The industry in which the corporation is engaged consists of quarrying the marble found in the laie of Purbock, a peninsular district of Donesthitre. Nearly 100 quarries are worked here, in what used to be a royal deer forest, and the whole of the industry is managed by a curious kind of trades' guild, entitled "The Ancient Guild of Purbock Marbiers."

All the marble belongs to the descendants of the original Purbock quarrymen who formed the guild, and no other person has any right in the quarries. None other is allowed to join the guild.

This peculiar guild has been in existence for many hundreds of years-probably, indeed, before the coming of the Normans.

mimple rules that govern it.

Putting our hearts into our work means putting happiness into our lives.

And the further we pursue this practice the more appreciative we become of the fact that success, after that poverty, bits and grinding to do with the many than the success, after all, is but the catching of our desires and keeping us with them.

To follow in companionship with our ambitions, forgetting ourselves in the hands of progress.

If men could only forget themselves and let their work is their sponsor, there would be less disappointment and more they work and their work to the suppointment and more happiness and good result.

How to Work All the Time.

My rules for being able to work all the time are:

When one interest flags, find a supply of molecular to the suppointment of the suppointment of the suppointment and more of desires.

Always keep on hand a supply of molecular to the suppointment of the suppointment

If digestion and assimilation are good the excess of starch is carried into the circulation and becomes the most prolific cause of so called colds, as well also as rheumatism, gout, lumbago, scintica, etc.

The excess of starch, above referred to, that is not passed into the circulation causes equally as much disturbance throughout the body as that ance throughout the body as that which is crystallized and digested. For example, too much starch, especially white flour products, outment, etc.

SOUTH MANCHESTER CONN. FRIDAY OCTOBER 31 1913

THREE CENTS

DAMAGED BY THE FIRE

NOW ON SALE

Our loss from the fire, thanks to the splendid work of the firemen, was not great. The greatest damage occurred on the second floor where the heat from the next building blistered the front of a number of dressers, chiffoniers and sideboards. The tops of others cere spotted by the water which came down from the fourth floor. This floor had to be dowsed to put out a fire which started in the finishing room. The water also started the veneers on several parlor tables and soaked the cushions of some parlor suites. The lace curtains on the first floor were dreuched as well as some of the portieres and couch covers. All of these goods have been put in the best order possible in so short notice and will be sold for what they will bring. Following is the list:
