterans now enjoy. The bill, which was introduced by the chamber but thirteen were willing to support the committee, and it was accepted on the votes of the other seventeen.

The Sunday bill made another appearance in the house during its Friday session, when not a quorum was present at any time, but considerable business was got through with the house had previously voted to adjourn on its action on the bill, so Speaker Scott ordered the measure returned to the senate without action.

Another bill passed by the house on Friday, which has already passed the senate, is likely to be of more far-reaching import than has been realized to date. It increases the powers of the state building and loan commissioner, who has now but some eleven building and loan companies to supervise and whose office, it is generally believed, should be abolished. This bill proposed originally to do that, but has been so altered as to give him powers in the investigation of oil and mining stocks. Hereafter his office will be a sort of information bureau, through which a would be investor can learn whatever he wishes about the oil or mining stock he is being importuned to buy.

The test on the employers' liability workmen's compensation bill in the house came on the report of the conference committee on the bill, which could be reached and the senate effort to get this general assembly legislation from the state. Last week was a three day week for the senate and a four day week for the house, though neither did much of anything on Thursday, when they adjourned in time to attend the dedication of the new drawbridge between Old Lyme and Old Saybrook at the mouth of the Connecticut river. The biggest thing of the senate's day Wednesday was the defeat of the state tax by a vote of 22 to 7, after an exhaustive debate of the subject which included a very neat and lucid presentation of the condition of the state's finances by Senate Chairman Peck of the appropriations committee in one of the speeches of the session.

The finance committee had presented a favorable report on a bill for a half mill state tax, but Senator Hammond, its chairman, found no objection to give for laying this tax, while Senator Peck took the lead and showed that the eight million permanent improvement bonds were taken care of by the bond issue bill reported by the finance committee. Connecticut's per capita tax now is but $2.75, while that of Massachusetts is $34. Connecticut has been paying for permanent improvements of late, improvements for which bond issues have authorized out of the running revenues of the state.

The veto by Governor Baldwin of the senators' pension bill appears to have knocked out all reason for a state tax and, though there were efforts to defend it, they were without vigor of argument or solid reasoning, so that the senate voted against the state tax as follows:

Yeas—Senators Hooker, Alsop, Bailey, Woodruff, Park, Johnson, Hammond.

Nays—Senators Spedden, Marlowe, Dickerman, Mitchell, Marsden, Parker, Platt, Lawlor, Lonsbury, Mahan, Avery, Bartlett, McNeil, Jr., Paddock, Peck, Donovan, Elliott, Barrum, Friele and Leonard.

The senate got into something of a parliamentary tangle over the bill incorporating a new trolley company to build between Shelton and Bridgeport over a new route. This charter was substituted for a bill reducing the fare between the two places over the Connecticut company's existing line, and, though there was objection to this course in the house, the latter made the substitution and passed the bill. After a lot of sessioning, during which Senator Marsden, chairman of the railroads committee, which had reported favorably on the bill, stated that it was in fact very useless, the senate made the substitution and tabled the amended measure for the calendar.

The house wrestled with the matter of railway taxation as disposed of in a substitute for the bill intended to amend the New Haven road's double taxation which the House Finance committee introduced. In the end, however, it provided for a commission to study the matter and report to the next general assembly.

The Milford water bill, which has occupied the center of the stage to such an extent this session, was finally settled by the house Wednesday in favor of Milford. The town's proposition was that the New Haven Water company might retain all of the flow of the Wepowaug river, which flows through the center of Milford and which the New Haven Water company obtained a right to when it purchased the Milford Water company. Mr. Evans of Milford, chairman of the incorporation committee, which had the matter in hand, made the fight for Milford and won out handsily, but very nearly lost again when he moved to reconsider with the hope that the bill wouldn't pass. It didn't finally, by a vote of but 73 to 69, and then went to the senate.

Monday's short time accomplished little in either house, though it was long enough to permit the senate to pass a resolution passed the day before to turn down the unfavorable report of the judiciary committee on a bill which would repeal the personal tax law of Connecticut, but their efforts were not attended by any success.

