

BURNING ITCHING ECZEMA

TORTURES IT INFLECTS CAN NOW BE ESCAPED.

Try This Remedy at Our Risk. It is a pleasure to be able to point out a way for those who are now tormented with the terrific itching and burning of eczema and such skin eruptions, to obtain comfort and a smooth, healthy skin.

Our new remedy, Saxon Salve, which you have probably heard of already from some of your friends, soothes the skin quickly, stopping the itching and pain. And it also restores the skin through and through with its powerful healing and antiseptic properties so that marked improvement is soon seen and the eruption is driven away.

We guarantee that Saxon Salve will please you. Though mild and soothing, it is as good for grown persons as for children. If you have a skin disease of any kind try it—you get your money back if not satisfied.

May Prove Fatal.

When Will Manchester and So. Manchester People Learn the Importance of It?

Backache is only a simple thing at first, but when you know "in from the kidneys, that serious kidney trouble follows. That kidney disease may be fatal and you will gladly profit by the following experience. This is the statement of a Manchester citizen.

CAPTAIN CONKLIN. ANSON DISCUSSES ONE PLAY

New York Captain's Move in World's Championship Ball Series Is Analyzed by Veteran.

Capt. Adrian C. Anson, writing for the Chicago Daily News, comments on the one play, if any one could be chosen, which was the deciding one in a baseball game. Capt. Larry Doyle's failure to attempt the easy double play he had in sight in the fourth inning of the final world's series ball game and his late throw home that let Baker score and kept Murphy and Davis on the bags was the real turning point of that struggle.

In this inning Baker led off with a single. On the hit and run Murphy punted a long liner to the left fielder. Baker taking third, but Devere's fast fielding held Murphy at first. Davis hit an easy grounder into Doyle's hands and the latter, with an easy double play in sight, hesitated a moment and then threw home, but too late to catch Baker. Murphy took second on the throw to the plate, while Davis was safe at first. If Doyle had tried for a double play he could have wiped both Murphy and Davis off the bags. Then Barry would have had no occasion to punt, and more than likely would have been an easy catch. This would have kept Ames in the game, and, though the Athletics most probably would have won out, the final score would hardly have been the crushing total of 12 to 2.

At that stage of the game, so early in the action, it would have been good policy, in Anson's opinion, to have let that one run in and make sure of getting both the other base runners.

Uhllein had for many years been breeding trotting horses on a large scale, but while he owned many stallions and mares of rich lineage he never owned a great performer or great sire until he bought the Harvester and turned him over to Ed Geers to develop.

For several years it had been the custom of Uhllein to send a lot of undeveloped young horses to the sales ring, and from the various consignments to those events one came that by taking a record of 2:05 1/2 this year gave his breeder the first and only 2:10 trotter he ever bred. This was the gelding Ion Labor, by Labor Day, that raced so well this season.

Uhllein, after The Harvester showed championship form, decided to sell a large part of his other horses, receiving a small hand. He regarded the champion stallion as a horse beyond price, and when asked last fall if he would take $50,000 for him replied that he would not accept an offer of $1,000,000 for him.

"Pop" Geers has The Harvester in the string that he will race at Dallas, Texas, and at Phoenix, Ariz., this winter. At Phoenix, if the stallion is in good shape, and provided the horse is not sold, Geers will send him to smash his record.

Giants to Train at Marlin. The New York Nationals will train at Marlin Springs, Texas, next year, reporting there late in February. The New York Americans will do their spring practicing at Atlanta, Ga., beginning March 1.

A football player had his leg broken two minutes after he was substituted for another player. We suppose this proves the speed of the opposing team.

Fans want to know how Cincinnati will like its new manager. They say these fans have as little liking for managers as for umpires.

Here is a fine new word, "moo-cade". Do you get it? With a couple more like this one, a man could be welcome in any society.

INSIDE GAME

Football Player Said Credits Credit for Play.

Chances for Real Scientific Work Nearly as Great on Gridiron as on Diamond, but Spectators Do Not See It.

There is an "inside" football just as well as an "outside" baseball. The great difference is that there is so much more inside football that not only does the average spectator miss it, but the players and coaches themselves see little of it. At present it seems that the possibilities of "inside" football are unlimited.

Every player on a team has chances to pull off inside work, but the position which most needs the ability to grasp a situation and grapple with it in a new way is that of quarter back. Around the little man who calls the signals for the big eleven open a thousand possibilities for inside play, and many are the quarter backs who are to be played, the individual and collective strength of his own men, and the individual and collective strength and weakness of his opponents.

The quarter back must keep in mind the number of downs, the distance to be gained, the position on the field, the length of time that remains to be played, the individual and collective strength of his own men, and the individual and collective strength and weakness of his opponents.

Just a few instances: Under the new rules it is sometimes more advisable for a member of a team on the field to drop a forward pass, which he has caught than to hold it. This is on the occasion of a forward pass on a third down.

Poor Day for Trade. "Rainy day trade ain't what it was before that moving picture show started up next door," said the umbrella dealer sadly. "Used to be when people got caught in the rain they came in and bought umbrellas; now when they get caught and the Barker for the show goes 'em heading for my door he says: 'Step right in till it stops raining. Costs you less to see the show than to buy an umbrella,' and, by cricky, it ain't what most of 'em do."

Human Sacrifices Still. In some parts of Syria the pagans believe that doctors and druggists have a right to ask one man and one woman every year to make medicines out of their bodies. A druggist whose establishment was boycotted because he was thought to have tried to murder a boy, brought suit against the boy's parents for their interference with his trade, but he received no damages, as it was recognized that the suits were believers in the old superstition.

Deacon Hope's Performances

Deacon Hope was fifty-five years of age when he died, leaving the care of seven children on his hands.

Deacon Hope was a farmer, living about a mile outside the village. His reputation was that of a level-headed man, and he stood well with his church and all his neighbors.

One day, a year after his wife's death, he appeared at the house of the widow Sargent, in town. He was dressed up and his boots gleamed.

Three evenings later the widow Sargent was out to the woodpile at nine o'clock to bring in an armful of wood for the morning.

"It only me, widow!" said the voice of Deacon Hope. "You're here! I tell you to mind your business," he almost shouted at her in reply as he went off to the barnyard.

"I tell you, parson, the man has gone daft over the loss of his wife." "I hardly think so," was talking with him last Sunday.

"You Mind Your Own Business." Deacon Hope, who had been sitting in the parson's study, had been watching the parson's face.

Parliament of Religions in Chicago at the World's Fair Time Started at the Immigration.

The present Hindu population of Canada numbers about 6,000, all men, for no women are allowed to accompany them to Canada or to follow them after they have arrived and settled.

These are resident entirely in British Columbia and chiefly in the cities of Vancouver and Victoria and on the farms in the neighborhood.

It is interesting to note that the eyes of the Hindus were first turned toward America and Canada and the first beginning of modern emigration from India were inspired.

PENELOPE PONDERS By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Bob had taken his dismissal; his eyes were black with increasing gloom.

"This might be entirely different," she continued, "if I didn't think there was something in that head of yours that is worth getting out. I feel sure that you could make your presence known in the world if you only would."

"It is honestly acquired money—and my own," Bob glowered at her. "I am perfectly well aware of that."

"Any way," Julia went on in a hard little voice, "I will not marry a man who is wasting his life as you are, if you do not think you are worth anything."

With a swift, unexpected movement, Bob caught her in his arms. He bent his head over hers intending to kiss her, but he released her as suddenly.

LAYLIGHT FOR LABOR

Brain Worker Should Force Himself to Observe Sensible Hours of Toil.

