Kidney Troubles Attack Manchester and So. Manchester Men and Women Old and Young

Kidney illness young and old. Come quickly with little warning. Children suffer in their early years—Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are harassed, nervous, suffer pain. Women weary, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. The cure for men, women, or child. Is to cure the cause—the kidneys—Doan's Kidney Pills are for sick kidneys—Have brought relief to thousands of people. Manchester testimony per. v. v. it.

J. W. Frost, 14 William St., Manchester, Conn., says: "Words cannot express my high opinion of Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Hall & Brown's Drug Store. They restored me to good health when suffering from kidney complaint after everything else had failed, and I was always liable to tell others about them. You may continue to publish my former endorsement of this excellent remedy, for the benefit of other kidney sufferers."

An Island Bride

How I Made a Match on Halloween

By Mrs. SARAH B. ROBERTS
Copyright by American Press Assn., Inc., 1911.

On the coast of Maine is an island (Balleys' Island) where I have a summer cottage. My place is on the east side of the island, and on that side the Atlantic waves are unbroken by any land or shoals, so that they come slugging in upon the rocks. Surrounding the house, except on the sea side, are five trees, whose odor hangs pleasantly upon the air, especially pure in that region. The people who live on Balleys' Island on Orr's Island, being next north of Balleys', are mostly fishermen, though some of them do a little farming in vegetables and milk.

The several summers during my occupancy of my cottage a girl about seventeen years old—Myra Crofts was named—brought me milk. She drove about among her customers in a little buckboard wagon drawn by a small horse, so used to his mistress' songs that would sing quite cheerfully wherever he was placed. Myra was a study for an artist. Her clothes were of the poorest, but her face was comely and her figure fit for a model for a statue. I did my own housework and used to receive the girl at the kitchen door, and since I liked her well always speak of her with a pleasant word. One day I said to her:

"Myra, it seems to me that it is nearly time you were getting a husband."

"Oh, dear, no," she replied, showing by a toss of her head that the subject deeply interested her. "There's no one on the island who wants me, and I never go off it. And, as for the summer visitors, the young men are all too much taken up with the visiting girls to notice one who peddles milk."

I had my eye on a young fisherman, to whom I had taken as much fancy as I had for Myra. During the months of July and August he gave his attention to the summer visitors, taking them out in his motorboat; but after that had gone he would return to his fishing. I went out with him frequently and had every confidence in his ability as a skipper. There are numerous bays in Casco bay, and Ned Ballard could sail among them almost with his eyes shut. I was once with him in a fog some seven or eight miles out to the eastward, numerous islands and reefs intervening between us and home. Ballard brought me into port safely, never losing sight for a moment, and when we landed I said to him:

"How in the world did you do it?"

"To carry out my scheme for bringing you to stay till after Halloween, for on that day it was to be put in practice. My sailing days were not so frequent now since Ned Ballard was engaged with his fishing. His work was in the night, and he slept by day. He fished principally for mackerel, spreading his nets at set of sun and taking them up at its rising, and when lucky would find them well filled with fish, which he sold at a handsome price. He told me that in one haul he once took in 1,200 pounds.

"Moonlight nights were his favorite time to fish. There was sufficient light by which to work, but not enough for the fish down in the water to see the nets in which their fins were caught. I have myself seen him out between my cottage and Ragged Island—so called from its rugged shore—and when his boat would lie in the moon's shimmer I could almost recognize the silhouette of his figure.

"The next Halloween came at the full of the moon. I had thought of inviting Ned and Myra to my cottage unknown to each other and contriving that they should see each other's reflection in mirrors, but Ned was having such luck with his fishing and the light of the moon was so variable to give that I could not proceed. So I gave me an even one night. So I was obliged to invent some plan.

"I thought very little about Ned Ballard. He had heard of that evening game and was quite a victim of the moon's shimmer. I had seen him, and I knew he would be there."

It would be impossible for me to induce him to ask Myra to be his wife through a childlike faith in an apparition. But we women were made of different stuff from men, and I rely on Myra to believe in anything that had the appearance of being supernatural, especially if it pointed to a mate a few days before Halloween, when she came to deliver milk to me, I said to her:

"Myra, are you going to try to get a glimpse of your future husband on Halloween?"

"I haven't thought of doing so," she replied unconcernedly. "You don't believe in that, do you?"

