Powerful Protests Prevail

A storm of protest has been raised against the proposed changing of the R. F. Davis Oakey of Hartford, having his ear close to the ground and hearing the rumblings and murmurings of the disconcerted and himself to the office of Postmaster General Burdick at Washington, D. C. and remonstrated in behalf of his constituents against the change. As a result of the pressure exerted by our congressman the contemplated change in the R. F. D. routes has been deferred for at least one month, according to the reports from Washington. The people who are interested in this matter and who have spoken up the R. F. D. service from the South Manchester postoffice for their mail are faithful members, one who by his kindly disposition, quiet demeanor and honest and upright life had endeared himself to the brethren of this Court and to all who knew him.

A letter received at this office from the Citizen-Herald of Walden, N. Y. says "The News to assist in locating a young man named Nelson Talmadge Smith, who disappeared from his home town, Walden, N. Y., in the early summer of 1914, suddenly and strangely dropped out of sight and has never since been heard of. His mother, Mrs. Dorothy Smith of Walden, a hardworking and heart broken woman is trying hard to find her son. She understood that a chum of her son was employed in South Manchester and thought that perchance her boy might also be here to join his comrade. She was of the opinion that by publishing a notice of the circumstances in the columns of The News, if her son was located, he would hear of the distressed condition of his heart broken, lonely and widowed mother and return to her. Should any of our readers know of such a young man they will confer a favor by making the facts in the case known at this office where we will undertake to impart the necessary information to his eagerly expectant and greatly worried mother. When last seen Young Smith was in the company of Ernest Landry formerly of the town of Walden."

Inspector Keating began his duties at once for inspecting Camp Miles of Rockville and Camp Burdette of Hartford. He is a member of the American Legion Camp of New Britain next week. Inspector Keating is one of the very energetic and hard working members of Ward Cheney Camp No. 13 United Spanish War Veterans of this place. He enters into the duties assigned him with a great deal of zest and enthusiasm and never cries "halt" until his labors are completed. It is in recognition of these very desirable qualities that Department Commander Landry exalted Comander Keating to the dignity of deputy inspector.

Discuss Preparedness

A number of persons assembled at High school last Monday eve, in response to invitations sent out by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. The purpose of the meeting was to listen to discussions upon the subject of preparedness.

Commissioner George B. Chandler of Rock Hill took the affirmative side of the question and Dr. G. E. Heselgrave of South Manchester, the negative. Both speakers were introduced by Frank H. Anderson, president of the Chamber of Commerce. A number of ladies were seen in the audience.

Mr. Chandler was the first speaker and advanced his point of view most strongly, that preparedness was important for the United States at the present time.

He presented many of the stock arguments that are being disseminated all over the land by advocates of preparedness, all of which received his hearty commendation and approval.

Mr. Heselgrave, in supporting the negative side of the question, held that the United States had no need of any additional armaments or preparations for anticipated war. He contended that we prepare for war the more likelihood there was of our becoming involved with some foreign nation. He made a strenuous plea for world peace for the settling of all international disputes by means of arbitration. Both speakers agreed that in the event they expected sides of the question should be considered for the United States of America as a whole. Each speaker was given an opportunity to be heard in rebuttal. Both handled their subjects with ability and demonstrated the fact that they had delved deep into the question at issue. Each used many forcible arguments in defense of the position he was advanced.

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

A Story of Mountain Railroad Life

by FRANK H. SPEARMAN

Copyright 1916 by Frank H. Spearman

Novelized from the Moving Picture Play of the Same Name Produced by the Signal Film Corporation.

SYNOPSIS.

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad magnate on a scenic railroad, and George Storm, a newspaperman, prove a woman and Robert Seagrove, producer, form a trio. Helen's father, General Holmes, has just won the Superstition mine. Her father's wealth would allow her to work on the Tidewater. Helen recovers from the effects of the accident when Seagrove kidnaps her. Helen and Storm beg for right-of-way. Helen and Rhinelander plan to steal records to prevent Rhinelander, Storm and Helen from getting the mine. Owing to the opposition, the vein is relocated to Rhinelander. The vein is relocated.

