

A Young Man's Fancy

In Spring a Young Man's Fancy Turns to Light Clothes. They Are Here in All Their Neanness

A MOST important requisite is style thought. Clothes of homely virtue can be guaranteed for service—the greater consideration today is, after all, STYLE—We harp on it, we sense it and know its importance to Young Men and Men of Youthful Figure.

Feature Attraction Coming

On Tuesday evening next week Guy Brothers Celebrated Minstrels will be the attraction at the Park Theatre and it is so close to depend on to please the patrons. Mr. George R. Guy always carries a first-class production, and this season will retain the name two years ago. This company is the oldest on the road, its making the thirty-ninth year of continued success. The minstrel shows of today are made up to last one year, while Guy Brothers will live forever, as they always have a clean, refined and wholesome performance, and one which you can go to and enjoy a good hearty laugh. Thirty-five people are carried to make the company complete, and they are the best of soloists, musicians, acrobats, jugglers, dancers and comedians in the business. Every act will be new this season. The minstrel show and the first put up by Guy Brothers' famous Silver Concert Band and Orchestra is always of the very best quality. Don't miss seeing this attraction next Tuesday evening. Secure your reserved seat tickets now at the Theatre Box Office. They don't last long.
The electrical effects of address delivered in the Center Congregational church E. S. Eis will speak at the regular seven o'clock service next Sunday evening. He will discuss "The Press, One of the Safeguards of American Liberty."
Sunday morning Rev. Dr. George W. Reynolds will have for the theme of his sermon, "How Can God Work Out His Plans in the Lives of the Children When the Fathers and Mothers Are At Cross Purposes."
W. C. T. U.
The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. which was to have been held in the parlors of the South M. E. church next Tuesday afternoon has been postponed to Tuesday afternoon April 8th. At that time Mrs. Liza K. Fuller, editor of the White Ribbon Banner will be present and address the meeting.

SOUTH M. E. CHURCH

Some Interesting Facts Presented at End of Church Year

Rev. E. Ellis left for New Bedford, Mass. the seat of the present session of the New England Southern Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church this morning. Among the interesting items that the report of the local church will present will be the fact that 61 persons have been admitted into full membership this year and 25 on probation. Five members have died: Mrs. Ann Agard, Mrs. Charlotte Holmstrom, Mrs. Clarissa Church, Mrs. Hannah Cobb, Mrs. Hattie L. Stanley.

The membership roll of the church has been revised and notwithstanding the address the number enrolled will be smaller than was reported last year. There are 496 full members, 9 of whom are non-residents, and 49 probationers, making a total of 505. 27 children have been baptized and 6 adults.

The Sunday school enrollment in all departments is 745. The average attendance for the regular school has been 300, an increase of 20 over last year and an increase of 40 to the last two years. The Epworth League has a membership of 212. The Junior League, 74. The total missionary offering of church, Sunday school and women's societies equal $968. The total benevolence offering for the year has been $178,000. The pastor has made 1278 calls, officiated at 22 funerals and performed the marriage ceremony 19 times. At the conference the pastor will have duties on the Board of Examiners, Board of Conference Historians and its chairman of the committee on Federation of churches. Mr. Ellis will be entertained in Fair Haven, just across the million dollar bridge, where he was pastor for six years.

High School Notes

Stanley W. Channing's former teacher of physics and chemistry in this high school, but now of Barre, Vermont, spent a few days here this week visiting his friends. He is well pleased about the conference decision to accept this request.

Robert F. and Mrs. Phiney of Middleboro, Mass. and Rev. Jason F. Thurston of Harnoy, Maine are guests at the South Methodist parsonage. Esther Victoria Thurston, daughter of Rev. Mr. Thurston was graduated at the High School here last evening.

A single call for the doctor in case of sudden illness for instance may offset the charge for telephone service for years.

Money Freely Given for Torando, Flood and Fire Sufferers

People hereabouts are giving generously of their means to help in bringing substantial relief to the sufferers from torando, flood and fire in the Western states and the end is not yet in sight. Each day brings its quota of contributions. The money is all turned over to Clarence G. Watkins, local representative of the Red Cross Society and promptly forwarded to the places where it is sure to do the most good.

The Manchester Business Men's Association sent out a printed appeal for cash last Saturday and money has been steadily flowing in since. ELLEN OF NEW ENGLAND

A Railroad President Who Combines the Practical Operator and the Financier.

The Story of the Evolution of a Clerk in a Small Railroad Office into the President of a Great System.