TIME ORDAINED BY NATURE

Bad Habits, Hard to Correct, Too Easily Formed if One Allows Moods of Night to Influence—Never Let Accident Set Up a Rule.

Some men work best late at night. They claim that the machine gets warmed up and into high speed trim only in the later part of the day and small hours of the night. The quiet of night enables them to concentrate their thoughts. It is a time when interruptions are easily shot out. Sleep is the prospect when the task is done, and not added toil, so that they feel free to expend the last pound of steam.

It is folly to preach health rules to such workers. In fact, after the habit is established, night work appears to be about as healthy as day work. Yet confessedly it is against nature and relatively few can establish the habit.

Some brain workers go at their task only when they feel in the mood. The early morning, the six hours after breakfast, before exercise, after exercise, with and without food, indeed, all possible variety can be found in the biography of literary and professional men.

From which it is plain that accident alone sets up the rule for each man. The tyranny of habit once formed, with the exacting demand for results when in the field, holds the toiler, and he rarely changes.

An sound judgment would indicate that the day is for work and the night for rest, at an early period of life one should look to the tendency of habit. Why should not a brain worker begin his toil with the same daylight uses that other animals employ? Why not eat to work with the head as one eats to work with the hands? Begin in youth to set up the practice. Refuse to be permanently switched off by a few moods that chance to turn out fortunate. Two o'clock in the morning may have worked out well a few times, but that is no sign that late night work is to be the law of nature with you. Exceedingly bad habits have become fixed by coffee or stronger stimulants in a crisis.

No railroad locomotive was more fixedly held to its track than are brain workers held to favorite hours after five years on their job. The physician may scold, and a breakdown may threaten, but to change favorite hours after one is 40 years old is almost impossible.

Therefore take the matter up with yourself at the very beginning. Insist on healthy habits and sensible hours. Demand these conditions of yourself and refuse to work till the machine, the brain, comes to your terms. You had better lose one job now than 30 years of jobs later on, when you break permanently. There is something in the new birth of the morning that is nature's own secret. The elixir of the awakening can never be counterfeited by stimulants. If man does not greet the new day feeling at his best he has drifted from the joyfulness of his boyhood and is going wrong.

DEFER NOT UNTIL TOMORROW

Opportunity of Today is the Golden Moment to Be Seized and Made the Most Of.

There is no tomorrow; though before our face The shadow named so stretches, we always fail to overtake it, hasten as we may.

So the poet tells us. The reason is underlying, then, why you should read now, while there is time and you have the opportunity.

"The hardest thing to find in the house is yesterday's paper," a knowing one remarked. Therefore read now. Don't wait for tomorrow, but read and enjoy today. Duties, the whirl of everyday work, may call you tomorrow, and a good hour filled with enjoyment and profit will have been lost.

"Defer not till tomorrow to be wise," wrote Congreve to his friend. He knew, and you know, how much is implied in that sentence.

Tomorrow is in the distance. We can keep our hand on the wheel of today with an eye on tomorrow. Add to life's meaning and riches by getting another's point of view. You will profit by the other side of all questions by reading our page.

After all, live today, deeply, fully, wisely, and let tomorrow take care of itself.

Her Habit. "I don't like the woman you made me take out to supper. She has such a way of planting you down." "That's merely a force of habit with her. She's a dressmaker."

EGGS OUT RUSSIAN GEESE

Germany's Blow to a Great Trade Seriously Felt on Both Sides of Border.

Announcement has been made that the German authorities have suspended the importation of live geese from Russia on the ground that there is a considerable amount of disease prevalent in the frontier districts of that country.

Coming, as this prohibition does, immediately prior to the period when imports of live geese increase rapidly the question is serious alike to breeders in Russia, who will have large quantities of birds thrown on their hands; to German goose raisers, as they will be unable to fill up their pens; for the home production is totally insufficient to meet their requirements, and to housewives in Germany, who will find the already high price of what is an important article of food advance still further and probably be prohibitive. Russians state that there is no justification for this regulation, that it is a trade move in the interests of German dealers to force down prices and as a measure of fiscal protection to German breeders.

