PEACH LOUSE IS INJURIOUS All Trees Should Be Carefully Fum

Both standard and dwarf pears are desirable for planting. The advantage with the dwarf pear is that they come into bearing early, and never attain a great size, hence are well adapted to planting where the ground is limited. Then they usually come into bearing so early, two or three years after planting out, that savaral trops may be secured before blight kills the trees.

This insect derives its name from its intense black color and amooth, shining apeparance. A great deal of the injury done by this insect is not recognized by the grower, who may charge it to yellows, to applications made during the winter for other purposes, or to climatic causes. Where the insects are numerous on the roots the tree simply looks sick. The foliage is thin, imperfectly developed and light in color. The lice are expecially destructive to nursery trees

Combination of Clean Cultivation With Cover Crops Is Best Scheme.

(By PROF. WENDELL PADDOCK, Only Probably the best scheme ever devised for handling the majority of or-chard soils, where the lay of the land will permit, is a combination of clean cultivation with cover crops. This method includes the plowing of the land as early in the season as the weather will permit. The plow is followed at intervals, by the harrow, in order that the surface of the soil mabe kept mellow throughout the growing season. Of all breeds of hogs Poland Chinas are the most numerous, at least in the United States, and particularly so in the corn belt.