"Why not? There are lots of queer things in the world. Is it any more wonderful that a girl should see the man she will marry than that messages may be sent through the air without even a wire to conduct them?"

"I never thought of that," she said. "If I were you, coming as you are to a marriageable age, I would try to get a glimpse of him."

"How?"

"Oh, at 11 o'clock on Halloween night start somewhere. The first unmarried man you meet you will marry."

"Where shall I go?"

"I have it. Go out on the water. I have a small motorboat, which I will lend you. You can run it, can't you?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, come here just before 11 o'clock. The moon will be nearly full. I will start you out on the water. You will pass by one person—a man in a suit. He will be your husband."

The innocent creature's face beamed with pleasure. She regarded what I told her as probable, as I had myself many years before considered it possible that with a bit of wedding under my pillow I would see my own future mate.

"He will be working at something," I continued, "but I can't just tell you what. You shall see for yourself."

"Oh, dear!" she gasped, putting her hand to her heart. "Do you really mean it?"

"Come at half past 10."

The next afternoon I saw Ned, who had just awakened from his day's slumber, and stopped to ask him how many mackerel he had taken the night before. He told me, and I led the conversation about through various themes till I finally broke away from what I was speaking of, saying:

"By the bye, Ned, do you know that tomorrow night is Halloween?"

"I didn't know it," he said.

"You don't believe in such things, do you?"

"I'm not a child."

"Well, child or no child, on Halloween the girl you are to marry will appear to you while you are working with your net."

He smiled with the look of one who took but little interest in the matter of Halloween, but would not be averse to seeing a wedding.

"Remember!" I added, moving on, "I tell you your future wife will sail past you tomorrow night."

"Remembered on a sashell!" he called after me.

I gave him no reply. All was working well for my plan. I only hoped that the weather would be propitious, for should it storm or be boisterous all would be spoiled.

As I expected, when Myra came to me on Halloween she was as becomingly dressed as her sunny wardrobe would admit. I had procured a flower during the day, which I put in her hair, and replaced her tweedy wrap with a white awning. The night air is chill on Casco bay, even in summer, and in October they are cold. But Myra had the warm blood of youth in her veins, and I knew a sweater would keep her perfectly comfortable. Fortunately there was no wind, and the sky was covered by a mass of clouds that rendered the heavens more beautiful, lighted, as they were, by the moon.

I took my charge down to a stony beach, where, there being only a long, low ocean swell, I had moored it. She got in, and as I grounded her hand at starting I noticed that she was thrilled with emotion. I pushed off the boat, telling her to steer for the north point of Ragged Island. I could hardly see Ned's boat between me and the point, but Myra was so excited that she was oblivious to it. As I saw her sail out into the moonlight I sent a prayer after her that she would find a husband and happiness.

Of her appearance to the fishermen I learned afterward from himself.

"I confess," he said, "that until I got to work setting my nets I thought of what you had told me, though I did not dream of its coming to pass, but as soon as I was busy I forgot all about it. Then I heard the explosion of a motorboat. Boat after boat went there except in summer, and I wondered who was coming. When the boat came near me I looked up, and there, her face lighted by the moon, standing with one hand on the tiller, was Myra Crofts. I was taken flat aback."

"Why," I exclaimed, "what brings you out here in the night all alone?"

"The answer never a word, just looking at me as if I were a ghost, or eyes, as though moved by some deep force. Her boat passed mine and I, jumping, moved in the moon's shimmer toward the narrow waterway between Orr and Balleys' islands. I could see it go through and turn northward, the double light of the anchorage over a little farther up."

It was Myra's faith that she had seen the man she was to marry that brought her to my scheme. Ned could not have been so lucky. The next evening the tale was repeated, and I was a much interested spectator.

"I was very much interested," she said, "but I was not so lucky as you were. I was waiting for you to see me, and you did not come."

The Cooks who have used the Single Damper of the Crawford Ranges

Crawford Ranges

will never go back to the troublesome two-damper range

The cost of the food spoiled by mistakes in regulating the ordinary two-damper ranges amounts to a large sum.

The Single Damper of the Crawford affords absolute fire and oven control by one motion—slide the knob to "kindle," "bake" or "check," the range does the rest.

The Oven of the Crawford has cup-joint heat flues which heat everywhere alike and make it the quickest and sweetest of bakers.

The Two Hods (patented) in the base—one for ashes instead of the old clumsy ash pan—one for coal, is a great trouble-saving feature.

Gas Ovens and Broilers above or at end of range, if desired.

Ask the Crawford agent to show you and write us for circulars.

EDUCATIONAL CLUB

Hear Talk on "School of Household Arts" By Miss Sears

The Educational Club met in the studio room of the High School on Wednesday afternoon and Miss Millcroft Sease gave a talk upon "Applied Housework in the Open Air School." The School Board has requested the Educational Club to turn over to it a sum of money equal to that formerly expended for the services of a cook, which an expert teacher in housekeeping could be employed, who could have charge of the cooking for the open air school and would give instruction in general housekeeping to girls of the Ninth District School.

The home made by the pupils of the Open Air School is now known as the "School of Household Arts" and here the eighth grade girls with others from graduates, making a total of sixty, are taught cooking, canning, setting table, duties of waitress, sweeping, dusting and cleaning. Laundry work will be added later.

Each of the sixty girls has two hours instruction each week. Three classes of four girls each are taught daily, the first from 8:30 to 10:30, the second from 10:30 until after dinner, and a third in the afternoon. Another set of a dozen girls are taught the next day and so on. The average age of the girls is fourteen. The lessons are progressive and the menus are consequent upon the progress. They are taught to prepare well balanced and nutritious meals for twenty-five persons. All bread, cake and food consumed by the pupils, except crackers, is made by the class. Their motto is "Waste not, want not."

An effort is made to teach the girls that housework is not degrading, and, to make the kitchen attractive, a new motto is hung upon the wall daily, such as:—"A cheerful cook makes a fine dessert."—"Sit a smile into the plates."—"Flourishing cooking makes children."—"Gossip and rain the cake." Credit marks are given those young cooks for good department, clean aprons, cleanliness in cooking, never being tardy and willing to help.

The cost of the meals including milk, but excluding fuel for cooking, has been for the first month this fall, 15 cents a child per day. Each child has hot cocoa and Graham crackers before school and a drink of milk, vegetables and a dessert.

On Monday a Halloween dinner was served which was greatly enjoyed by the Open Air School pupils.

The ladies of the club were deeply interested in Miss Sears' talk and felt pleased that the Open Air School was furnishing practical instruction in household arts to sixty girls.

Visitors From Abroad

Mrs. E. L. G. Hohenthal is entertaining two ladies from Bremen, Germany who are her first cousins. One is the wife of Captain Bernhard von Thullen of the freight steamer Silesia, sailing between Bremen, India, New York and Boston and presently taking on a cargo of kerosene oil at New York. Captain von Thullen is here also but will leave for New York tomorrow. His ship will sail for Calcutta, India next week. His wife will accompany him on the journey. The Captain speaks English fluently. This is one of the requirements of his office. The Captain's wife travels from on the steamer—a perquisite of the office of captain. The other visitor is Mrs. Bogge whose husband is chief engineer of the freight steamer Adamantia, plying between Calcutta, Hamburg, New York and Boston and due to arrive in Boston the latter part of next week. Upon the arrival of the Adamantia in Boston, Mrs. Bogge will join her husband here. The Hansa Steamship Company owns a fleet of 80 steamers engaged in transporting mail and passengers between Germany, India, South America, Australia, South Africa and the United States. The vessels named above are a portion of this fleet of merchantmen. The ships are large and have straight hair as distinguished from Africans. On the trip to India the steamships pass through the Suez Canal. The charges for using the canal are based upon tonnage. It costs $10,000 to permit Captain von Thullen's steamer to pass through with a load of freight. That is the price of passage one way only. The vessels of the Hansa Steamship Company carry no passengers other than the officers and crew and the family of the captain.

High School Notes

The weekly Botany was given by Miss Kellogg, teacher of English. The program follows:

Flora of the Connecticut Valley: violin solo, Mrs. Holman; vocal solo, Marjorie Duggan; mandolin selection, Dorothy Bennett; reading, Ernestine Doane; piano solo, Ruth Stroy; Bertie Lydell; piano solo, Florence Sherman.

At the meeting of the club were deeply interested in Miss Sears' talk and felt pleased that the Open Air School was furnishing practical instruction in household arts to sixty girls.