Germany imports annually about 8,000,000 live geese, of which seven-eighths come from Russia, where these birds are bred in vast numbers throughout the western and southwest European governments. They are brought from the raisers by traveling dealers, who drive them in huge flocks to the frontier stations, where they are entrained for dispatch to Berlin and other cities.

The cars used for this purpose are built in four decks, each car holding about 1,200 birds. Special trains are run in the season, consisting of a dozen to thirty-five cars, in accordance with the supply. As many as 50,000 geese have been imported to arrive at Maserichhof market, Berlin, on a single day.—Westminster Gazette.

MUSIC AS CURATIVE AGENT

Singing Teaches Correct Breathing and Lively Waltzes Have Good Effects on Melancholia Patients.

Two English physicians of prominence have recently asserted that the exercise given to the lungs in singing is valuable in the prevention and cure of diseases of those organs. They consider that increased professional recognition should be extended to this special therapeutic agency, as advisable in cases where pulmonary consumption is feared.

Singing involves correct nasal breathing, and this means that the air admitted to the lungs is practically germ free, and also the adequate development of the upper portions of the respiratory passages. Another effect is the maintenance of the elasticity and proper expansion of the chest. The necessary breathing exercises mean increased functional activity of the lungs. Then, there is the improved oxygenation of the blood, which singing necessarily promotes.

As we know, most singers and also those musicians who perform on wind instruments are a healthy looking lot. Not many years from now music will be recognized as a most valuable curative agent, especially in cases of insanity or morbidly. What tired, overwrought, distressed man or woman does not know the value of music. How many beautiful stories could be told of the power of music to sustain and restrain?

One of the greatest scientists living has testified that he was once kept from thoughts of despair and suicide by suddenly hearing in the next house someone playing Rubenstein's Melody in F.

In the Croydon Mental hospital, London, waltz music—particularly the bright, mellow comedy pieces—is used in effecting a cure for melancholia patients.

He Eats No Corn. "I am dearly fond of corn on the cob," said the mathematician, "but I haven't eaten any this season."

"What's the matter? It doesn't cost much."

"Well, that all depends upon how you look at it. Take it in the market, it's cheap enough, twenty-five or thirty cents a dozen ears. But I have to eat in restaurants, and there I would have to pay ten cents an ear or fifteen a dozen for it. Now, where do you suppose the restaurants get the courage to charge that much for serving hot what costs them only one-fourth that much in the raw state? If the corn were difficult of preparation for the table, if it took much trouble in the cooking or if it required elaborate sauces it would be different. But corn on the cob is the simplest thing a restaurant can serve, and for one, I don't purpose to let them make any 300 per cent. profit out of me on their corn."

Her Habit. "I don't like the woman you made me take out to supper. She has such a way of planting you down."

"That's merely a force of habit with her. She's a dressmaker."

Again God's bounteous hand has spread
The tables of the poor with bread—
Again our grateful fervent songs
Ascend to Whom all praise belongs:
Accept O God our thankful bliss
To Thee on this Thanksgiving Day.

The husbandman has sown the seed,
And Thou didst bless his work indeed;
He trusted in Thy sacred Word,
And harvest great was his reward:
So on Thy promises we stay
On this our best Thanksgiving Day.

The cattle on a thousand hills,
The wild bird with his thrilling trills,
Fish of the sea—the lion, bear,
All yield to Thy protecting care;
May all creation own Thy sway,
Thou God of this Thanksgiving Day.

We thank Thee for the sun's bright light,
The silvery moon, the stars of night,
For water pure—for fragrant air,
And for Thy tender watchful care—
For blessings all that with us stay
On this our best Thanksgiving Day.