There are two types of railroad presidents more or less familiar in this country. One is that of the practical operating president, a man who has come up from the ranks of railroad operatives to head a big system and who leaves the delicate problems of railroad finance to be worked out largely by others while he runs the road. The other type, evolved in the last quarter century, is that of the financier-president whose environment has been almost wholly that of the world of finance and whose mind as president is almost entirely occupied with the financial phase of the transportation problem. Such a man was Charles S. Melton.

CHARLES S. MELTON.

Nobody who knew Melton at the time that he was a clerk in the little railroad office in Concord doubted that he would eventually make of himself a pretty good practical railroad man, but there aren't many of his friends who think the financial genius which has made him such a marked figure in the transportation world. It was this latter side of his character which has made him a great success in the railroad world. It was not long before he began to show that in addition to being a remarkable traffic expert he could be a wonderful financial manager as well.

First he built up the Boston and Lowell, while holding the job of general superintendent. Then he went to the Union Pacific to become assistant manager and finally general traffic manager, and then he came back to the East and as general manager built up the old New York and New England road.

By 1892 this New England boy, who had started on a railroad when just after he got through high school, was made vice president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford in 1897. Concord friend, Charles Nichols, once asked him to write in his autobiography. In that album, which is still preserved, he wrote that his favorite character in history was Napoleon I. The trait of character he detected in each was "audacity." In those answers this transportation master of the day was reflected. A Napoleon in the Service

Arrived dressed to the door, and... Puffy nestled himself with the clicking instruments. After a few minutes conversation with the orderly...

"I am greatly obliged to you, Miss Varney," returned Arrolford. "I was about to follow when he caught sight of a messenger entering the room. Leaving the window, he retraced his steps."

"Where did you come from?" he asked abruptly to the young man. "War department, sir," "Carrying dispatches."

"You know me, don't you?" "Yes, sir."

"I have been department business," said Arrolford. "All you have to do is to keep quiet about it. Where's your stop in the hall?"

"I have been in the hall," said the president that had to be delivered to Lieutenant Varney. "Don't mention having seen me to anybody under any pretext and stay here. You might be wanted."

"With that," Arrolford stepped out onto the balcony through the window, which he closed after him, and he and Edith disappeared from view.

"The room which had been the scene of these various collisions was silent save for the continuous clicking of the telegraph keys. Presently two messengers came back and took their positions as before."

"Hard on their heels entered Captain Thorne. He came down the street to the department now, sir."

"Where has he been since he left Mrs. Varney's house?" "He went to his quarters on Carey street. We got in the next room and watched him through a spy hole."

"What was he doing?" "Working on some papers or documents."

"You said you had an order, sir," returned Foray slyly. "Yes, you," replied the secret service man, "I have an order from the order on the table, there it is, don't waste time."

"But Lieutenant Foray was not satisfied, principally because he did not wish to be scrutinized by the order, and with great distaste at the contents. It was quite evident that if he could have found a way to take away a battery or a brigade from some vital point, the situation would gladly have done so. His indignities were entirely with Miss Varney."

"I suppose you are Mr. Benton Arrolford, all right?" he began deliberately, regarding the paper. "Certainly I am," returned Arrolford haughtily.

"We have to be very careful now, sir," continued Foray shortly. "But I reckon it's all right. Here's the order."

"Did the girl seem nervous or excited when she handed this in?" "Not at all," returned Arrolford. "Devoim miss Miss Varney?" asked Foray reproachfully.

"Yes, she did."

"Was she anxious not to have it?" "Anxious? I should say so. She didn't even want me to see it."

"Where am I to go?" she asked. "Outside here on the balcony," said Arrolford. "There is no closet in the room, and it is the only place. I will be with you in a moment."

"But if he should come to the window?" "We will step in at the other window. Stay, orderly, see if the window is closed."

one on any account. You understand?" "Yes, sir," said Foray from the telephone table in the center of the room.

He had caught something of the conversation, but he was too good a soldier to ask any questions, besides his business was with the telegraph. "I've accepted your invitation, you see."

"I am greatly obliged to you, Miss Varney," returned Arrolford. "I was about to follow when he caught sight of a messenger entering the room. Leaving the window, he retraced his steps."

"Where did you come from?" he asked abruptly to the young man. "War department, sir," "Carrying dispatches."

"With that," Arrolford stepped out onto the balcony through the window, which he closed after him, and he and Edith disappeared from view.

"The room which had been the scene of these various collisions was silent save for the continuous clicking of the telegraph keys. Presently two messengers came back and took their positions as before."

"Hard on their heels entered Captain Thorne. He came down the street to the department now, sir."

"Where has he been since he left Mrs. Varney's house?" "He went to his quarters on Carey street. We got in the next room and watched him through a spy hole."