Road Roller in Use

The steam road roller which was recently ordered from the Buffalo Pipe Company of Buffalo, N. Y., arrived here last Monday and was taken out of the car and run up to the two burns on East Center street. Tuesday the roller was put in operation on Hollis street and the road roller will be used to make a good road bed on that street. Heretofore that street has been very sandy but with the use of the steam roller a good road bed is being laid and a nice gravel road will be laid. The road roller is being operated by Elwood Walker of Manchester Green. Mr. Walker has never had any experience running one of these outfits, but is being instructed in its use by a representative of the company from Buffalo.

Will Continue Armory

John F. Sheridan, lessee and manager of the armory, has announced his intention to continue the use of that place of entertainment as well as the Sheridan Theater. The armory is the only public place of suitable dimensions in town for fairs, for polo and for basketball ball. It is available for moving pictures, for theatrical performances by amateurs, for balls and dances and for the largest amusement hall in town. In view of all these facts Manager Sheridan has decided to continue to operate it as heretofore.

THANKSGIVING DAY

President Issues Proclamation Fixing November 30

Chicago, Oct. 30.—President Taft today issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation as follows:— "The people of this land, having by long action and practice set apart towards the close of each passing year a day of which to cease from their labor and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to Him who is the author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is the duty as chief executive to designate at this time the day of fulfillment of this devout purpose."

Children and Tariff

You, we have many children here in South Manchester. Thomas Gray has just finished taking the enumeration of children of school age in the Ninth School District. Incorporated and finds that there are 1858 such on the roll of honor. That is a goodly showing for a single school district and speaks well for the steady increase of population in this community no less than for its prosperity.

Last year the enumeration for this district was 1833. The present enrollment marks an increase of 25 pupils during the past year. With the constant development of the business of Cheney Brothers the growth of South Manchester must keep pace. During the present year they have put into operation a new mill, the largest they ever constructed. Even this great addition to their outfit does not seem to be ample to meet their steadily growing needs. It is understood that the erection of another mill by Cheney Brothers has been considered as one of the strong probabilities of the not distant future.

The political makeup of the next Congress may have an important bearing upon determining this problem. With the continuation of a republican congress and of a republican president the further material enlargement of the plant of Cheney Brothers may confidently be expected. The silk industry is largely dependent upon the continuation of a protective tariff. Homecrofters here and all others who intend to become such in this community should keep this all important fact in mind continuously. Their welfare and the welfare of their posterity will be employed here depend largely upon this problem. The fact is that the tariff is a local issue and affects this community more vitally.

Yours of this place should not permit themselves to be led astray on the question of a protective tariff. They should not be deluded into worshipping any false gods or idols in matters pertaining to the tariff. Whatever division of opinion we may have on local issues let us stand firmly and unshakably for a protective tariff. If we do our children will rise up and call us blessed. We have the children here and we need them in constantly increasing numbers in our business. We also need the business here to furnish them with employment when they are old enough to require it and to supply them with necessary education and bodily needs during the period when they are developing and before they take their places among the great workers of the land. The continuation of a protective tariff is one of the best known means to this end. Therefore, let us resolve to maintain it at all hazards.

Mask Caught Fire

While trying to play a halloween's prank on his uncle and aunt, Howard and Mrs. Taylor of Spring street last Monday evening, Julia Taylor, son of Fred Taylor of South Main street was badly burned about the face. The little fellow was carrying a lighted jack-o-lantern and wore a mask to which were attached thin whiskers. Just as he entered the house the whiskers caught fire from the lantern and in an instant burst into flames. Howard Taylor and the boy's father were in a front room and heard the shouts of Mrs. Taylor and the boy. Howard went out into the kitchen and tore the burning mask from the boy's face and immediately spread butter over the burns. The placing of the butter on the boy's face was very timely and relieved him of much pain. Both sides of his face were burned, as were his throat and right ear.

