..COST SALE.. For The Next Ten Days

We will give the people of Manchester a chance to purchase seasonable goods as cheap and in some instances cheaper than we placed them in our store. The warm open fall and early winter compels us to make this sacrifice in order to get ready money. A few of the many bargains are quoted below, but to appreciate the real values you will have to call and look-over our stock. Remember all the goods in our store are fresh, new and up-to-date, all of last Fall's purchases.

There must be somebody in Chicage who remembers Luther B. Little. There is no danger of hurting Little's feelings in saying that when he startper on his ever getting to the front, writes Frank H. Brooks in the Chicago Tribune. It wasn't intuition that pointed out New York to Lother Littile. He went to the metropolis blind-folded. When he couldn't get what he wanted he took what he could get. he wanted he took what he could ge.
One day he heard the boss say to the sub-bass, "Fire the man who did this."
The sub-boss replied, "The man who did this is not to blame. He did it the way I told him." Little said to himself, "This is no place for me."

His intuition told him there ought to be a place somewhere for a man who believed in the square deal. He walked out of the shop not knowing

"Yes, ma'am, I've been over there, but they're not working for the hospital; they're making sand-bags for fortifications."

"And where are you from?"

"Tm a Louisians Tiger, ma'am," answered the man proudly.

"You don't look much like it now," said the woman, smiling.

"No, I guess the lamb is more like me now, but just wait until I get well enough to go to the front again," admitted the soldier cheerfully.

At this moment one of the ladies who had been working in the other room came in carrying a small packet of bandages done up in a coarse brown paper.

"Ob, Miss Kittridge," said Mrs. Var.

"Miss Kittridge," said the girl, "I have something very important to tell mother, and—"

"Miss Kittridge smiled back at her.

"I am going right away, honey. There is lots of work for us to do and—"

"You don't mind, I hope," said Edith Varney, calling after her as she went into the hall.

From time to time, the attentive ear might catch the roll, the roar, the reverberation of heavy sound like distant thunder-peals intermingled with sharper detonations. The flashes came from great guns, and the rolling peals were the sound of the cannon, the detonations explosions of the shells. There was the peace of the shells. There was the peace of the distant guns and vexatious tears as he stamped his foot in futile protest and disappoint ment.

The noise made by the passing cannon soon died away in the distance. Opens Tomorrow, Sat. Jan. 18, and Continues to Feb. 1

For the next two weeks our three stores at HARTFORD, SOUTH MANCHESTER and WILLIMANTIC will combine in the greatest piano sale of the year. January is a slow month with most piano dealers. People have spent their surplus money during the holidays and do not feel like buying. So, it is the policy of many stores to curtail expenses and wait. Our position is different. Other dealers hire their tuners, their polishers, their delivery men and teams. We employ regular men the year round on a salary basis. We cauno: a fford to pay them for nothing. Somehow or other, we must keep the machinery moving. So, we have our Mid-Winter Piano Sale. This sale means just this to you sometime you are going to buy a piano. If you will give us your order now instead of five or six months from now, you can save from $25 to $40. There is no string attached to this offer and no reservations whatever. You help us swell this months sales and we'll help you to own your piano right.