"What was he doing?" "Working on some papers or documents."

"You said you had an order, sir," returned Foray slyly. "Yes, you," replied the secret service man, "I have an order from the order on the table, there it is, don't waste time."

"But Lieutenant Foray was not satisfied, principally because he did not wish to be scrutinized by the order, and with great distaste at the contents. It was quite evident that if he could have found a way to take away a battery or a brigade from some vital point, the situation would gladly have done so. His indignities were entirely with Miss Varney."

"I suppose you are Mr. Benton Arrolford, all right?" he began deliberately, regarding the paper. "Certainly I am," returned Arrolford haughtily.

"We have to be very careful now, sir," continued Foray shortly. "But I reckon it's all right. Here's the order."

"Did the girl seem nervous or excited when she handed this in?" "Not at all," returned Arrolford. "Devoim miss Miss Varney?" asked Foray reproachfully.

"Yes, she did."

"Was she anxious not to have it?" "Anxious? I should say so. She didn't even want me to see it."

"Where am I to go?" she asked. "Outside here on the balcony," said Arrolford. "There is no closet in the room, and it is the only place. I will be with you in a moment."

"But if he should come to the window?" "We will step in at the other window. Stay, orderly, see if the window is closed."

"Well, you know how it is. They generally whip around quite a while before they make up their minds what they want to do. I don't expect that will trouble you much. It's quite as simple as a church door in the good night."

captain. Goody. I will be back as soon as the president gives me that dispatch. That dispatch is very important. It will be in the center of the office, but it can wait until the morning."

"All right," said Thorne, at the next moment the operator turned away while the clicking of the key called Thorne to the table. He took him but a few minutes to write the brief message which he addressed and turned to the first messenger. "Quartermaster General."

"He wasn't in his office a short time ago, sir," said the messenger. "Very well, find him. He has probably gone home and he has to have this message."

"Very good, sir."

"The key kept up its clicking. In a short time another message was written on the table."

"Ready here," cried Thorne, looking at the other messenger. "This is for the secretary of the treasury, marked private. Take it to his home."

"He was down at the cabinet now."

"That is very kind, I am sure. In this emergency, I am sure that you will find it in me to do my duty. I will be glad to have the pleasure of having him in here and having a charming time."

"The third party answered the question, for Edith Varney came through the window with the shattered pane through which Arrolford had fled. She was dressed in the most elegant and beyond measure by her arrival, not the slightest suspicion that she could have been in the room."

"She had been an eyewitness to the scene. She had seen Arrolford enter the room, and she had seen him take the dispatch. She had seen him take the dispatch. She had seen him take the dispatch."

"I don't wish to stay here any longer," she said. "I will be glad to have the pleasure of having him in here and having a charming time."

"I will be glad to have the pleasure of having him in here and having a charming time."

Pittsburgh Perfect

The long-standing popularity and ever-increasing sales of "Pittsburgh Perfect" Poultry and Garden Fence prove its great superiority beyond the shadow of a doubt. It is stretched around the largest chicken ranches in the country; and the breeders of purest, prize-winning birds, as well as modest poultry raisers, use it in preference to all others.

Electrically Welded at the Joints provide a fence fabric of greatest strength. Dogs, hogs, horses, cattle or wild animals cannot squeeze through, while the wire is so close where needed that the smallest chickens cannot squeeze through. It is impossible to separate THE WELD THAT HELD.

Ferris Brothers

The "Single Damper" in Crawford Ranges

is the greatest improvement ever made in stoves. By one motion it regulates fire and oven—push the knob to "Kindle", "Bake", or "Check"—the range does the rest. Better than two or more dampers. Have you seen it? This Single Damper is patented—no other range has it.

The deep Ash Hod—instead of the old clumsy ash pan—with Coal Hod inside it (patented) is easy to remove—doesn't spill ashes.

Gas ovens if desired; and [single] or elevated [double].

Reconstruction of a Heart Not Always Painful

BY KATHERINE HOPKIN. "It isn't my heart so much as my pride that is hurt, but either way, it means a great deal to me. I had a heart operation, and reconstruction is always painful," thought Judith Cameron as she looked down at her new ringless third finger, where for seven long years, Don's diamond had sparkled.

They had been classmates in college, and had become engaged the summer after their graduation. The following fall, Judith had accepted a position to teach in the high school of her home town, and Don had entered law school. Both were determined to make a career of it.

Whispering arose a discussion as to what they had better do. At last, only in spite of his own opportunity, Don had fallen, as yet, to make good.