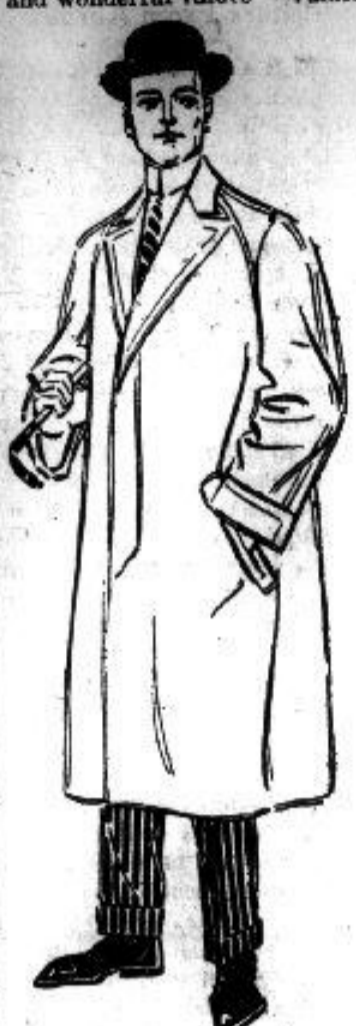

Advice for South Manchester People

People in South Manchester who have constipation, sour stomach or gas on the stomach, should use simple back support back glycerine, etc. as compounded in Adler's, the new German appendicitis remedy. WELCOMED HOME

Friends Give Fred H. Wall Reception At Oxford

Twenty-five covers were laid at the Oxford Inn Wednesday evening in order to extend a cordial welcome home to Fred H. Wall who has been recuperating in the Adirondack Mountains for the past three years.

It will be recalled that Mr. Wall was one of our prominent and energetic young newspaper men having a position on the city staff of the Hartford Daily Times and doing "hard" work on the side. He set too strenuous a pace and finally broke down and was forced by physical disability to retire. His three years of practical inactivity have apparently restored to him vigorous health and he now looks so well as to be entirely fit. He was able to "Come Back."

A course dinner was served by Landlord Michael J. Moriarty.

When the members from the Evanses came to Oxford on Wednesday evening Harry M. Burke as toastmaster opened the preliminary exercises with sundry remarks of a complimentary and welcome nature to the returning hero.

Prior to the final exercises, Toastmaster Burke on behalf of the assembled friends presented Mr. Wall with a sum of money as a token of esteem and good-will.

The banquet was a very successful one and the guests were very much pleased with the entertainment.

BUSINESS MEN MEET

Elect Officers, Dispose of Roast Beef Dinner, Make Speeches etc

The annual meeting of the Manchester Business Men's Association took place last evening and resulted in choice being made of the following officers for the ensuing year: President, W. E. Hibbard; first vice president, C. E. House; second vice president, G. E. House; secretary and treasurer, G. E. House; directors for two years, F. H. Anderson, Scott H. Simon, C. L. Baber, R. J. Hill, E. T. Ferris, director for one year, C. E. House, Watkins, Benjamin.

The total membership in good standing now is 121. The treasurer, Robert Houseworth, reported a balance of $12.88 on hand. The resignation was accepted with regret. A committee of five is to be raised to revise the bylaws and report. The officers were instructed to endeavor to secure an appropriation for the federal building at the December session of Congress. It was voted to limit attendance at the annual banquet to members of the association, to invited guests from like bodies in the state and to the speakers.

At 10:15 the party foregathered in the banquet hall where a roast beef dinner with trimmings was served. There were 45 present.

W. E. Hibbard acted as toastmaster and when the frog sat Hevanes was lighted called on for the following to speak: Dr. W. S. Gillow, Dr. W. R. Tinkler, E. S. Ede, F. A. Vaylance, C. E. House, O. F. Top, C. R. Hathaway, R. L. M. McNeil, E. L. G. Hohenbald, C. E. House, Watkins, L. J. Buchanan and N. B. Richards. It was 11:45 when the dinner arose and prepared to take their departure for their homes.

From various sources comes evidence that the Connecticut people are waking up to the need and value of a curfew law. Already it has been suggested in the town of New Britain and in other places where it is being done and thought by their neighbors. The revival of interest in this movement to save the children from the perils of the street is only one more evidence that Connecticut is taking a lively interest in all that pertains to civic improvement.

Take Notice Have you ever taken notice of the aluminum ware which Martin Nelson is selling for Thanksgiving especially the turkey roasters which he is very busy delivering? Now is the time to order them so as to have them in time for Thanksgiving. Martin Nelson, No. 2 Hartford street, South Manchester, is very grateful to the public for their generous response and cheerful giving.
