The distance from Hariford to Manchester, or rather the terminus at South Manchester, is 9.38 miles for which a f re of fifteen cents is charged, while the distance from Hartford to Rockville is 17.059 with the privilege of a "ride in the neighborhood of 23 miles, is but twenty cents.

When we show up the inequalities in the fares charged on the trolley lines, so far as Manchester is concerned the trolley company say those fares were members in existence when they took over the lines and that is the reason why they sti!' mainta'n the old rates.

TEN-CENT FARES ELSEWHERE

Is that any argument against our claim for a reduction, when the trolley company itself, since taking over the tr liey lines of the state, has opened up several new lines, running into towns a great deal smaller than Manchester and with practically no industries in them as compared with Mancheeter, yet equally distant from Hartford, where the Connecticut Company have fixed the fare at len cents, a rate five cents lower than Manchester
