Well Done!

The concrete sidewalk which has been laid on the south side of Eldridge street has been carried across the Main street sidewalk at the Magnell property. This was done by clearing up the composition tar and pebble walk which had stood there for a number of years past. The old walk at the junction of Main and Eldridge streets on the east side of Main street was chamfered off to the street level. This proved to be very annoying to pedestriaus generally, but especially so in wet, slushy or icy weather. Many a one has occasion to remember the disagreeable experiences had at that point. Many passing down that grade by being hall with deilght its passing.

Protecting Terrace

Dr. W. R. Tinker has placed barberry hedge about his lawn at Main and Park streets. It will be recalled that the lawn was regraded this year at an outlay of considerable labor and expense and the property greatly improved accordingly. Dr. Tinker has been annoyed very much in the past by persons thoughtlessly trespassing upon his premises and mutilating the terrace there. It is with a view to preventing the recurrence of these annoying conditions that the hedge is being set in place. The sloping bank is very beautiful and should not be thoughtlessly or willfully defaced.

The fire alarm system was slightly disarranged by Wednesday morning's thunder storm but was easily readjusted as soon as the electricians turned to several occupations and places of business.

in the series of games between the two teams. The Athletics were the victors in a one-sided game by a score of 7 to 1.

By winning this game the Athletic series are now tied with the Talcott-villes, each nine having one game to its credit. Talcottville captured the opening game 6 to 5. In Saturday's contest Shields pitched strong ball and kept his hits well scattered. The Athletics landed on B. Smith, the Talcottville twirler in the first and second innings and drove in 5 runs. Smith was succeeded by Tedford and he held the Athletics to two runs in the next seven innings. Lightning is the result of electric discharges from the clouds, says the Electrical Experimenter in printing what calls "a thunderstorm primer." Every cloud, like every other object, contains electricity. This makes no disturbance so long as the quantity contained is normal. When the quantity becomes greater than normal the object is positively charged; when it becomes less than normal the object is negatively charged. The equilibrium of the electric force in the clouds is disturbed by evaporations from the South Manchester surface of the earth, by changes of emperature in the atmospheric vapor, by chemical action on the earth's sur-DR. Between the clouds is air, an excellent nonconductor, through which the electricity has to force a passage. The violence with which it does this produces the lightning and the accompanying crash of > Clouds are good conductors, while the air about them is a nonconductor; therefore the electricity accumulates in the clouds. It is probably this electricity which prevents the particles o water from uniting together and falling down in the form of rain.

Imagine two clouds near to each other in the sky, one positively and the other negatively electrified, for there cannot in all nature be such a condition as that of one body positively ex cited without the coexistence, of another body negatively excited.