Senator Woodruff offered in the senate on Thursday a bill which will regulate telephone exchanges as disposed of in a substitute for the bill intended to amend the New Haven road's double taxation which the House Finance committee introduced. In the end, however, it provided for a commission to study the matter and report to the next general assembly.

The War Fifty Years Ago

Fierce Battle at Wilson's Creek in Southwest Missouri. General Lyon Moves Out of Springfield With His 6,000 Troops to Attack Enemy Under McCulloch and Price Two or Three Times as Strong—Colonel Sigel's Force Routed Early in Fight—Lyon Killed While Urging His Men Forward—Command Develves Upon Major Sturgis—Union Forces Withdraw to Springfield—Confederates Remain on Field—Result of Battle Saves Missouri to the Union.

By JAMES A. ROBERTSON. (Copyright by American Press Association, Inc., 1911.)

SECOND to Bull Run the battle of Wilson's Creek was the greatest fought in 1861. It was decisive in Missouri and sealed the fate of the state to remain in the Union. These things made it important, but the death of General Nathaniel Lyon, the Union commander on that field, rendered it immortal in the eyes of the nation.

After his return to Springfield from the fight at Dog Springs Lyon was in a desperate position. The time of day, and these were without training or arms, hence were useless in the fight. The facts seem to be that between two and three times as many as the Federals, Lyon had repeatedly asked for reinforcements from General John C. Fremont, then in command at St. Louis, but had asked in vain. In consequence he was far from confident of winning.

Sigel marched due south to strike the flank and rear of the enemy, and Lyon headed southwest to attack in front. Arriving while it was still dark, Lyon walked all day. He then surprised the Confederates preparing for the attack. The arrival of the Second Kansas frustrated this attempt. Price's troops still charged several times only to be beaten back. Tolton's Union battery had taken position on a nearby hill and helped to repulse the Confederates. This was one of the fiercest actions of the day, the battle becoming an unbroken rout.

An interval here ensued during which Price brought up fresh troops and started another attack all along the line. The Confederates charged many times and the lines reeled back and forth in a fierce struggle that lasted an hour. At this time Lyon's fire force was engaged. He had so few troops that he could spare none for a reserve. At last the Confederates temporarily gave way.

In the meantime Colonel Sigel had gained the rear of the enemy and began an attack from that side, driving in some scattering troops of the Confederates and following them for a long distance. At first he met little resistance. Sigel could hear the roar of Lyon's guns and expected the victorious Union troops soon to break through and join him. At this juncture General McCulloch's men advanced in considerable force, and Sigel thought them the Federal troops he had been anticipating. He therefore directed his men to withdraw, thinking that he had more than 20,000 men with suddenly the supposed friends opened on him a murderous volley that sent his lines reeling in confusion. Sigel's Division Routed. The deception was caused by the color of the uniforms, which were nearly the same in portions of the two armies. It was also stated by the Federals that the enemy carried a Union flag until close enough to find when they ran up their own colors. Most of the authorities agree in this statement, some of them asserting that this ruse was resorted to twice by the Confederates that day. As it was a trick often practiced in border warfare, it is credible, although the Confederate accounts of the battle do not mention it. At any rate, this was the turning point against Sigel. He now sought to withdraw, but nearly all of his troops were ambushed and killed or captured. Sigel himself narrowly escaping. He saved only one gun, his cavalry, dragoons and a part of his infantry.

The sudden disaster to Sigel left the entire Confederate force free to attack Lyon. This was about 10 o'clock in the morning and shortly after Price had been beaten back. Fresh Confederate troops now moved to the attack, and Lyon ordered up the Second Kansas and two companies of the First Iowa to charge the enemy's line, which was partly concealed in the brush. The Union general already had been wounded twice, once in the foot and once on the head, and had his horse shot under him, but this did not defeat him from personally leading the charge, swinging his hat and cheering on his men. General Lyon's Death. The charge succeeded in dislodging the Federal force at his back, but Lyon fell with a bullet in his left breast.

Hot Fight in Cornfield. Plummer's regulars became separated from the rest of the Union troops and crossed to the other side of the creek, where they suddenly faced a large body of Confederates in a corn field. The Union force was outnumbered in a skirmish in which it was attacked by two regiments and Tolton's battery and driven to the slope of the next hill.
