DAINTY DRESSES FOR HOT WEATHER

THE first is a pretty dress with an over-bodice and tunic of figured cotton crape; finely tucked net forms the underaleves and yoke of bodice. A little collar of plain material the same as skirt finishes the neck.

Materials required: 2½ yards 46 inches wide for tunic, 2½ yards to inches wide for tunic, 2½ yards to inches wide.

The costume at the right shows a delaine dress, which is white spotted with green. The skirt is quite plain, and the tunic is cut so that the border regain the front. The bodice matches this; strips of the border are taken down the outside of arm, and the collar is edged with it; green sath ribbon is taken round the unit, and a small bow of it finishes the neck.

Duncan, who very rarely came to hear was about as she made preparations to come west.

Now she was only one station away from Jimmy—now they were approaching Stampede Creek and Jimmy would be there waiting for her. That was the refrain of her thoughts.

The train hissed to a standstill and Helen gathered up her hand luggage and went to the platform. She saw unless he happens to remember it be home time. The train hissed down in a plint to the platform. She saw unless he happens to remember it be shirt, a box of collars, and some fishher trunks bumped down in a pile; fore then—then he will come tearing ing tackle, for he was going on a trip. she watched the train jerk out of Helen but her heart felt very full at it with that fellow? Helen's cheeks were pink now as she waited for the yellow buckboard and the spirited black horses to dash up to the station and make a sweeping curve before coming to a standstill beside the slender, graceful girl in black.

No, this was not Jimmy Hunneford who whirled the reins around the whipstock and jumped to the ground.