We thank Thee for the Gospel truth,
For blest old ages—for hopeful youth,
E'en troubles great—for grief and care,
Knowing they will our souls prepare,
Strengthening our faith with Thy love,
For God's own best Thanksgiving Day.

Great God, accept our thankful songs,
While hymns of praise swell on our tongues;
Guide Thou our feet o'er life's rough

A DUTY AND A GRACE

"And in the power of God shall I pray before you, that the which ye have heard of us, and ye shall be able to do it."—Gal. 3: 22

BE ye thankful! said an inspired apostle, writing to a company of early Christians, who even in stormy times of possible or actual persecution were exhorted to be of good cheer and to "count up their mercies." Paul's words are not only hortatory, but also mandatory. It is the duty of the Christian, in all vicissitudes of life, to be thankful. A believer is never justified in forgetting God's benefits to him. He is expected to figure out every now and then the sum of the divine favors that have been shown to him, or what might be called the statistics of divinity. It is true that divine mercies have been innumerable, and cannot be tabulated with anything like completeness; yet the Christian, believing in the grace of God, dwells upon these mercies in thought and to render vivid to his mind, by discreet reflection, so many of the statistics of divine favor as he is able to discern providentially unfolded in his past life.

There is, then, a duty of thanksgiving. Praise is the expected thing, gratitude is demanded. God is disappointed, and even angered, when men receive his gifts without returning thanks. The Lord is gracious, but that is no reason why the children of men should be ungraciously thankless. Thanksgiving is a part of the code of duty of a Christian. It is an integral portion of the decalogue of moral law. It is a kind of extra service, or supererogatory activity added to the body of duty otherwise complete, but is of the warp and woof of the Christian's life.

For such knowledge of our bodies and minds, and such reverence for them as makes intemperance impossible. "The thankful" was not the idle, chance remark of a sentimental apostle, but is the New Testament interpretation of the Old Testament burden of blessing.

Forget Not His Benefits. Why first rejoice over? Count up your golden mercies; count up your opportunities to do good; count up your "exceeding great and precious promises;" count up your joys of fellowship in an incorruptible inheritance, and then mark on his benevolent face, "Forget not all his benefits." Bless the Lord, O my soul, and I'll that is within me, bless his holy name, "is the declaration of an appreciative heart."—Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D.

Washington's Proclamation. The first Thanksgiving day proclamation ever issued by a president was signed by George Washington in 1789. The original is held to be in the possession of the President. Mr. W. Williams, who inherited it from his grandfather, William Ripley of Concord, N. H. The proclamation was issued by request of both house of congress through their joint committee.

the birds look up when they drink, as if in mute recognition of the heavenly source of the bits of blessing which fall to them, and certainly man, much more richly endowed and blessed, should do at least as much, and express his "Thank you" both by the testimony of the lips and the generous actions of the life.

Thanksgiving day is a proper and convenient occasion for considering both the duty and the grace of gratitude to the great Giver of all good. But Thanksgiving day is not simply for the abstract discussion of general ideas present in thought or stirring the emotions. This day does—

For the gladness and the cheer,
For the trembling and the fear,
For the storm and for the peace,
For the gathering and the cheer,
We bless Thee, oh, our God!

For the heart and the shade,
For the gladness and the cheer,
For the storm and for the peace,
For the gathering and the cheer,
We bless Thee, oh, our God!

For the hope and for the fear,
For the storm and for the peace,
For the gathering and the cheer,
For the gladness and the cheer,
We bless Thee, oh, our God!

anyway," said the girl, as she opened the gate and passed down the highway toward the village and the railroad depot.

"And if you come home as wet as a hen don't say I didn't warn ye. It's going to come, and it's going to be a buster."

"Don't you ask her a word about it," cautioned the wife as she came down to him. "I guess Minnie's got something on her mind, but it hasn't none of your business."

