ERTAIN audacities of the mode are most noticeable in costumes de signed for the street, or for traveling or general utility wear. Waist lines, for instance, are ignored; garments are cut without reference to of style when properly worn. They are not for the stout figure and it is ridiculous for heavy women to attempt them. But, for those who may affect them, they provide a very pleasing variety in gowning.

A good example of one of the boyish-looking models is shown in the traveling gown of covert or serge or ratine, for this style is developed in a great number of fabrics. It looks easy going and comfortable. The belt, of the same material as the gown, is drawn about the hips. The absence of shoulder seams provides an easy adjustment of the coat, and an easy readjustment, after one has lounged about in it. The skirt is provided with a very little draping and tailored with over apped seams. It is narrow and has a short split to the ankle, insuring free-When the coat is removed a light weight, washable silk waist is recaled and this is ornamented with some hand embroidery. The skirt fits

There are so many more graceful shapes designed for outing and traveling that there is no good reason why one should attempt the most severe of hats. But, with this hat, as with the gown, certain types wear the banded sailor particularly well. It is a neat, light, practical little hat, shading the eyes and protecting the head. Veils look well with it and they are provided in choose from. Washable veils of lace or bordered net or chiffon are to be worn with this gown and JULIA BOTTOMLEY. for the comfort of the wearer.

Can you give me the names of the writers of these three songs: "The Old Oaken Bucket," the "Marseillaise" and "Hail Columbia?" I should like to learn a little about these men too. "The Old Oaken Bucket" was the work of Samuel Woodworth (1785-Beautiful House and Barn, 10 acres 1842). The "Marseillatse," originally called the "Battle Hymn of the Army Other properties in all parts of Man- of the Rhine," was written by a young licutenant stationed at Strassburg-Rouget de Lisle. The story goes that the song was taken up by the Marseilles buttalion in its march on Paris So. Manchester and was thus introduced to France under a new name. De Lisle was born in 1769 and died 1836. The words of "Hail Columbia" are by Joseph NEW SHOES FROM OLD ONES Hopkinson (1770-1824).