At the end of seven years of patient waiting, Judith was forced to admit that he lacked true ambition and the usual elements that make for success. It was a fact, more than the rumors of his surreptitious attentions to the pretty, frivolous student of his law partner, that caused Judith to suggest breaking their engagement.

Shortly after this, through the influence of friends in Oklahoma City, Judith was offered a position as teacher of science in a small town, which was an environment, she decided to accept.

"But I'm afraid I chose an unfavorable time to come as far as seeing the country is concerned," she thought as she rubbed the perfume from her forehead and peered anxiously out at the wooded landscape. "It looks as if it will be a long time before I can get some breakfast here."

As Judith was going down the steps, she stepped on the track toward the creek, and the water splashed over her. She was already half-way submerged here and there, on some high elevation, above the ruins of a cotton gin, and occasionally, a perliminium tree lifted its fruit-laden branches out of the sea of water, like a spectral Christmas tree.

With a sigh, Judith turned away from her crash, and into the room poured the guard. The grizzled old sergeant had scarcely stopped inside the room when Thorne shouted in tones of the fiercest authority, pointing at Arrolford.

"Arrest that man!" Before the dazed secret service agent could say a word or press the button, the soldiers were upon him. "Get in here with a revolver," continued Thorne more quietly, "and is playing ball with it. Hold him fast!"

The game appeared to be up this time. Mr. Arrolford held all the cards, and he was playing them skillfully. He ground his teeth against the thought that the moment and the order would have been sent probably beyond recall. Fate had turned on a second night, and he was thrown him at the last move, and Arrolford had so contrived that his fingers were before the button. He had scarcely made a dot when a dash when there was a sudden bang, and the sound of an explosion, that of a heavy revolver, scarcely realized at the time that he had been hurt.

Arrolford fell back by the window, glancing out on the square, but keeping Thorne under close observation. The evil look in his eyes as the mangled sinner on his life wall seconded the expression of triumph in his face. He had the man he hated.

"You had better wait a little while before you make a move," said Thorne, "I will be with you in a moment."

"But if he should come to the window?" "We will step in at the other window. Stay, orderly, see if the window is closed."

"Well, you know how it is. They generally whip around quite a while before they make up their minds what they want to do. I don't expect that will trouble you much. It's quite as simple as a church door in the good night."

WORLD'S RECORD MADE IN CONSTRUCTION OF THE MARVELOUS PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION

All Nations Eagerly Awaiting the Opening of the Panama Canal and the Splendid Celebration in 1915. An Army of Workmen Erecting Palaces by the Golden Gate—Vast Exhibits of All Nations to Be Completely Installed Long Before Opening Day.

Greatest Live Stock Shows in History—Chorus of Trained Singers of the World—International Military Competitions—Pageants of Nations of the Orient—Are Among the Striking Features. Final Details of Most Magnificent of Universal Expositions.

By HAMILTON WRIGHT.

It is an organization and a plan of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition will surpass the most marvelous exhibition of America and Europe. The shifting of trade routes that have caused for centuries the opening of new fields of traffic are anticipated in every financial center in the world. In that small strip of land known as the Panama canal zone, ten miles in width and forty-seven miles long from ocean to ocean, there is being constructed a work that will more profoundly revolutionize the world's trade than any national achievement within the life of the American people. The opening of the Panama canal marks an epoch in the life of mankind upon this earth. The name of Colonel George W. Goethals, administrator of the canal zone, and Imposing Facade of Machinery Hall, the Largest Building at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, 1915.

Colonel Gorges, sanitarian, must be included among the important figures in the history of the United States in shortening the voyage between San Francisco and New York by 8,000 miles, opening up the Pacific coast of North and South America to the profitable commerce of the European nations and rendering possible direct commerce between the orient and the Atlantic coasts of the United States and South America. Every citizen, territory and colonial possession of the United States will share in our increased national prosperity. Every citizen of the world will greet the millions of visitors from all parts of the world on all phases of the exposition as an achievement that even at this time it is possible to outline definitely a picture that will greet visitors in 1915.

The gates of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition will be opened to visitors from all parts of the world on Feb. 20, 1915, but development on all phases of the exposition is so far advanced that even at this time it is possible to outline definitely a picture that will greet visitors in 1915.