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT

A FIGHT FOR A FORTUNE

A bright morning sun beat down in winter warmth on the Superstition mine. Near the mouth of the tunnel stood Amos Rhinelander, now sole owner of the property, which he had given to his foreman. The stormy letter plating the storm was sent to him. George Storm was waiting with Helen Holmes. It was the day after her hazardous flight down the aerial railway, but she looked as refreshed and charming as if she had never known the meaning of fear.

George Storm, her companion, stalwart and young, was disputing with Helen for the possession of a pocket knife he had flicked from her vanity bag. When Rhinelander approached, "I am afraid I do drop her," he said dryly, looking from one to the other.

Helen flushed the least bit. "Why, not at all," she disclosed. "We were only waiting for the team to come back from Valley."

"And you, it easier to wait to get home," continued Rhinelander, abashed. "However, we went on sparing the minister's embarrassment of the young couple. 'I've something to say to each of you.'"

They looked at him questioningly. He held two fingers in his hand. "Helen," he continued, "yesterday completed, I think, pretty thoroughly, my title to the Superstition mine. I never expect to get any stronger claim on a piece of property than I now have on the mine." He added, quickly, "my lot in the home cemetery after I occupy it permanently." In fact, his face lighted with a smile. "It looked awhile yesterday as if I shouldn't have any real use for that even though I had it."

"George," he said, speaking to Storm, "while we were trapped in the tunnel, the Superstition mine itself would be our last resting place. But while we were relocating that big vein, Helen, we were getting without the loss of a minute help necessary to make out alive."

"That is one reason," he went on deliberately, "why I have decided over night to convey to you, little girl, with my compliments and best wishes, a certificate for one-third the capital stock of the mine. He handed her a paper. "Here it is."

"George"—he turned to his assistant—"you, too, have stood by me at every turn of the road since I went into this cut-off fight. You lost your job with the Tidewater, I understand, because you could have got you reinstated—you know that, of course, I am the man in this property who has come over night. I wasn't suffering for money before I owned it. But I want the man who stands out in this country. I shall have to leave behind me when I go East, someone to represent my interests and to guard them. The man who stands out in this country is the man in the property who has come over night. I wasn't suffering for money before I owned it."

"I don't expect to spend all my life in this country. I shall have to leave behind me when I go East, someone to represent my interests and to guard them. The man who stands out in this country is the man in the property who has come over night. I wasn't suffering for money before I owned it."

"A man came up to Rhinelander with a letter. He opened the note and read:

Dear Mr. Rhinelander:
Please tell Helen Holmes to Lefty (but whose real name was Hyde), that she has been kidnapped by the police and that they are after her. She has been killed by her father.

The words says that maybe I will

Adams hurried up stairs to a lumber store above. Breaking precipitately on the proprietor, they pulled and hauled his stock about with small sense of responsibility. Evidently they wanted a bag, but they seemed to the shopkeeper hard to suit. "I was only after much hardware and may have words that Ward's end lighted on something such as he was looking for."

The dinner was paid on and lunched called. Rhinelander, taking Helen started for the dining car, but was watched by Ward. The waiter had been seated at a table near the entrance, at a table where Seagrove's men following took seats directly behind them. Rhinelander placed the handbag at his feet. Ward made no move until Rhinelander had seated himself with the bill of fare. While he was trying to tempt Helen with the various delicacies offered, Ward put his foot care against the wall, old Rhinelander's bag away with his toe, and unobtrusively the dummy leather bag into its place.

He turned to the telephone. Spike and Helen had reached the rooms at the hotel when Helen heard the ring of the telephone. She answered the call. Listening, dumfounded, she did not tell Spike what she heard, but with Seagrove's words ringing in her ears, she hung up the receiver. "Get the stock from the safety deposit box," he had directed, "and I will use that as temporary security until I can replace the money."

Seagrove shook his head. "No Mr. Rhinelander, he said slowly, "that won't do. I must have legal tender, and have it today, or our contract doesn't go."

He turned with his back to the wall, the fast moving car to the ground. Adams, when Helen pushed him over, had struck his head against an iron bar, and he lay on the car floor almost unconscious. Ward turned to him the minute Helen had gone. "I'm sorry, but we'll have to get out of here."

The knaves then coolly ordered their luncheons as it—somewhat hurriedly—and left the dining car ahead of the watchman.

Seagrove, in his apartment, was still staggered over the loss of what he had believed to be his fortune.

Rhinelander handed the letter to Helen. She stood deeply moved.

Seagrove, in his apartment, was still staggering over the loss of what he had believed to be his fortune.

When slackening speed warned him that the train was nearing Oceanside, they were in no hurry to start out. In fact, they lagged noticeably in their movements, and when the train dashed into the room, the twinkling of an eye the aspect of everything changed in Rhinelander.

The conscientious watchman recorded his loss in taking the property of a benefactor with the law still against him. The watchman had his way.

"Do you know what he said to us?" asked Helen to Helen, "we've got to do something."

Helen shook her head despondingly.

"It may seem millions," she claimed. "What can we do? in her distress she clasped her hands.

"I think I will draw the money from the bank account," said Rhinelander, studying the substance of the message.

Helen intervened. "Let me with you, she said, "you can start the search the minute he leaves the station, and I will go up with him to the morning post office."

Easiest: Abemarie Apartments, Oceanside:

Will make payment on time. In on the morning passenger.

Rhinelander assented, and, writing out an answer to Seagrove's message, read it to Helen before he gave it to the sergeant.

"The sergeant scratched his head.

"I am afraid I do not know him," he said dryly, looking from one to the other.

Helen flushed the least bit. "Why, not at all," she disclosed. "We were only waiting for the team to come back from Valley."

BEAUTY AND BRAINS LOCAL GIRL CHOSEN

The Beauty and Brains Contest, a nation wide enterprise, which, under the guidance of the World-Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, has been running for the past eight months in the Photoplay Magazine, is drawing to a close. Lillian Russell, one of the judges has made the first selection. She wants to find out whether there is sufficient executive ability in him to conduct the business in a profitable manner or not. He becomes an old man before making the final selection.

Miss Catherine C. Daley of the New Johnson Jack St., Manchester, one of the original candidates, was selected by Miss Russell and is one of the hundred who will enter the final elimination. The elimination is now going forward to select the eleven successful candidates.

Catherine C. Daley, when the contest originated was prevailed upon to send her photograph with the request that when the next elimination takes place with her she was selected as one of the hundred most likely subjects by Lillian Russell. The contestants called for an equal amount of brains and beauty. It was essential for the candidate to write a letter in her own hand writing, telling her reasons for desiring to become a film actress. The applicants, or candidates, were then grouped in the section of the country in which they lived and two candidates from every different section will be finally chosen.

Lillian Russell, Sophie Irene Loos, a noted New York society girl, has contracted with the Oris L. Adams Greater Shows, through Bill Ward, the general agent, to have their first celebration and the Adams Carnival Shows will furnish all the attractions for the week in the Adams Auditorium, June 16 and ending Saturday, June 17. This will no doubt be one of the biggest fraternal events in the history of South Manchester as the great parades and fun makers will be out in full boom.

The Loyalty Order of Moose have progressed very rapidly here in the last year and this their first anniversary will be the regular meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce. Beginning promptly at seven o'clock a cedar supper will be served. O. F. Toop and G. H. Miller will prepare the feast. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the art band, "The Tropicana". Club Action will be taken on two referenda from the National Chamber of Commerce. The first is on "National Defense", upon which ex-Senator William C. Cheney will make the report. The second will be upon the "Railroad Situation" with report by Prosecuting Attorney Charles R. Hathaway. John P. Cheney will discuss "The Dye Situation."

Hessgrave to meet in debate any citizen of the town who is opposed to Equal Suffrage was promptly accepted yesterday by our townsmen John M. Dempster. His acceptance of the challenge of the Equal Franchise League, to take place at 8 o'clock this evening, was a decided victory for the League.

Lillian Russell was leading lady, and assumed the role of "Tommy's Wife". Maurice Ferris represented a boyish Frenchman. Miss Edith Burdell and Thomas Grimes were also prominent in the play. Miss Burdell was leading lady, and assumed the role of "Tommy's Wife".

The pleasing three-act comedy "Tommy's Wife" was presented at Cheney Hall Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Girls Friendly Society of St. Mary's Episcopal church and directed by Mrs. Alice Anderson. Albert L. Dowey was "Tommy", a young artist, and leading man of the play. Miss Burdell was leading lady, and assumed the role of "Tommy's Wife".

The winning candidate will be announced throughout the country early in June.
