THE FACINATING WIDOW Julian Eltinge in The Fascinati Widow is the attraction at Parsons Theater tonight and twice tomorrow, The story of "The Fascinating Widow" is interesting. Hal Blak (Julian Eltinge) outwits a dissenting daughter, Margaret Leffingwell. Hal, a junior in college, and in training for he fall intercollegiate athletic meet, is spending the last few days of his summer vacation at a hotel in the Adirondacks. Here it is that the mother o smokes, uses slang and goes fishing on Sundays, is not a fit person to become member of her exclusive family. She much prefers a very studious young man, whose character of virgin white ness, and whose career as a student has shown that he possesses the real qualifications to make a girl like Margaret happy. The first struggle between the two rivals, Blake and Oswald, ends in a pitched battle, in which Blake delivers a knockout blow that puts the studious Oswald down for the count.

This starts a train of trouble for Blake, as he is persuaded that to have struck a man who wears glasses is an offense that means imprisonment; He confronted by a dilemma, one o which means to run away and lose his chances of winning the girl, and the other that he remain and be taken into custody by the detective who is immediately out on his trail. Blake deeldes to masquerade as "The Fascinating Widow," borrowing clothes from a lady who lives in a nearby hotel, and dists the services of Tuthill Leffing-