The exposition will be held in the rapid construction of the exhibit palaces to accommodate the displays of exhibitors. Just inside the Golden Gate and upon a charming site that extends for almost three miles along the shore of San Francisco, there is a vast army of workmen engaged in erecting a city of palaces designed by an architectural commission comprised of a number of America's foremost architects. There will be four hundred and thirty buildings, each constructed by the exposition management. In addition to the pavilions to be built by the states and nations, and the structures that will be built by concessionaires in the amusement district, at the western end of the "Millions" is a vast city of buildings, each constructed by the exposition management. TELEGRAPH ROLE OF CRYSTAL

Streets in French City Paved With Glass Blocks Also Assorted in Give Satisfaction

The increasing uses to which crystal has been put are little short of marvelous. In Lyons there are many streets paved with glass blocks, these being adapted so perfectly that water is not able to pass between them. It is said that the glass pavement has a greater resistance than stone, it is cheaper and more easily portable, and it offers neither interstices nor hot spots where men can lodge.

In Germany, near Frankfurt, there is a factory for the manufacture of crystal telegraph poles. In order to give better solidity to the crystal mass of the poles they carry a framework of thick wire. These poles are better than wood because they perfectly resist the attacks of insects and are impervious to atmospheric influences.

Dresses made of crystal thread have been known for some time. Dresses of spun crystal have a brilliancy like silk. Curtains, carpets, mantles, and relatively fine textures made of crystal, made of crystals, while factories are going up in various parts of western Europe for the manufacture of this industry—Earpore Weekly.

SILK GROWERS IN COMPLAINT

Manufacture of Artificial Silk is Bitterly Resented by French Dealers in the Real Trade.

The silk makers of France are waging an unrelenting battle against the makers of artificial silk, which was introduced last year to the amount of 6,000,000 kilos (a kilo is 2.2 pounds) according to the Berlin chamber of commerce.

The better grades of this artificial silk sell for $2.50 to $3.00 a kilo, while the lower grades are sold at less than $1.50. On the other hand, real silk costs at least $3.00 a kilo to the manufacturer.

The effect of this competition is shown by the falling off in the production of the silk grown in France. The raisers has declined since 1911 from 115,000 to 102,000, and the product has declined 40 per cent, to only 45,000 kilos.

Appeals to the law are being made by the silk growers who say that the use of the word "artificial" in connection with silk is not enough to protect them against ruthless competition.

Wedding Ring

Most people know that on the fourth day of the wedding ring is put on the finger of the first two fingers and the thumb were counted. All as fingers, and therefore as three. The thumb had to be the ring finger, and the second finger was the ring finger. The third finger was placed on the third finger, and the fourth finger was the ring finger. The wedding ring is the modern descendant of this old-time thumb ring and was removed to the fourth finger in this way.

The first three were named for the three persons of the Trinity, and at the word amen, after the naming of the three, the ring reached the fourth finger and was left there. In reality, the ring finger is the most perfect finger.

There is another and less pleasant origin, too, for the wedding ring. The old ring were the mark of bondage as well as of dignity.

The Kitchen Cabinet

SHOW me the plan, great! Building in this way. The first three were named for the three persons of the Trinity, and at the word amen, after the naming of the three, the ring reached the fourth finger and was left there. In reality, the ring finger is the most perfect finger.

There is another and less pleasant origin, too, for the wedding ring. The old ring were the mark of bondage as well as of dignity.

A FEW UNUSUAL RECIPES

Chocolate Cookies—Take a cupful of brown sugar, one-half cup of butter, one cup of flour, one egg and one-half teaspoonful of soda. Beat two cups of chocolate, add one and one-half cups of flour, a half cup of raisins, a half cup of nuts, mix well, drop by teaspoonful on buttered pans.

Bran Muffins—These are good for people troubled with constipation, and are often recommended by physicians. Beat an egg and add a pinch of salt, then a half cup of molasses, a cup of milk, two cups of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix well and bake twenty minutes in a hot oven. This makes a dozen muffins.

YVONNE

Didn't improve situation. There was a certain master of fox-hounds in one of the English shires who was greatly attracted by the work of a certain man who was a member of the household of the gentleman who invariably rode over the bounds. At one of the hunts the man was seen to slip to the awkward hunter and, in the most chilling tones, said: "Mr. So-and-so, there are two dogs in the pack today, Snip and Titter, which I am especially fond of and I would esteem it a favor if you would avoid killing or maiming them with your horse's hook." "Certainly, my dear fellow," replied Mr. So-and-so, "but as I do not know them I will be kind enough to put tags on them for me."

Master of Languages

Sir Charles Elliot, the first principal of Hong-Kong university, is forty-seven years old and speaks 25 languages. For many years he was in the diplomatic service and in every country to which he was sent he mastered the language, beginning with Spanish and ending with the Chinese. He is a native of London and was educated at Oxford but had not only a fluency in Latin but also a knowledge of the Greek and Hebrew. He is a member of the Royal Society and the Royal Academy of Sciences.
