The brook trout is a nest builder, but Share of Bountiful Harvest The brook trout is a nest builder, but loss not belong to the group of fish which cares for its eggs and young. When the function of egg laying is completed and the nest covered with gravel the parent fish seem to feel that their whole duty has been performed, and they depart, leaving both eggs and the young when they are hatched to the care of nature, and nature, it must be confused, is generally neglectful of loss of the land here and later and here a

Early in autumn the mature brook trout in pairs seek the gravelly bottoms of shoals and spring runs. Here with none and fins they bollow out a shallow basin and make it scrupulously clean. This is their nest, and over the bottom the eggs are scattered, covered with gravel, and their duty to posterity is ended.

Only a small proportion of the eggs deposited naturally are fertilized, and many of these are destroyed by spawn eating fishes. Most of the tiny fish which do develop and succeed in punching a hole through the egg shell with ing a hole through the egg shell with their little tails and emerging into a watery world do so only to find quick enthusiastic and willing, and their independ to so only to mad quest independent in some larger fish.

encountered accidental atrokes and cracks that tantalizingly suggest a signature, though it can never be made definite. On the other hand, there have been remarkable cases of such marks, after careful study, resolving themselves into a famous name.

Sometimes the painter's name is most conspicuous as, for example, in Raphael's "Spoualisio" at Milan. Proud of having surpassed his master, the youthful genius wrote on a frienc in the very center of the canvas, "Raphael

Reynolds hardly ever signed his work. But upon the completion of the portrait of Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse, he wrote his name large on the gold embroidery of her dress. He was unable, he said, "to resist the temptation of sending my name to pos-terity on the bem of your garment."

CANCER IN THE FAMILY.

There is No Proof That the Dree Disease is Hereditary. Perhaps nothing causes more need-less worry than the fact that one of more persons in a given family have died from cancer. This is commonly taken as a proof that the disease is hereditary. This does not at all fol-low. There is probably no greater chance of inheriting cancer than there is of being killed by lightning or of breaking one's nick falling downstairs. Perhaps there are people who worry even about those contingencies, but the statisticians have shown that their relatives have succumbed to cancer fail to consider how widespread the disease is. A malady that causes one death out of every eight among women and one out of every fourteen among men over forty is fairly com-mon. On this basis it does not take times in some families.

The eminent statisticians, King and Newsholme, have pointed out that it does not prove heredity to show that in one family five deaths occurred from cancer. By the very of the disease and the laws of chance no one had ever suggested the idea of heredity.

In some species of animals it is believed a certain susceptibility to tumors may be inherited. But so far as human beings are concerned the foremost authorities believe that heredity in cancer may be regarded as a negligible factor.-Journal of the American Medical Association.

CIGARETTES are the mildest, purett and most delightful form of smokin But there's a difference in cigarettes, as in everything else. Yes, sir!

Over 20 years ago, down there in old Virginia where they all know what good tobacco is, a group of tobacco growers started out to please their own expert "smoke" tastes. They picked out perfect Virginia leaf-a pure tobacco, with a natural sweetness, mild and pleasant - and made it into cigarettes. And they called them PERFECTION CIGARETTES!

No wonder the news spread! No wonder traveling men, and all other men who know a good smoke when they taste it, stick to PER-FECTIONS! You get ten of these generous-sized cigarettes in a
