Sim-ple pillars should either carry lights. vases or better still, bollow centers. or they should be finished by parts of walls abutting. They should never merely stand alone without use. A fraction of a wall on one or more sides, of full height against the pillar and stepping down by sharp degrees to the base would render them necessary to stop such winged buttresses, but pillars alone are abominations and blots on the landscape, no matter how ornate or whatever their style. Pruning Street Trees. Pruning of large street trees is often too long deferred. Cases are known where city governments have assumed control after trees had grown, unpruned, for a score of years. Naturally the officials look askance at the proposal to prune, yet sooner or later such work must be done, and the sooner the better. First, dead wood should be removed, and next all superfluous branches having abnormal positions or crossing others at unusual and undestrable angles. When this has been done each tree is in a condition where one can intelligently judge of the individual needs of each tree, for no two trees should have precisely similar treatment. Judicious pruning often stimulates to active growth and im-proved appearance of seemingly in-firm trees.

Peacants Keep Their Town Cleanest. The cleanest town in the world is said to be Brock, Holland. It is only a few miles from the capital and has been famous for its cleanliness from time immemorial. It is also notable on account of the fanciful style of its houses and yards and gardens and streets. The people, though only peasants, are well to do, and all feel a pride in their town. It seems to be their first business to keep their gar-dens in perfect order and their wards and streets as clean as a parlor.