"None of your business! I guess my own sister's affairs are none of my business, and see me any time she takes a notion, and that without writing ahead. What's on her mind, as high as I can make out, is about a young man. They are engaged, and they've had a falling out, and she's sorter run away from him to find out if he really cares for her."

"And she's got scared about it and has written him a letter to tell where she is," quipped the husband.

"Go on! It's probably a letter to her ma, though I didn't see it nor ask. I hope she didn't start for town. It's going to storm for sure, and she hasn't got one house on the road where she could find shelter. Look down the road and see if you can see any one."

It was the dim light of the girl and the scream she uttered when hit, that sent the man who was clinging to the roadside fence back into the highway. He bent over the unconscious form and picked it up and staggered back to the fence and followed it until he saw a sign, and found the gate of a farmhouse.

His lusty call for help soon brought out a man, and the senseless burden was carried into the house and received by a woman.

"I don't know who she is, but I found her on the road," explained the rescuer. "There is blood on her hair, and I think she was struck down."

"We'll do all we can," replied the man and woman together, but you mustn't look for much. We are mighty poor folks. We haven't got no camphor nor whiskey, and as for getting a doctor from town—it can't be done tonight."

The girl was carried into the only bedroom and laid on the only bed, and when her wet clothing had been removed, she was between the sheets, the woman got a cloth and a basin of water and washed away the blood and whispered to the stranger: "I don't think she's had hurt. She's just fainted away with the scare of it. When she opens her eyes I'll tell her to go to sleep, and she'll be all right in the morning."

"Do you think it's some young lady from the village?" asked the stranger of the farmer as they talked in whispers in the outer room.

"I don't believe they'd eat a single mouthful."

"At Bradley's there was hardly better than poobooose fare."

But the victim of the accident was no longer in bed, and the rescuer and the farmer folks looked at each other and smiled and whispered:

"Even if we had turkey and cranberry sauce I don't believe they'd eat a single mouthful."

"And when at last they could make their way to Turner's, and Uncle Bob Stuttered and Aunt Harriet cried for joy, Miss Minnie said in a way that was almost heartless:

"Why do you take on so? I never had such a lovely Thanksgiving in all my life!"

Starve to Gain Weight. The fat one who has been cut out of meals more will now rejoice. The best cure for thinness is to omit every other dinner. A man under such treatment by virtue of an up-to-date physician has gained at the rate of one pound a week. With Pyralis' diet service at Monahan, on which the claim is based, was the regular day service of the Church of England, and while it had no element of thanksgiving, the day can in no wise be regarded as a Thanksgiving day as such.

Affection by Proxy. "I find that my husband has been leaving the office by call me up every day and murmur terms of endearment. That's a nice way to fool his wife. He's been going to the ball game."

Value of a True Friend. A true friend is best known in an adverse state. We know not whom to trust till after trial. There are some that will keep us company while it is clear and fair who will be gone when the clouds gather. That is the only friendship which is strong or than death; and those the friends whose fortunes are embroiled in the same bottom—who are received or rejected as much as the mode of change.

MISS SABINA PENNELL counted the turkeys in her flock. Not that she expected to discover that she had any more or less than she had the day before. But for a month she had counted those turkeys, estimated what they would bring in the market, and vainly endeavored to make that sum equal the amount she needed to pay the interest on the mortgage held on her little place by Elijah Green.

Elijah was the local money lender and note shaver. When Elijah had concluded the preliminaries of a loan with you, you began to realize why he was rich. He could bind you to more different impossible agreements than any one else. Elijah owned farm after farm—all the result of his shrewdness in the money-lending lines to shuffling notes, he was credited with cutting out everything but the date and adding that to his discount.

When he induced Miss Sabina Pennell to borrow five hundred dollars from him and to give him a mortgage upon her little place, he had really acted more decently than ever before. He did not want Sabina's place. What he wanted was Sabina herself. He had proposed to her—proposed in about the tone and with about as much sentiment as he usually manifested when he offered to lend one-third the value of a farm for a mortgage on the whole thing. Sabina had refused him, promptly.

She had refused him several more times, and then Elijah apparently resigned himself to his fate. But he never Sabina's circumstances; he knew that when her father died and left her entirely alone in the world she would get into debt. So he kept track of her debt, which was not a hard thing to do, as every dealer in the town was a debtor of his.

At the psychological moment he offered to lend her five hundred dollars, secured by the mortgage. He pointed out to her that he didn't need the money for his own use, and that so long as she paid the interest on it she need never bother about repaying it.

"It's just getting that much money out at interest, for me," he smiled. "And it will relieve you of worry over what you may do with the money you want your place and make it pay you."

When Sabina signed the mortgage notes and received Elijah's check she had her first almost-tender feeling toward him. And when she took it to him and asked him to give her a little more time to get the interest, he had been really affected by his generous agreement.

"Don't let it worry you a minute, Sabina," he said. "I'll be sure to see that you can. I don't consider it a real business matter—between me and you, you know."

But now Sabina owed him ninety dollars, just for interest alone. Now Sabina was not the conventional maiden lady in reduced circumstances. She was not a beggar, thin, weebone woman of uncertain years, eking out an existence. She was just twenty-five years old, neat and pretty, and it took all she made teaching school to keep her. She had relied on her father's pay for the interest at least. How in the world she should ever pay the principal of the mortgage had not occurred to her.

But Elijah, with ninety dollars interest coming to him, was not the Elijah who had so generously loaned her the money. Elijah was toiling her that times were hard and money was close, and although he hated to do it, he simply had to have money to meet his own obligations. He had thought of buying up a whole lot here and there and making a little speculation out of it, but he had no money. "That's the best I can to raise the money," he said. "I've got to have forty-five turkeys, and when I sell them—"

"But forty-five turkeys won't bring you over sixty dollars," Elijah said. "You'll get about ten cents a pound for them, and mighty few of them will weigh more than twelve pounds."

Sabina looked out into the orchard, where her turkeys were strutting about. Elijah leaned toward her and said: "I've been having your mind, Sabina?" he asked.

"Changed my mind? About what?" "About marrying me." "I've got Sabina turned to him, with her eyes flashing.

"And now you want your money back because you love it," she said, coldly.

Elijah arose, with an air of grossly injured innocence. "After such an insult as that," he said, "you cannot expect me to consider the mortgage a personal matter, or one between friends. I shall have to place it with my attorney unless you make a satisfactory settlement by—by Thanksgiving day."

"This with a malicious glance toward the turkeys, which were pursuing the even tenor of their way, little thinking of the part they were playing.

Elijah got as far as the door, then turned. He saw Sabina looking hopelessly out of the window. "Sabina," he said, softly, "I didn't mean that. I don't want to hurt your feelings. I want to make you happy. Haven't I shown you how much I think of you?"

"Yes," she replied, "five hundred dollars worth, with interest."

Elijah slammed the door as he went out. At the gate he met Jethro Jones, who was turning in.

"Good morning, Elijah," Jethro said, cheerfully. "Trying to cut me out?" "Eh?" growled Elijah, hurrying on.

So it came that when Sabina opened the door for Jethro he eyes were red and his face was pale. Jethro's prompt inquiry as to what was wrong was answered by a tumultuous account of the whole affair.

"But you expected your turkeys to pay the interest?" Jethro smiled. "Yes," faltered Sabina.

"Well, excuse the language, but darn Elijah's skin and his skin game, too! I wish there was a way for you to trip him up."

Jethro sympathized with him on the other statements and remarks having to do with the turkeys or the mortgage or Elijah Green, but he did not find Sabina any more responsive than she had been to Elijah. In fact she was not even as responsive. She pointed out to Jethro that if she married him people would say he simply took her out of pity because she had lost her home. Jethro went away marveling greatly at the unreasoning powers of women.
